HINES FOUND GUILTY ON ALL 13 COUNTS IN RACKET TRIAL

New York City Jury Convicts Tammany District Chief of Having Been Paid Political Protector of Policy Gang.

MAXIMUM TERM COULD BE 27 YEARS

Bail Continued, Counsel Says He Will Appeal — Defendant Feels as If He Had Been Kicked — Dewey's Reaction.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—James J. Hines, district leader and a power in Tammany Hall councils for 26 years, was convicted tonight on all of the 13 counts of an indictment charging him with having given paid political protection to a gigantic policy racket headed by the gangster Dutch Schultz.

The jury, which had been out, including time for lunch and instructions, for two minutes short of seven hours, had heard State's witnesses declare Hines accepted $500 a week from the coffers of the $20,000,000-a-year racket for services in allegedly corrupting police and magistrates and took thousands more in tainted money for political campaigns.

The jury returned to the General Sessions courtroom at 7:23 p. m. and declared Hines guilty. As the court clerk enumerated each of the 13 counts, Leonard Hobert, foreman of the jury, intoned a monotonous "guilty" to each.

Before the jury filed into the room, Hines had moved back from his customary place at the defense table, and Capt. Thomas Fanning of the court police squad took up a position beside him. Hines' lawyer, Lloyd Paul Stryker, also moved to his side, with a glance of encouragement.

Hines gripped the rail in front of him until his usually pink hands showed a pallid white. Only two members of his family were in the courtroom—his eldest sons, James Jr. and Philip, former Harvard boxer.

Feels Like a Man Kicked.

"I feel like a man that has been kicked in the belly," the 62-year-old Democratic politician remarked after the verdict was read.

Judge Charles Nott Jr. set March 13 for sentencing and allowed Hines continued freedom until then under bail. The maximum sentence that could be imposed would be 27 years in prison—three years on the conspiracy count and two years on each of the felony charges. Stryker said he would file an appeal as soon as possible.

The end of the trial came with unexpected suddenness. The jury had seemed uncertain, having come back into the courtroom for instructions three times before returning a verdict. On its last visit, the jury inquired about the rules for corroborative evidence and, receiving a reply from Judge Nott, all nodded affirmatively. Then, within 15 minutes, they returned with the verdict. Evidently not expecting an early verdict, spectators had almost deserted the musty old courtroom in the Criminal Courts Building.

The jurors' last question obviously showed they were weighing the testimony of three confessed Schultz henchmen who had testified against Hines—men whom the defense had scathingly denounced as confirmed perjurers. They were J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, the Schultz lawyer; George Weinberg, who committed suicide, and Harry Schoenhaus.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, trying the most sensational case of his sensational career, nervously paced the corridors with his aides awaiting a verdict. He declared, though, he was confident of conviction. It was Hines' second trial, the first having ended in a mistrial last fall.

Judge Nott granted the continuance of the $20,000 bail, he said, because he planned a two-week vacation and "would not lock up anybody who would give bail to suit my private convenience."

Judge Nott said he was departing from custom in not committing the defendant, but remarked "it is a poor rule that does not allow for an exception," and that he was making the exception "not because it is Hines," but because of his need for a vacation and the offer of satisfactory bail. He granted the jury three years exemption from jury service and extra compensation for its "arduous" work, and said he thought

Trade Commission's Vigilance Over Things Americans Buy Has Become One of Its Biggest Jobs

Authority Given It Almost as Afterthought Is Employed to Stop False Claims for Articles Used From Cradle to Grave.

By RICHARD L. STOKES
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — The Federal Trade Commission on Tuesday will begin a review of its experience in law administration before the Temporary National Economic Committee, a fact calling attention to the campaign waged by this independent commission—particularly since it was furnished with new, sharp teeth by the Wheeler-Lea amendments of March 21, 1938—against misrepresentations potentially affecting every household, and ranging from "drugless" remedies for the nursery to "granite" tombstones and "everlasting" burial vaults.

The record includes "deceptive practices" and "misleading advertisements" covering almost every ill to which flesh is heir, from overweight to rheumatism and from baldness to athlete's foot. It comprises "false representations" as to silks and furs, silverware and stainless steel, washing machines and fruit flavors, mineral water and vitamins, chewing gum and electric organs, light fixtures and cosmetics, radio sets and sleeping powders, tooth washes and therapeutic belts and blankets. It touches on nostrums for dogs and "vibrating" perches for birds.

Established Under Wilson.

The Federal Trade Commission was established in 1914 as part of President Wilson's legislative program. It was designed primarily to stimulate foreign commerce and investigate infractions of anti-trust statutes. Almost as an afterthought the establishment was vested with an authority which has gradually absorbed an important share of its activities—that of compiling information and making inquiries concerning "unfair methods of competition" and "unfair or deceptive acts or practices" on the part of corporations in interstate commerce, except banks, railroads and packing houses.

This clause was interpreted to authorize scrutiny of newspaper and magazine advertising, and later of advertising matter broadcast by radio. By 1929, says the commission's latest report, "it had become apparent that false and misleading advertising in the periodical field was of such volume that it should receive specialized attention." Therefore a board to handle that problem was set up. It is known as the Radio and Periodical Division, and consists of three commission attorneys.

During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, the division scrutinized 129,075 advertisements in 524 issues of newspapers and 907 editions of magazines, and noted that 23,843 of these advertisements contained allegations "that appeared to be false and misleading." It examined the script of 490,612 commercial radio continuities, at the rate of 2905 pages each working day, and marked 22,959 advertising broadcasts for further study "as containing representations that may have been false and misleading."

Cease and Desist Orders.

From its beginning the commission was empowered to issue "cease and desist" orders, but these did not become final or carry a penalty until affirmed by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals. In some cases an order was found to have stood 10 years without becoming effective. The original act declared only "unfair practices of competition" to be unlawful, and it was discovered that injury to competitors was difficult and expensive to prove.

The Wheeler-Lea Act of less than a year ago provides that the commission's orders shall become final and conclusive within 60 days from date of service unless appealed by the respondents, declares that "deceptive acts or practices" are unlawful, authorizes fines not exceeding $5000 for violations of cease and desist orders after they have become effective, and specifically defines as illegal "the dissemination or the causing of the dissemination of false advertising of foods, drugs, devices or cosmetics."

One of the commission's favorite instruments, in less flagrant cases, is known as a "stipulation of facts," under which an offending advertiser-vendor is persuaded to sign a detailed confession of his misdoings and an agreement to sin no more. The motive of his surrender is generally to avoid the issuance of a formal accusation and to save expenses incidental to the trial of a complaint. Such a stipulation serves to bar the respondent from appeal proceedings.

Powers in Emergencies.

In emergencies of public interest, the commission may take a short-cut by applying to a United States District Court for an injunction. Fines may be reinforced by imprisonment when intent to defraud is proved, or when an advertised commodity is found to be dangerous to health.

During the fiscal year 1937-38 the

POST-DISPATCH WEATHERBIRD
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Official forecast for St. Louis and vicinity: Generally fair and warmer today and tomorrow.

Missouri: Generally fair today and tomorrow; warmer in west and north portions today and in south and east central portions tomorrow. Colder in extreme northwest portion tomorrow.

Illinois: Mostly cloudy today and tomorrow; light snow in east and south portions today and probably in extreme north portion tomorrow; warmer in south portion, colder in extreme north portion tomorrow.

Sunset, 5:50. Sunrise (tomorrow) 6:37.

This Week's Weather Forecast.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—The weather outlook for next week for the Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys: Frequent precipitation in north, generally fair in south; temperatures near to somewhat above normal.

YEAR'S HEAVIEST SNOW CONTINUES; 6.6 INCHES

Mist Glazes East Side Streets—Missouri and Illinois Highways Slippery.

Efforts to clear streets and highways in St. Louis and vicinity, after the heaviest snowfall of the season, continued last night. Snow began falling about 8 p. m. Friday and at 6 o'clock last night the measurement was 6.6 inches.

The Weather Bureau in the Federal Building recorded the snowfall as "continuous," although only a few flakes were in the air at mid-afternoon yesterday. It began snowing again last night, but no further measurements were reported.

A fine mist began falling in the vicinity of East St. Louis late yesterday, freezing as it struck the pavement. Highway crews sanded hills and curves. Cinders were spread at the principal intersections in East St. Louis.

As the snow packed on streets and highways they became slippery, impeding traffic. Hard-packed snow on county roads slowed automobiles to a crawling pace.

Mrs. Mabel Anderson, 1417 Palm street, and Mrs. Madeline Hays, 3935 Washington boulevard, were treated at City Hospital yesterday for leg fractures suffered in falls on icy sidewalks.

In Western and Southwestern Missouri the snowfall was six inches or more. In Illinois, highways near Chicago were extremely slick and the heaviest snowfall was in the central part of the State.

Except for cancelation of north-and-south flights, air line traffic at the Lambert-St. Louis Field virtually had returned to normal last night. Service to the Southwest was resumed after several flights had been canceled.

The city sent 380 men, 92 trucks and 20 snowplows out yesterday, endeavoring principally to clear main thoroughfares and intersections. Work of clearing, which will cost the city $5000 to $6000, probably will continue today. St. Louis County put cinder-spreading crews, four plows and five scrapers to work on main roads. Illinois and Missouri highway workers also were removing snow, but were hampered by the widespread coating and its softness and depth. The Public Service Co. operated 25 snowsweepers on trolley lines and had 30 trucks spreading gravel and salt.

LABOR ACT HEARING MARCH 10

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Chairman Thomas (Dem.), Utah, said today the Senate Labor Committee, would begin hearings March 10 on proposed amendments to the National Labor Relations Act.

ROOSEVELT ASKS CIO AND A. F. OF L. TO NAME BOARD TO FRAME PEACE

In Letters to John L. Lewis and William Green, Urges Heads of Rival Labor Organizations to Compose Differences.

FEDERATION CHIEF ACCEPTS AT ONCE

Appoints Committee to Negotiate— Lewis, However, Refuses to Make Any Comment on President's Suggestion.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 25.—President Roosevelt in a dramatic plea for a united labor movement today asked the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor to name a committee to negotiate an early peace.

In virtually identical letters to John L. Lewis, chairman of the CIO, and William Green, president of the A. F. of L., he declared: "Labor faces a challenge in finding itself divided into opposing camps, but I am sure that labor can and will meet this challenge with understanding and good will."

Green, in New York, at once accepted the President's suggestion and selected a committee to represent the A. F. of L. In Washington Lewis refused to comment on the Roosevelt letter.

The letters were made public at temporary White House offices here while the President spent his seventh day at sea on the cruiser Houston in the vicinity of the annual fleet maneuvers.

Their timing was regarded in official circles as especially significant in view of the speech by Harry L. Hopkins, Secretary of Commerce, in Iowa last night in which the former WPA administrator outlined a program for industrial recovery which included a call on labor to show "tolerance and fairness" in dealing with employers.

Guesses at the Motive.

Some observers saw in the presidential appeal an attempt to bring about a union of the labor forces—at odds for more than three years over the CIO-sponsored Industrial Union and the craft movement of the A. F. of L.—well ahead of the presidential campaigns in 1940.

The President told Lewis and Green the opportunities for a "united and vital labor movement to make a contribution to American life of help to the present and future generations were never better."

He said the American people sincerely hoped that a "constructive negotiated peace" could be achieved "within the early months of the new year" and he expressed hope that Lewis and Green would soon give him the names of the members of the peace committee. He added Government assistance would be "gladly given" if it was wanted.

President Gives Four Reasons.

The President gave four reasons why the two groups should end their differences:

First, because it is right.

Second, because the responsible officers of both groups "seem to me to be ready and capable" of making a negotiated and just peace.

Third, because "your membership ardently desire peace and unity for the better ordering of their responsible life in the trade unions and in their communities."

Fourth, because the "Government of the United States and the people of America believe it to be a wise and almost necessary step for the further development of the co-operation between free men in a democratic society such as ours."

Quotes Secretary Perkins.

The President said that Secretary of Labor Perkins had informed him "there appear to be no insurmountable obstacles to peace and that in fact there is a real and honorable desire for unification of the labor movement among all parties concerned."

He said the National Manufacturers' Association had recently expressed a desire for a "better understanding of the problems of labor relationships" and expressed willingness "to work with labor in a realistic effort to improve their mutual relations and to better general working conditions."

"The complicated economic and social problems of today," he continued, "require the co-operation of responsible groups of citizens of all walks of life and the effectiveness of labor in this type of council can

SUPPORT OF CLARK FOR PRESIDENCY GAVELED THROUGH

Cries of "Fixed" Raised at Young Democratic Club Convention—Hotel Fire Routs Delegates.

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., Feb. 25. — Amid cries of "packed" and "fixed" a resolution indorsing Senator Bennett C. Clark for the Democratic nomination for President was declared adopted at a night meeting tonight of the Young Democratic Clubs of Missouri.

In late afternoon, the same resolution was tabled when bedlam followed its introduction at a general meeting attended by several hundred delegates. Tonight's meeting was attended by about 60. Seven hundred and fifty delegates came here for the convention.

J. Howard Hannah, Springfield, convention chairman, gaveled through the resolution and banged the convention to a close at tonight's session, which lasted but two minutes. Shouts of "discussion" and "no" marked his action.

Wire From Truman Applauded.

Earlier in the meeting the reading of a telegram from Senator Harry S. Truman of Kansas City was received with wild applause. Forrest Smith, State Auditor, referring to the demonstration indirectly later in the session, warned the convention Missouri had been offered its first opportunity in years to have a presidential candidate, adding "I don't think we ought to push that opportunity away."

Lack of reference by the Resolutions Committee to either Gov. Stark or the State administration was noticeable. Other resolutions adopted included indorsement of the work of the Dies Committee and of the policies of President Roosevelt.

Marvin Wright of Salisbury was elected president. His only opponent, Dan M. Carr of Sedalia, withdrew. Mrs. Gladys Smart Branstetter of Fulton was elected vice-president; Miss Mary Cleeton of Milan, secretary, and David McMullan of St. Louis, treasurer.

Fire in Convention Hotel.

Fire broke out on the fourth floor of the nine-story Connor Hotel at 8 p. m. tonight while it was jammed with delegates to the convention.

Flames swept through three and damaged a fourth room of the east wing before firemen, using two lines of hose and an aerial ladder, brought the fire under control.

Lights went out. Elevators failed. Dense smoke filled all five upper floors and guests clogged stairways for several minutes but all reached safety without injury.

The blaze originated in a suite which had been occupied by Dwight H. Brown, Secretary of State; Joe Ward, his secretary, and J. I. Duke, also of Jefferson City. Hotel records showed they checked out at 6 p. m.

SAYS ROOSEVELTS WILL RETURN VISIT OF KING GEORGE V

English Magazine So Reports 'With Some Authority'—'President Fond of England.'

(Copyright, 1939, New York Tribune, Inc.)

LONDON, Feb. 25.—The English news magazine "Cavalcade," which was first to suggest the visit next spring of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to the United States, reported this week "with some authority that one outcome of the royal visit to the White House will be a return visit by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt to Buckingham Palace." The source of the authority was not disclosed.

"The President is fond of England," the magazine added, "having been tutored here as a boy. He is of predominantly British descent, despite his Flemish middle name and Dutch last one.

"There is a constant stream of British visitors and also friends to the White House and the family mansion at Hyde Park, but, because it might be politically embarrassing, it is explained to the press that they are friends of his mother."

PILOT IN AIRLINER CRASH, TWO DISPATCHERS SUSPENDED

3 Involved in California Accident, In Which 5 Were Killed, to Get Hearing in 30 Days.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — The Civil Aeronautics Authority suspended today for 30 days Federal licenses issued to First Pilot Charles B. Stead and two United Airlines dispatchers as a result of the crash of a transport plane off Point Reyes, Cal., last Nov. 29.

Authority officials said Capt. Stead and the two dispatchers Thomas P. Van Sciever and Philip S. Showalter, would be given a hearing within 30 days to determine whether the suspension orders should be made permanent.

The plane, piloted by Stead, crashed off Point Reyes in a fog during a flight from Medford, Ore., to Oakland, Cal. Only Stead and one passenger of seven persons aboard survived.

INSURANCE REPORT FILED; NO LIGHT ON C. R. STREET FUND

Accounting to U. S. Court for Missouri Premiums Does Not Explain $447,000 He Handled.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 25.—An accounting for $2,770,562 of impounded Missouri fire insurance premiums, filed today in United States District Court here, was the first step in the attempt of District Attorney Maurice M. Milligan to locate the source and destination of $447,000 which passed through the hands of the late Charles R. Street of Chicago, co-trustee of the impounded fund, in 1935 and 1936.

In a suggestion filed with the court, Milligan asked that the accounting be ordered and stated that, if the accounting should fail to reveal the facts as to the payments made to and through Street, Milligan would further ask "that an examination of corporate officers and also of the books, records, correspondence and memoranda of the aforesaid fire insurance companies, relating to the Missouri fire insurance rate litigation, be made."

This indicates that Milligan's next step will be to ask that the insurance company officers be summoned for questioning as to the Street transactions. The accounting made today, as anticipated by the District Attorney, did not reveal any facts relating directly to those transactions.

Street Paid $47,093 Tax Claim.

As disclosed recently, Street was confronted in 1936 with a deficiency income tax claim of $47,093 on $100,000 which had come into his hands in 1935, and which he stated was used for "expenses" in the Missouri fire insurance rate compromise. Street was advised that he would either have to make proper showing of the use of the money for expenses, identifying the recipients, or pay the tax claim. He paid the $47,093.

The $100,000 to which this claim related was additional to the $347,582 which is alleged to have passed into Street's hands in the same matter, and on which the Government now bases a pending tax claim against Street's estate. Circumstances surrounding the two deficiency income tax claims point to Street's having distributed about $450,000 to unidentified persons in Missouri, in connection with the rate compromise.

Filed by Trustees' Attorneys.

Th accounting was filed by attorneys for the trustees of the fund, Robert J. Folonie and Ernest A. Hennie, the latter having succeedd Street as trustee. A firm of public accountants prepared the accounting, in which disbursement of the impounded $2,770,562 was traced.

The excess premiums were impounded in United States District

ARMISTICE IS REPORTED LIKELY TO BE PUT INTO EFFECT AT ONCE

Negrin Agreement Said to Follow Written Assurances Reaching London From Franco There Will Be No Reprisals.

BRITAIN AND FRANCE TO RECOGNIZE VICTOR

Paris Reports Say Nationalists Give Promise of Freedom for Country From German and Italian Domination.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—The end of the 31-month Spanish civil war appeared to be only a matter of hours tonight. The Government, officials of the Madrid loyalists said, has agreed to offer its virtual surrender.

The capitulation to the insurgent Nationalist Government of Generalissimo Francisco Franco will be called an "armistice," according to the officials, who declared the truce might go into effect late tonight or tomorrow. Only unforeseen resistance by Government followers, they said, could postpone the end.

The agreement to capitulate was said to have been given by Government Premier Juan Negrin after written assurances had reached the British Government from Franco that there would not be reprisals against Spanish Government leaders. Nationalist authorities likewise would give assurances of Spain's freedom from German and Italian domination, it was stated.

The assurances, largely meeting Negrin's terms for Government surrender, were said to have been given by Franco apart from negotiations in Britain and France for recognition of the Nationalist regime, expected Monday.

British Pledge Reported.

The British Government was believed to have agreed to pledge the performance of Franco's promises, because the Generalissimo has refused to treat directly with the Government or to offer conditions for its surrender.

It was understood that the time for the armistice to become effective was being discussed between the British Government and Pablo Azcarate y Florez, the Spanish Ambassador to London, and representatives of Franco's Cabinet. The peace was said to have been proposed by Britain.

The battlefronts in Spain were as quiet tonight as though an armistice already had been declared. Not even an air raid was reported.

The Madrid Government's acceptance of the armistice was said to have been decided at a Cabinet meeting yesterday and to have been sent to the Spanish Ambassador at London.

President for Peace.

Government Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez del Vayo conveyed it to Manuel Azana, Government President, at the Spanish Embassy in Paris. Azana recently has been an outspoken advocate of peace.

Negotiations to follow the end of hostilities, which have been virtually non-existent since the fall of Barcelona, Jan. 26, it was understood, would be limited to fixing a means for Negrin and other Government leaders to leave Spain.

It was believed by Spanish Government officials here that Nationalist occupation of the Government zone, embracing Madrid, Valencia and Alicante, would follow a few days after the armistice. This central area, embracing one-fourth of Spain, is all that the Government has left after two years, seven months and one week of civil war. From the beginning of the conflict, in a revolt in Spanish Morocco, July 18, 1936, the war has been a succession of defeats for the Government forces.

Azana conferred at length this morning with Alvarez del Vayo at

CHICAGO'S KELLY EXPECTED TO BAG ANOTHER VICTORY

Despite All Attacks on Machine, Mayor Has Enlisted Labor, Reformers and Even Reds on His Side.

COURTNEY HAMMERS AWAY AT GAMBLING

Democrat Has Primary Backing of Col. Knox — Green, G. O. P. Entry, Demands New Leadership

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—Newspaper straw votes indicate that Chicagoans will renominate Mayor Edward J. Kelly next Tuesday over State's Attorney Thomas Courtney by a margin of about 3 to 2. If the poll proves correct, it will be taken as advence notice of Kelly's reelection since Chicago has become almost more Democratic than the Solid South.

The test ballots further indicate that Dwight Green, a political neophyte who aided in the prosecution of Al Capone, will lead the now somewhat shopworn William Hale (Big Bill) Thompson by about 65 to 35 for the privilege of being the Republican to be snowed under by the Democratic machine in the April election.

Despite all the attacks that have been made on him in the last half-dozen years as the chief of the Kelly-Nash machine, the Mayor is approaching the primaries with the more or less active support of almost every element in the city. The machine, of course, is for him; and so are most of the business men, headed by Col. A. A. Sprague, receiver for the Rapid Transit Lines, who is acting as his campaign manager.

Reformers Back Kelly.

Labor, represented by the A. F. of L., the CIO and Labor's Non-Partisan League, is on the Kelly bandwagon, too, as are such "liberals" and reformers as Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Episcopal Church; Charlotte Carr, head of Hull House; James Weber Linn, State representative and professor of English at the University of Chicago, and Paul Douglas, the university's "radical" professor of economics, who is running for Alderman under the Kelly banner. The Mayor at one and the same time has the approval of the Communist Party and of Col. R. R. McCormick, publisher of the conservative Republican Chicago Tribune.

Many of Mayor Kelly's new supporters are a little shamefaced about their part in the campaign that is just ending. Kelly is least objectionable among four unsatisfactory candidates, they explain, adding that Courtney is a young reactionary who must be stopped at all costs. As one of them put it to this reporter:

"We are tired of going down fighting and getting nothing. Maybe, if we throw our support to Kelly, he will let us effect a reform here and there. He might just keep one or two of his promises."

Kelly's Bright Outlook.

The Kelly lieutenants are frankly jubilant. To them the new turn in events means that the machine, threatened in the last two elections by the effective opposition of Gov. Henry Horner, will be more strongly intrenched than ever. With Horner gravely ill in Florida and unable to participate in the campaign, they see the machine extending its power to "downstate" Illinois. They boast that Lieut.-Gov. John Stelle, who is presiding in Springfield in the absence of Horner, already "is in the Mayor's hip pocket." The Horner organizations have gone over to Kelly in at least 37 of Chicago's 50 wards.

Kelly, on the advice of his chief strategists—Col. Sprague and Alderman Jacob Arvey, has waged a "dignified" campaign. He has refused to mention Courtney's name or to answer any of the charges leveled against him. "I believe," he said, "that those who deal in political mud packs are political bygones." So he has been pointing to his record. When he took office, he has been saying at rally after rally, "the city was on the vergs of bankruptcy, and today it has one of the most efficient administrations in the country."

Knox Backs Courtney.

Courtney, who is the candidate of Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News and Republican vice-presidential candidate in 1936, has been hammering away at that "record." He has accused the Kelly administration of raising taxes in the face of falling property values; of failing to get the city's fair share of Federal funds, pointing out that a citizens' committee had to be organized to obtain PWA money for the subway now under construction since Harold Ickes was reluctant to give his approval to it as a Kelly project, and of debauching the city's schools by bringing virtually all positions in the system under political control.

Most of all, Courtney has been assailing Kelly's alleged protection of commercial gambling in Chicago. This reporter was able to establish that a reorganized remnant of the old Capone gang is active in the city. Under the direction of Frank Nitti, Capone's "enforcer," and Paul Ricca, such characters as Jack Guzick, Rocco de Grazia, Ralph Capone, Eddie (Dutch) Vogel, Murray Humphreys, Louis (Little New York) Campagna and "Dago Lawrence" Mangano are not only in gambling, but also in such legitimate enterprises as the wholesale liquor business, linen supply, charged water and ice. For the most part, their customers are the operators of night clubs.

Courtney charges that so far as the gambling is concerned, they are "protected" by City Hall through the instrumentality of William R. Skidmore, junk mogul and reputed head of the old Skidmore-Johnson gambling syndicate. By filing liens against the property of Skidmore and his wife last Thursday, the Government took the first step toward charging him with withholding income tax payments. The Bureau of Internal Revenue will seek to collect $220,000 in taxes and penalties. Courtney has demanded that Kelly be questioned in connection with this proceeding.

Wants Kelly's Income Report.

The State's Attorney has also challenged the Mayor—and the other candidates—to make public their income tax returns since 1932, himself authorizing the Bureau of Internal Revenue to release his reports if similar authorizations are received from Kelly, Green and Thompson.

The Post-Dispatch was informed on good authority in both the Courtney and the Kelly camps that this challenge was issued because a recent income tax return made by the Mayor indicated that he received a substantial sum as a result of gambling—ostensibly from wagers on horse races and elections.

Kelly so far has ignored the challenge—as he has all other Courtney charges. Green, who accepted it, asked Courtney why he did not go back to 1928. The now State's Attorney then was on four public payrolls. He was serving in the Legislature in Springfield; he was sergeant-at-arms of the Chicago City Council; he was attorney for its important building and zoning committee, and counsel for the Chicago Sanitary District.

Kelly's income tax has been under scrutiny before. Some years ago he paid $105,000 in taxes and penalties assessed against him for 1925-1928. This was when Kelly was chief engineer of the Chicago Sanitary District in the whoopee period.

Appeal by Green.

Green, a utilities lawyer, has been urging Chicago voters to "demand new leadership," insisting that the contest between Kelly and Courtney is merely a struggle for the control of the Democratic machine in the city and State. He has also been warning Republicans — many of whom voted as Democrats in the last two Illinois primaries—that if they do so this time, they will be unable to vote in the 1940 primaries as Republicans. As a result, some Courtney partisans, who have been insisting that the Democratic contest is one between the machine and the independent voters, assert that Green's candidacy is little more than a device to keep those independent votes from being cast effectively against the Mayor.

To those who recall some of Big Bill Thompson's lusty campaigns—the campaigns during which he rode into the "Loop" on a cowboy pony to twist the British lion's tail—his attempt at a come-back is disappointing. He, too, is just pointing to the record—to the public improvements of his administrations, and urging the voters to put their municipal affairs into "experienced hands." He hasn't found any burning "issues" like King George V. He may get a substantial number of votes, it is conceded, but he will get most of them for old time's sake.

Meanwhile, the 1,827,362 registrations for Tuesday's voting have set a new record for Chicago, the figure being 57,706 greater than the peak registration of 1936. Investigators for the Board of Election Commissioners and the State's Attorney's office already have discovered hundreds of fraudulent registrations from the cheap hotels and boarding houses of Chicago's notorious First Ward.

After Hearing the Jury's Verdict

the verdict just, fair and in accord with the facts.

Hines was then sworn in and his history taken by Capt. Albert Williams of the court—his age, parentage, and address. On his occupation, Hines reflected a moment and answered: "Insurance." "He reads and writes," the officer remarked without asking.

Hines gave his religion as Catholic, said he drank alcoholic liquors "moderately," and had never been convicted of a crime before.

Just then there was a cheer, "Hurrah for Jimmy!" from the crowd in the lobby outside, under the misapprehension, apparently, that he had been acquitted. The crowd fell into heavy silence when advised of the verdict.

Dewey Issues Statement.

Dewey shook hands with each of the jurors and thanked them for the verdict. The foreman replied: "I didn't do it for you, but for the facts you presented."

In a statement, Dewey declared: "The members of the jury are entitled to the thanks of the whole community. By their verdict they have reasserted the ability of democracy to clean its house of and cast out those who betray it.

"I cannot praise too highly the work of the men who have been responsible for the investigation and presentation of the evidence in this case . . ."

Stunned when the verdict was announced, Stryker cried openly as he leaned on a courtroom rail. When he had collected himself to speak of the appeal, Hines interrupted with: "Sure, we'll appeal and we'll win, too."

Testimony During 27 Days.

Testimony in the case had taken 27 days and filled thousands of pages of transcript. Dewey alone presented 45 witnesses. The defendant did not testify in his own behalf.

State witnesses told a story of thuggery in alliance with political corruption that Stryker scornfully declared was "a detective story." From dusky ex-kings of policy in Harlem to straight-spined police officials, they told how the quick-tempered Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer, long since a victim of gang warfare, moved into Harlem and forged all major policy banks into a single $20,000,000-a-year combine, using gun and blackjack as arguments.

To protect this combine, three of Schultz's one-time trusted henchmen testified, the "Dutchman" put Hines on his payroll for a $1000 retainer and payments of $500 or more a week.

The Court's Long Charge.

Previously, Judge Nott had delivered a charge of one hour and 25 minutes, summing up the case as one which resolved itself into two questions.

The first, he said, was whether an unlawful combination of policy banks was formed and received the political protection of Hines through police, courts and other judicial officers. The second, he told the jurors, was whether Hines was party to a conspiracy to operate the racket.

Judge Nott explained that the indictment under which Hines was brought to trial contained 12 felony counts charging Hines with having conspired to "wilfully contrive and propose to draw lotteries," and one misdemeanor charge of conspiracy.

On opposite sides of the bench as the Judge delivered his charge, sat the ex-choirboy from Michigan, District Attorney Dewey, a Republican presidential possibility, and Hines, the ex-blacksmith from Manhattan's West Side, long one of Tammany's most potent chieftains. Near Hines sat his wife, three sons and their wives and a brother.

PLAN TO SETTLE MEXICAN OIL LAND SEIZURE DRAFTED

Companies Expected to Present Proposal at Capital of Southern Republic This Week.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—A proposal for a settlement of the controversy arising from Mexico's seizure of American-owned oil lands has been drafted, and will be discussed with the Government of President Cardenas in Mexico City next week, informed persons say.

The basis of the proposal is said to be for the Mexican Government to retain title to the properties, but make a long-term contract for their operation by the oil companies formerly owning them.

The proposal was drafted by the oil companies and the negotiations will be carried on by their representatives. It is understood, however, that officials of this Government have been consulted.

Roosevelt Said to Have Seen Plan.

One informant said the plan had received study by President Roosevelt who recently conferred with Mexican Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera.

This Government has taken the attitude that it was up to the companies to take the initiative in the matter.

In proposing the settlement, the companies were reported to be prepared to ask for definite assurances of what their taxes would be, of satisfactory labor conditions during the term of the contract and of reimbursement for losses sustained because of the seizure in March.

The formula is understood to have the support of the 17 United States oil firms affected by the expropriation decree and of the British and Dutch companies the properties of which also were taken over by the Mexican Government.

Reports circulated in informed quarters in Mexico City tonight said foreign oil companies would offer Mexico $150,000,000 for a 50-year privilege of operating the petroleum industry.

Value of Properties.

The value of the properties has been variously estimated, some placing the total as high as $450,000,000 and the worth of American properties alone at $175,000,000. The companies have given out no valuation figures. The Mexican industrial census of 1935 estimated the investment in the properties at $100,000,000.

Donald R. Richberg, attorney for the Standard Oil interests, and Patrick J. Hurley, attorney for the Sinclair and other independent oil companies in Mexico, are expected to meet in Mexico City about March 1 to represent the companies in the negotiations.

Ambassador Castillo Najera, called home by his Government this week—officially to report on the Pan American conference at Lima, Peru—is expected to take part in the discussions. He has conferred here with both Richberg and Hurley.

LOYALIST LEADERS AGREE TO GIVE UP; END OF WAR NEAR the Spanish Embassy here, where the President has been residing.

Azana, his aides said, would leave the Spanish Embassy here tomorrow afternoon, ending the last pretense to keeping his post as chief of the Spanish Republic. He was expected to issue a proclamation explaining his work for peace and announcing his resignation.

The Spanish Embassy is to be evacuated Monday night and Nationalist representatives are to move in Tuesday morning, it was said.

Spanish Government representatives said the French and British Governments had notified Alvarez del Vayo that their navies were ready to take Government leaders out of Spain. The number seeking such evacuation was said to have been put by Alvarez del Vayo at 10,000. This would include all Government chiefs and army, labor union, political and party leaders, with their families.

Del Vayo was reported to have asserted that he planned to return immediately to Madrid to be with Negrin and other ministers at the last moments of their tottering government. Gen. Jose Miaja, Madrid's Comander-in-Chief, was said to have relinquished his command to his chief aide and to have prepared to leave the country.

French Accord With Nationalists.

Senator Leon Berard, French emissary to the Nationalist capital at Burgos, crossed the frontier today on his return to Paris. He is to submit to Premier Daladier the accords he has signed with the Nationalists as a preliminary of French recognition of the Nationalist Government.

The Premier, in turn, is expected to read them to the Cabinet Monday, preliminary to French and British announcement of recognition.

Prime Minister Chamberlain is expected to cite Franco's assurances in the House of Commons Monday, when, it is thought, he will announce Britain's decision to recognize Franco.

Premier Daladier, who informed the French Chamber of Deputies yesterday of his intention to recognize Nationalist Generalissimo Franco and won a vote of confidence on that proposal, then notified the Spanish Republican Government that France was abandoning it.

Diplomatic sources said the French Government, in this final message to Madrid, urged the Government of Premier Negrin to give up its "losing" battle.

Franco's reply,, described as "satisfactory," was relayed to the Madrid Government as another argument for surrender.

Franco Grants Interview to French Envoy by Telephone.

BURGOS, Spain, Feb. 25. —Generalissimo Franco granted today his first interview to the semi-official French envoy to Nationalist Spain, Senator Leon Berard, but only by telephone.

For several weeks Senator Berard has been attempting to obtain commitments from Franco to check German and Italian influence in return for French recognition of Franco.

Berard was understood to have informed Franco that his negotiations with the Nationalist foreign minister, Count Francisco Gomez Jordana, were concluded and that recognition would be forthcoming soon, without Nationalist commitments.

Announcement of the telephone interview did not indicate whether Franco was in Burgos or elsewhere.

Berard's failure to gain concessions was indicated by Premier Daladier yesterday when he told the French Chamber of Deputies France would proceed with recognition on the basis of Nationalist assurances which had been received by Britain.

ITALIANS BEGIN LEAVING FRANCE FOR HOMELAND

Of Nearly 1,000,000 There, 1200 Go, or Prepare to Leave on Fascist Call — Might Serve Military Purposes.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Feb. 25.—More than 1200 of nearly 1,000,000 Italians living in Continental France and the island department of Corsica today answered the Fascist Government's first call for them to return to their homeland. Italy's decision to repatriate citizens was described as following the plan begun Nov. 17 to get back under the Italian flag as many as possible of the Italians living abroad. French Government officials accepted this reason.

The occurrence of the repatriation at a crucial moment in Italian-French relations was ascribed in responsible quarters to one of two things, either that Italy feared war with France soon or wanted to make the French believe it was preparing to back up with action agitation for colonial concessions from France.

A total of 1242 Italians left, or prepared to leave, French soil as the vanguard of an exodus that an Italian Embassy spokesman said was only the beginning.

Three hundred will leave Corsica for Leghorn aboard a special liner Monday, and 440 will leave Nice the same day, picking up 12 more at Menton. Most of those who left Paris today were old men, women and children. "Long live Il Duce!" they shouted at the French mobile guards who stood on the station platform. Then, as the train pulled out, they crowded to the windows of the third-class coaches and waved Italian flags.

An Italian consular official in Nice said: "Foreign countries have been insulting Italy's ability to take care of her own people. This will show them."

The exodus apparently was confined to France. There was no evidence that any of the 100,000 Italians in Tunisia, French North African protectorate which has figured in the territorial clamor in the Fascist press, had been called home.

Merely in Accord With November Program, Rome Says.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Feb. 25.—The only official comment on the departure of Italians from France was that it was in accordance with the repatriation program announced Nov. 17. At that time a commission was created "to facilitate and co-ordinate" the return of expatriate Italians who desired to come back, and on Dec. 12 the Government gave the commission 10,000,000 lire ($526,000) to begin its work.

The first Italians to return were 100 who came back from France at Christmas time.

It was expected that eventually Italians would return from the United States, South America and any other foreign lands where they were encountering either hard times or antagonism to their faith in Fascism.

Italy estimates the number of Italians living abroad at 10,000,000 but this total does not take naturalizations into account and it includes children born to Italians abroad.

It is not known how many accepted the Government's offer but the Repatriation Commission has proceeded slowly in order not to glut the labor market at home. Work is being offered to repatriated Italians in Italy or in the empire—from Libya to Ethiopia—which Rome is trying to colonize.

DOCTOR'S PATIENTS PAY BILLS BY BUILDING HIM A HOUSE

By the Associated Press.

LEMON GROVE, Cal., Feb. 25.—After six years of an unusual debt-payment system, Dr. Ebon B. McGregor has moved into a substantial two-story dwelling.

Unable to collect his bills in the worst of the depression, the physician wrote some 50 patients suggesting they contribute their labor in building him a house. Not one refused.

The first shift did not complete the house, but subsequent calls on delinquent patients gradually finished it.

Since he had fixed his professional fees, he insisted each worker fix his own "wages" for construction.

Mr. Buchanan began as a mine shoveler, amassed millions and was called "King of the Miners" in the tri-state lead and zinc field. He retired from mining and founded the $500,000 Joplin stockyards in 1931. He owned the Courthouse Building and had other extensive interests. He built a $500,000 estate near here several years ago.

FOREIGN QUARTER IN SHANGHAI TELLS JAPAN TO STAY OUT

Settlement Refuses to Let Army Search for Terrorists in Colony—U. S. Marines Patrol Zone.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 25. — The governing body of Shanghai's International Settlement rejected tonight a Japanese program for suppression of terrorism in the Settlement but redoubled its own efforts to maintain order.

The Japanese program, embodied in a note to the Settlement's Municipal Council Wednesday, had caused rumors Japan was ready to move army units into the settlement, ostensibly to suppress terrorism.

Tonight the Council delivered to Yoshiaki Miura, Japanese Consul-General, a reply described as a polite but emphatic rejection of the request.

It was learned that the Japanese had virtually demanded the privilege of sending armed forces into the settlement whenever they desired for independent searching and arrest of alleged terrorists.

The note had given rise to rumors that if the Council rejected it the Japanese might send army units into that part of the Settlement still under full control of the Council. The portion north of Soochow Creek has been under Japanese military rule since the Japanese drove Chinese troops from Shanghai in 1937.

The council normally has two American, five British, five Chinese and two Japanese members. Its chairman is Cornell S. Franklin, an American.

It was understood that in rejecting the Japanese proposals the Council pointed out that acceptance would be tantamount to placing the policing power in Japanese hands.

The Council was reported to have pointed out that according to the Settlement's "charter," framed in agreement with the Chinese Government, it could not give up its own policing power even if it desired. The foreign consular body supervises election of the Council under this "charter."

Meanwhile, the Council heightened anti-terrorist activities. United States Marines and French soldiers joined in turning the entire foreign area, composed of the Settlement and the French Concession, into an active armed camp.

Leaves of the American marines were not canceled, but those on duty patrolled the streets, and trucks with armed marines moved about the American sector.

MAN WHO CALLED ON DANCER BEFORE MURDER IS SOUGHT

Woman Says He Left Los Angeles Apartment House With Anya Sosoyeva Shortly Before Attack.

FOUR OTHER CLEWS IN HUNT FOR KILLER

Card, Comb, Glove, Club Figure in Search—Partner in Skit Tells of Finding Injured Actress.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 25.—On the slimmest of clews—a comb, a card, a glove and a crude club, all blood-stained—police attempted today to find the murderer of a 32-year-old Russian theatrical student.

The victim of the brutal clubbing and criminal attack last night on the Los Angeles City College campus was Anya Sosoyeva.

Miss Sosoyeva, a featured dancer with the Ziegfeld Follies one season, came here three months ago from her San Francisco home, ambitious to enter either the movies or radio. She once danced with a Fanchon & Marco unit, and recently had danced in New York and Chicago night clubs.

She was on her way from her apartment, across the street from the college, to the college auditorium to appear in a revue in which she and other aspirants hoped to attract the attention of talent scouts.

Visited by Foreign-Appearing Man.

Police obtained a lead late today from the landlady of Miss Sosoyeva's apartment house. Mrs. Esther Cahoon said a man of foreign appearance called on the girl last night and that they went out together about 7:45 o'clock. The man returned alone 45 minutes later, but left when his knock at Miss Sosoyeva's door was unanswered. Police are seeking him for questioning.

Miss Sosoyeva's partner in the skit was Wally Myar, 24, pianist ad actor. When he did not find Miss Sosoyeva backstage at 9 o'clock, he went outside to look for her.

"I went out in front of the auditorium and stood there for a while," Myar told police. "Then I started to walk toward the street, about 9:20 o'clock.

"Suddenly I saw someone staggering toward me. I recognized the figure as Anya. As she came closer, I saw her face was bloody. She was sick. I grabbed her as she was about to fall.

"'Nobody came to protect me—why didn't you come sooner?' she asked me. I asked her what happened, and she said a man hit her over the head. She said someone asked her where she was going and as she turned around something struck her.

"I picked her up and carried her into the janitor's room. I told Bob McLaughlin (another student) to tell Ann Stanley, the dramatic teacher, what had happened and to call an ambulance."

Dies From Skull Fracture.

Miss Sosoyeva died early today of skull fracture, without regaining consciousness. Physicians said she had been criminally attacked.

Police found a blood-stained gray glove, a comb with blood on it, a bloody card on which something was written, and a heavy piece of wood, about three feet long, under a tree near where Myar first saw Miss Sosoyeva approaching him. Police indicated the most important clue was the card, but declined to divulge what was written on it.

Myar was questioned, but police said he was not involved.

Myar told police he was graduated from the University of Wisconsin in 1935 and that he then worked in Chicago as an advertising writer. He then became advertising manager of a Wisconsin newspaper. He said he had written some songs and that he came to Hollywood last November in the hope of entering the movies.

INSURANCE REPORT FILED, NO LIGHT ON C. R. STREET FUND

Court after the State Insurance Department, in 1930, refused to approve an increase of 16 2-3 per cent in rates. Under the notorious compromise agreement entered into in 1935 by State Insurance Superintendent Robert E. O'Malley, 20 per cent of the impounded funds was to be returned to policyholders, 50 per cent to the insurance companies and 30 per cent to Folonie and Street as trustees, for legal fees and "expenses."

In the accounting, which is concerned with the 30 per cent, payments of $1,443,144 to the insurance companies are shown. The questioning of the insurance company officials, proposed by Milligan, will probably relate to the disposition of this money, to determine whether any part of it was paid back to Street by the companies and for what purpose.

What the Accounting Shows.

Besides the payments to the insurance companies, disbursements certified in the accounting are:

To R. E. O'Malley, State Superintendent of Insurance, for the State of Missouri, in reimbursement for legal expenses, $169,440.

To John T. Barker and associates of Kansas City, attorneys for the State Insurance Department, for legal services, $423,606.

To the Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust Co. of St. Louis for advances to pay legal fees, $150,000.

Robert J. Folonie, $150,000.

Hicks & Folonie, $95,000.

McKinney, Folonie & Green, $55,000.

Morrison, Nugent, Wylder & Berger, Kansas City, $107,500.

Ragland, Otto & Potter, Jefferson City, $20,000.

Igoe, Carroll & Keefe, St. Louis, $30,000.

A balance of $120,620 in cash is shown as remaining in the fund.

The accounting will be taken up by the three-judge court handling the insurance fund matter, Judges Kimbrough Stone, Merrill E. Otis and Albert L. Reeves.

In his report to the Court, in connection with the accounting, Co-Trustee Folonie said he had no knowledge respecting the $347,000 fund, alleged to have been received by Street during 1936. Folonie said that at some time in 1936, Street presented to him a few checks from fire insurance companies, payable to Street and Folonie, or to Street and Hicks & Folonie, and asked Folonie to indorse the checks to Street, "stating it was money which he was returning to the companies, or accounting to them for."

"None of such checks," Folonie said, "was payable to the trustees. Neither affiant (Folonie) nor his law firm had any interest in said checks or proceeds thereof, and affiant attached no importance to the circumstances and did not notice and cannot state the amount of said checks, the makers or dates. The affiant has no knowledge as to whether this circumstance is in any wise related to the supposed fund suggested by the amicus curiae (Milligan), nor has affiant any knowledge of the distribution made by Charles R. Street of proceeds thereof."

State Sues Attorney for Custodian For Return of $54,750 Fee.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 25.—The State Insurance Department filed suit in Cole County Circuit Court today against T. S. Mosby, former Jefferson City attorney, seeking restoration of $54,750 in fees paid in the 16 2-3 per cent fire insurance case.

The suit was prepared by the office of Attorney-General Roy McKittrick, who has opposed fees paid in the involved insurance litigation.

Mosby acted as attorney for Guy M. Sone, Circuit Clerk of Cole County, who was custodian of the 16 2-3 per cent funds. Under allowance of Judge Nike G. Sevier of the Cole County Circuit Court, Mosby received $1000 a month and Sone $500 a month. The fees paid both men were voided by the State Supreme Court last October. Suit against Sone for the $28,000 he received was filed Dec. 30.

At the same time, McKittrick sued H. P. Lauf and L. H. Cook, Jefferson City attorneys, each for $59,500 paid them as custodians and commissioners of the 10 per cent insurance funds. These allowances, also made by Judge Sevier, were voided by the Supreme Court in April, 1938.

Mosby has been living in California in recent months. The $54,750 paid him, if recovered, would be restored to the 16 2-3 per cent funds for repayment to policyholders who paid it in excess premiums.

375 ALIENS ON W P A ROLLS TO BE DROPPED IMMEDIATELY

New Applicants to Replace Foreign Relief Recipients in City and County.

Investigators have found about 375 aliens on the WPA rolls in St. Louis and the County, and they are being dropped from employment immediately, as provided in the new appropriation law, District WPA Director Lloyd E. Greathouse said to a Post-Dispatch reporter last night.

It is not expected that the dismissals will make an appreciable reduction in the total number of persons on Federal work relief here, now 29,600, because new applicants are being added to the rolls constantly, Greathouse said.

Another survey required by the new law, a re-examination to determine whether those on WPA jobs are actually in need, is to be completed by March 20.

MORE FIST FIGHTS IN DETROIT OVER AUTO UNION DISPUTE

Men in One of Group Reported to Have Been Offered $2 Each to Vote for Homer Martin.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Feb. 25.—Fighting broke out tonight at a meeting of local No. 203, United Automobile Workers' Union. The Detroit News said some of the men in one of the groups were welfare recipients who had been promised $2 each to vote for Homer Martin.

The Martin group was driven away with snowballs after several fist fights occurred. Guards had refused to admit Martin adherents and when 150 arrived in taxicabs, approximately 200 men were called to the scene by the CIO faction, and the fighting ensued.

The News quoted one man as saying he had been offered $2 to attend the meeting and vote for Martin and his Detroit convention. The News said others told of being recruited at a welfare lodge and on street corners.

Martin was not immediately available for comment.

The local voted to support the UAW Cleveland convention, rejecting the Martin convention called for next week-end.

The T. M. Sayman Products Co., 2111 Franklin avenue, has agreed to discontinue certain "unfair representations" in the sale of Sayman's Vegetable Wonder Soap, the Federal Trade Commission announced yesterday.

The company will no longer represent that the soap is "the best for infants," that it "differs from all other soaps," that it is an effective remedy for pimples, blackheads and skin blemishes, and that it "cleans way down into the pores."

Child Was Burned Rescuing Smaller Sisters From Fire.

ALAMOSA, Cal., Feb. 25.—Lottie Jiron, nine years old, who saved two smaller sisters from their burning home, died today of burns she suffered in the rescue.

The child carried to safety her sister, Ida, 6, and a baby sister, Viola, 18 months old, after a gasoline explosion in the kitchen last Monday. The parents had gone shopping.

POLL JUDGES' TRIAL ON MARCH 20 LIKELY

Judge Williams Takes Motion to Quash Under Advisement; Sets Tentative Date.

The trial of four election judges, charged with making a false canvass and return of the vote in the Twenty-first Ward's eighteenth precinct at the last November election, was set tentatively for March 20 by Circuit Judge Charles B. Williams yesterday.

Announcement of the tentative date was made after Judge Williams had heard arguments on a motion to quash the indictment, which he took under advisement.

The motion to quash was offered by Patrick Cullen, attorney for the four judges of the precinct—Milton C. Hippler, Fred B. Rehmund, Glennon Loehrer and Frank Reader. Cullen contended the indictment was defective because it combined charges of making a false canvass and making a false certification of the vote to the Board of Election Commissioners. He argued that a different kind of proof would be required for each charge and that the persons signing the return may not have been the ones who made the canvass.

Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller defended the indictment as being in accordance with the general statutes. Judge Williams suggested that if the indictment were faulty for the reason given by Cullen, the State might elect to stand on either of the charges, but Cullen disagreed. Miller said he was eager to proceed with trial of the case to avoid possibility that a year might elapse, making it necessary under a Missouri Supreme Court decision to destroy the ballots needed as evidence.

ARKANSAS NEGROES, FACING DEATH PENALTY, LOSE APPEAL

Decision of Lower Tribunal Affirmed Against Two Convicted of Assault on White Woman.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed an order of United States District Judge T. C. Trimble of Arkansas yesterday, denying a writ of habeas corpus for two Negroes under death sentence for criminal assault. The Negroes, Jim X. Caruthers and Bubbles Clayton, are charged with an attack on a white woman in 1935.

Attorneys for the convicted men in their appeal charged that Negroes had been systematically excluded from Mississippi County juries for 40 years. They also charged that the trial of the two men was dominated by mob violence. The death sentence was imposed May 17, 1935, and affirmed by the Arkansas Supreme Court Nov. 18, 1935. Caruthers is 23 years old, Clayton 25.

ZOO'S BABY ORANG-UTAN WON'T BE SHOWN FOR MONTH

Attendants Take Care Not to Excite Offspring or Its Mother, Bimbo.

The orang-utan born at the St. Louis Zoo on Feb. 17 to Bobby and Bimbo will not be on display for at least a month, Director George P. Vierheller announced yesterday.

Extreme care is being taken by zoo attendants not to excite either Bimbo, the mother, or the baby. The cage is shut off from public view by a large piece of canvas and attendants go near only to carry food to Bimbo.

The sex of the offspring has not been determined and no name has been given it. It is Bimbo's second offspring at the zoo. The first one, Pattie Sue, had to be taken away from Bimbo 36 hours after birth and fed on a bottle. Pattie Sue died about two years ago.

NICK FORCES DELAY IN OUSTER HEARING

Applies to State Supreme Court for Writ Against Action by Union Members.

Hearing of the ouster suit against John P. Nick, indicted boss of the Motion Picture Machine Operators' Unoin, and his chief aid, Clyde A. Weston, also under indictment on an extortion charge, was postponed yesterday after defense counsel filed application for a write of prohibition in the Missouri Supreme Court.

Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley was instructed to take no further action on the hearing to show cause until the Supreme Court had ruled on the application.

Counsel for Nick and Weston contend the 19 union members who filed the ouster suit had not exhausted their remedies within the union. In support of their application they asserted the 19 were not the proper plaintiffs and should have filed the suit against the union or all of its members. The 19 members' petition asks for an injunction, an accounting and a receivership.

The application for prohibition, filed by Defense Counsel Paul Dillon and signed also by Attorney Sigmund M. Bass, attacked jurisdiction of the Circuit Court.

It was contended that the Circuit Court could not issue an effective injunction to prevent Nick and Weston from continuing to operate the local union, as the international officers could appoint successors and the injunctive process might become endless.

The international officers could not be enjoined, defense counsel stated, because they were not before the Circuit Court. George E. Browne, international president, who was named a defendant with Nick and Weston, has not been served in the ouster suit. Browne is considered an ally of Nick.

Nick and Weston were indicted Tuesday, charged with extortion in connection with the $7000 "defense" fund raised in 1937 by movie theater owners during annual wage contract negotiations. Previously Nick and State Legislator Edward M. (Putty Nose) Brady were indicted on a charge of extortion in connection with an alleged payment to Brady of $10,000 from a $15,000 fund raised by the owners in 1936.

KATTELMAN PAROLE EFFECTIVE WEDNESDAY UNLESS REVOKED

Federal Board's Decision on St. Louis Objections Expected Next Week.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — The Federal Parole Board is expected to announce its decision next week on whether it will rescind the parole announced in December for Harold J. Kattelman, bankrupt St. Louis broker, now serving a five-year sentence at the Leavenworth prison for mail and security frauds. Unless the board orders otherwise, Kattelman's parole will be come effective next Wednesday.

When the parole was announced, more than two months ago, there were numerous protests from St. Louis, including one from United States Attorney Harry Blanton. On receipt of these protests the board held a public hearing in Washington, Jan 12.

At the Department of Justice today a spokesman explained the delay in the board's decision by saying that two members had been in Leavenworth and Atlanta prisons conducting parole hearings, while the third member had been ill.

7 STEEL FIRMS SUE TO BAR BASIC PAY ON U. S. CONTRACTS

Hearing Tomorrow on Contention Labor Secretary Misinterprets Law's Provision on Locality.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Seven steel companies asked the United States District Court today to enjoin Secretary of Labor Perkins from putting into effect March 1 a basic wage scale for Government contract work in the iron and steel industry.

A hearing on their petition was set for Monday before Justice Jennings Bailey.

The steel companies contended that the labor secretary, in ruling they must pay the 62½ cents an hour minimum wage prevailing in the Pittsburgh-Ohio-Chicago area, if they are to receive Government contracts, was misinterpreting the term "locality" in the Walsh-Healey Act.

The Walsh-Healey Act permits the Secretary of Labor to determine the local prevailing minimum wage in an industry and to require plants in that locality which make contracts with the Government to pay at least that wage. A ruling recently was issued that the minimum wage in the steel industry ranged from 45 cents an hour in the South to 62½ cents in the East and Middle West.

MARY HUSSEY ELOPES WITH CRAWFORD LEAHY

1933 Debutante and Insurance Salesman to Be Rewed by Priest.

Miss Mary Jane Hussey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Hussey, and Crawford Leahy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Leahy, eloped to Ballwin, St. Louis County, and were married by a Methodist minister last Sunday, friends learned last night. They will be remarried by a Catholic priest today, the bride's parents said.

The pair had been engaged two months but had made no public announcement. Mrs. Leahy, 23 years old, a debutante in 1933 and a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball the same year, attended Mary Institute and was graduated from Ramona Convent, Alhambra, Cal. She lived with her parents at 14 North Kingshighway. Her husband, whose father is an attorney and prominent Catholic layman, is an insurance salesman. He attended St. Louis and Georgetown universities and lived with his parents at 4944 Lindell boulevard. He is 24.

The bride's father, a railroad tie and timber dealer, said he learned of the marriage Friday night when she telephoned home from Chicago. The Rev. N. C. Justine, who performed the ceremony last Sunday, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that Leahy and his fiancee had obtained a marriage license Feb. 3 in Gasconade County.

The wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Omar Langenberg, friends of the bride, on Kehr's Mill road. Leahy and his bride will return from Chicago this morning.

Roosevelt's Letter on Labor

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 25.

THE text of President Roosevelt's letters to John L. Lewis and William Green calling for labor peace negotiations follows:

My dear Mr. Lewis:

In the development of this great nation the continued results of good will, co-operation and mutual helpfulness among the people have been demonstrated continuously. The need of the exercise of these qualities is as urgent now as at any time in American history, particularly as they apply to the welfare of men and women who work. Labor faces a challenge in finding itself divided into opposing camps, but I am sure that labor can and will meet this challenge with understanding and good will.

The American people sincerely hope that a constructive negotiated peace with honor may come about between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations within the early months of the new year. The Secretary of Labor tells me that after careful investigation and prolonged conversations with responsible leaders in both groups there appear to be no insurmountable obstacles to peace and that in fact there is a real and honorable desire for unification of the labor movement among all parties concerned. The desire of the general membership of both organizations for peace and co-operation with each other is demonstrated by the mass of messages which have come to me, to the Secretary and to Daniel Tobin as the result of simple public statements in favor of peace.

The opportunities for a united and vital labor movement to make a contribution to American life of help to the present and future generations were never better. The National Manufacturers' Association recently has made a statement expressive of a better understanding of the problems of labor relationships and of their willingness to work with labor in a realistic effort to improve their mutual relations and to better general working conditions. The complicated economic and social problems of today require the co-operation of responsible groups of citizens of all walks of life and the effectiveness of labor in this type of council can only be realized by its fundamental unity of purpose and program.

I do not need to remind you of the great variety of opportunities to be of service which will come to a united labor movement. Many of your members have spoken to me of these opportunities and many of them have also pointed out to me the hazards and dangers to which the labor movement is subject, both internally and from without, if it cannot find a pattern of unity.

Therefore, first, because it is right; second, because the responsible officers from both groups seem to me to be ready and capable of making a negotiated and just peace; third, because your membership ardently desire peace and unity for the better ordering of their responsible life in the trade unions and in their communities, and, fourth, because the Government of the United States and the people of America believe it to be a wise and almost necessary step for the further development of the co-operation between free men in a democratic society such as ours, I am writing to ask you to appoint a committee to represent your organization and to negotiate the terms of peace between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Whatever assistance we in the Government can give you in this matter will be gladly given.

I wish to reiterate the sincerity of my belief in labor's capacity to end this breach and my faith in the intention of the wage earners of America to play their part along with all other groups in our community in overcoming our mutual problems and bringing about the good American democratic life.

I am sure that these results can be achieved if the parties come together with open minds and a clear intention to effect genuine peace and harmony in the labor movement.

In addressing this letter to you, my dear John, I have great satisfaction in knowing that I am dealing with a man whom I respect, a man of honor, intelligence and good will. I trust I shall very shortly receive a reply giving me the names of the members of the committee which you will appoint.

Sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVLT.

The identical letter was sent to Green, except for the last paragraph, which read as follows:

It is with confidence that I write you, dear Bill, as a man of good will, of experience and high principles. I trust I shall very shortly receive a reply giving me the names of the members of the committee which you will appoint.

ROOSEVELT ASKS CIO, A. F. OF L. HEADS TO ARRANGE PEACE

only be realized by its fundamental unity of purpose and program."

Salutations Friendly.

The President's salutation to the CIO head was "My dear Mr. Lewis," but he concluded with the more familiar, "My dear John."

My dear Mr. Green" was the way he started the letter to the A. F. of L. president, ending with a "Dear Bill."

Only the last paragraphs of the two letters were worded differently.

The one to Lewis concluded: "In addressing this letter to you, my dear John, I have great satisfaction in knowing that I am dealing with a man whom I respect, a man of honor, intelligence and good will."

To Green he said: "It is with confidence that I write you, dear Bill, as a man of good will, of experience and high principles."

The last sentence of each letter read: "I trust I shall very shortly receive a reply giving me the names of the members of the committee which you will appoint."

Green Names Committee; Lewis Has Not Stated Position.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said late today he had accepted President Roosevelt's invitation to appoint a committee to meet with a CIO committee in an attempt to arrange a peace in the labor movement.

"I advised the President," Green said, "that I have appointed Harry C. Bates, Matthew Woll and Daniel J. Tobin, all members of the executive council of the A. F. of L., as a committee to represent the A. F. of L. in peace negotiaitons, as the President requested.

"It must be obvious that time has served to develop new complications which will now make it more difficult to establish a basis of accommodation and to reunite labor under the banner of the A. F. of L. The preservation of the structure of the A. F. of L. and the preservation of its democratic principles are of transcendant importance and cannot be compromised or made the subject matter of negotiation.

"In addition, the economic and political philosophy evolved by the A. F. of L. cannot be compromised. The reabsorption of the groups which left the A. F. of L. and the new union which said groups created will present a problem more difficult of solution now than it was when the committees representing the two organizations carried on negotiations for several weeks about one year and a half ago. (These negotiations ended in disagreement).

He said he had changed his committee for the forthcoming negotiations "because those who served in the earlier negotiations felt they had done their duty and they did not want to serve again."

The new committee's personnel is "very representative of various trades," he said, referring to Bates' connection with the bricklayers' union, Tobin's with the teamsters' union and Woll's with the photo-engravers' union.

Elaborating his seemingly pessimistic view of peace prospects, Green said, "I hope that if the committees reach a settlement again the CIO chairman will not veto it."

At another point he declared, "We cannot tolerate the development of Communist policies in a united labor front," but declined to amplify that remark.

"Complications" which have developed, he said, were evidenced by trouble with automobile, garment and textile workers.

David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, praised Mr. Roosevelt's action and said that if both sides approached the conference "in a mood of achieving peace without victors and vanquished, there is reason to hope that peace may be accomplished."

Dubinsky's union, one of the original bulwarks of the CIO, withdrew from that organization last year after Dubinsky had failed in repeated efforts to bring together the warring factions.

John L. Lewis Refuses Comment on Roosevelt Letter.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—John L. Lewis, chairman of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, declined to comment tonight on President Roosevelt's suggestion that the CIO and the American Federation of Labor attempt to negotiate peace.

Lewis said he did not believe he would "have anything to say tomorrow, either."

BERLIN, Feb. 25.—German authorities announced today the loss in the Mediterranean of a German plane, apparently a military craft, with 10 persons aboard, but did not explain the purpose of the flight or give the identity of the victims.

Officials refused to confirm conjectures that the plane, which disappeared yesterday, belonged to the air force. It was stated that it was on a special flight from Germany, but the destination was not disclosed.

MAYOR WILL LEAVE TODAY FOR MEETING ON BYRNES BILL

To Confer With Executives of Other Cities on Relief Reorganization Measure.

Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann will leave today for Washington, to go on to New York for an executive committee meeting of the Conference of Mayors next Friday on the Byrnes relief bill for reorganization under a new Federal Public Works Department.

Mayor Dickmann's telegraphed notice of the emergency meeting stated the bill "threatens the work relief program in many cities." Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer of the Social Security Board, whose testimony opened Senate committee hearings yesterday, said the board considered the bill, liberalizing unemployment and old-age benefits and setting up funds for unemployables to be matched by the State, "a step in the right direction."

The Mayor will be accompanied by City Conuselor Edgar H. Wayman and Associate President A. R. Ross of the Board of Public Service. Ross will confer with the Public Works Administration on disputed items, amounting to about $50,000, in various projects here. The Conference of Mayors is headed by Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — The Air Safety Board reported today that engine failure probably caused an accident to a Transcontinental and Western Air Transport near Albuquerque, N. M., Aug. 24, 1938. No one was seriously injured. The board said the probable cause of the accident was "excessive vibration and loss of power, due to malfunctioning of left engine, resultnig in insufficient speed to sustain the aircraft in flight."

BLOC OF SENATORS SEEKS TO RESTORE GUAM ITEM IN BILL

One Expects Roosevelt Pressure for Passage of $5,000,000 Project, Voted Down by House.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—A prediction that the Senate would reverse the House's action and authorize $5,000,000 in naval improvements at the Island of Guam came from Senator Lewis (Dem.), Illinois, today as the Senate Military Committee gave its approval to the $358,000,000 army and Air Corps expansion bill.

Lewis, veteran member of both the Foreign Relations and Military committees, said that if he judged the temper of the Senate correctly, "it will put back the Guam item and announce that it is our property and we are merely fencing it."

Senator Lee (Dem.), Oklahoma, another member of the Military Committee, said he thought the House vote against the Guam improvements had had "a bad psychological effect" in the Orient and that the item should be put back in the bill.

He indicated, however, he expected President Roosevelt to exert his personal influence to accomplish this.

The House vote against a proposal to dredge Guam's harbor for seaplane lanes and make other improvements was interpreted in most quarters as having been influenced by arguments that Japan would view this as provocative.

Lee said he thought the vote might be misinterpreted in the Orient as a sign of weakness and result in more aggressive Japanese tactics.

Clark Opposes Guam Item.

Senator Norris (Ind.), Nebraska, who has been extremely critical of Japan's course in China, said he was inclined to support the House action. Senator Clark (Dem.), Missouri, said he would oppose restoration of the Guam item and predicted that the Senate would reject any attempt of that nature by a substantial majority.

"Any move to fortify Guam is closely equivalent to a declaration of war," Clark declared.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee may act next week on the question. While the controversy continued, the Military Committee called attention in its report on the army expansion bill to what it said was the necessity of preparing industry to get on a war production basis quickly.

It said that a $34,500,000 item in the army expansion bill, to be taken up in the Senate Monday, would finance educational orders for 55 critical items that would be needed in quantities if war were declared.

A War of Machines.

"Modern warfare, as never before in history, is based on machines—machines of war and machines of industry," the report said. "The machines of war tend to become ever more complicated and destructive and that belligerent having the most destructive and the most numerous machines of war will inevitably win the victory. Trained soldiers we must still have, no soldier, however skilled or however courageous, can carry on modern warfare effectively if he is handicapped by better weapons in the hands of the enemy."

Educational orders will permit industry to begin production on a small scale of war materials and equipment, the committee said, and make it possible for industry to get into full swing on a war production basis within seven months, instead of the 12 required when this country entered the World War, the report continued.

The committee, which increased to 6000 the limitation on the number of planes in the Army Air Corps, said the bill would provide for a balanced air force with sufficient machines and personnel to provide adequate defense.

ST. LOUIS C. OF C. OPPOSES STATE CONSERVATION BILLS

Directors Approve Submitting Proposal for New County Charter to Voters.

The board of directors of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce announced yesterday that it had given its disapproval to the two bills now pending in the State Legislature which would change the powers of the State Conservation Commission.

It approved a joint and concurrent resolution which would submit to the voters at the next general election a proposal to amend the State constitution to create a commission to prepare and propose a new charter for St. Louis County.

Forty-five bills now pending in the Legislature were disapproved by the directors and 35 were approved.

ATTACK ON POLICE PAY LAW

Belleville Mayor Wants Illinois Cities to Urge Its Repeal.

Mayor George Remnsnider of Belleville asked the Illinois Municipal League yesterday to call a meeting of officials of the 56 cities affected by the State law providing minimum wages of $175 a month for policemen and firemen, to urge repeal of the law.

The law was upheld last week by the Illinois Supreme Court. Belleville's present scale starts at $135 a month.

HOPKINS' TALK RAISES QUESTIONS IN CAPITAL

One Is His 1940 Ambitions, Another How Far Roosevelt Approved Address.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Secretary of Commerce Hopkins sounded a business stimulation policy keynote for the Roosevelt administration in his Des Moines speech Friday night that attracted attention in Washington for more than one reason.

The oldest members of Congress could recall no parallel, in the scope of Hopkins' address, among past public utterances of Cabinet officers. It ran the whole gamut of current domestic issues, approximating, at least, presidential reports to Congress on "the state of the Union."

Normally, Cabinet officers confine themselves strictly to the phases of national policy making under direct jurisdiction of their departments. Secretary Hopkins ignored that custom. In so doing he raised two important questions in the minds of congressional leaders of both parties.

A Presidential Possibility.

The first was the extent to which the President had approved in advance Hopkins' proffers of Government co-operation with business to stimulate re-employment and recovery.

The second was whether the Hopkins speech could be construed as at least a tentative move toward Hopkins becoming a candidate for President in 1940.

The answer to the first question will be looked for in any specific recommendations made by the administration when Congress takes up the subjects of tax revision and considers policies involving power and labor. These should disclose not only how far Hopkins is ready to go to meet business complaints, but the extent to which he may be regarded as the direct spokesman of the President.

The new Commerce Secretary is known to have participated in Treasury tax studies since his appointment. That in itself was a New Deal innovation.

In His Home State.

The 1940 political aspects of the Hopkins speech are not so clear. The Commerce Secretary discounted published reports that he had authorized his Iowa friends to start a favorite son 1940 build-up for him in his native State. Yet some observers see a cryptic quality in certain parts of that speech, and also note that a favorite son status in his own State is the first requirement for a presidential nomination seeker.

Actually, Hopkins' selection of Des Moines as the site for his initial speech as Commerce Secretary was a second choice. He considered first making it under National Manufacturers' Association auspices from New York City, but that was abandoned.

Hopkins' intimates know that he has set himself to achieve within a year or less some part of the business-Government-labor co-operation for recovery for which he pleaded. Both from his own viewpoint, and that of the President, his availability for consideration in 1940 candidate choosing might turn on his success within the next few months.

DR. KLAMON SAYS 'FAIR TRADE' BILL IS MENACE TO CONSUMER

Washington U. Economics Professor of Opinion It Is Not in Public Interest.

The so-called fair trade bill now before the Missouri Legislature, legalizing establishment of minimum retail prices for trademarked products, was called "a clear menace to the consumer and to public interest" yesterday in a radio talk by Dr. Joseph M. Klamon, associate professor of economics and marketing at Washington University.

"It is merely a price-fixing and price-raising measure designed to limit the competitive advantage of the most efficient mass distributors of merchandise to the disadvantage of the consumer," Dr. Klamon said. "Not one authority on marketing and merchandising in the country has come forward to say that retail price-fixing is sound marketing or in the public interest. The standard, fast-selling, well-advertised brands, which contribute least to the retailer's operating expenses, are the very ones on which prices would be maintained."

Dr. Klamon cited a report by a large New York City department store which, he said, showed the effect on retail prices of the New York minimum price law. The average increase in price on 4000 items was said to be 13.8 per cent, including cosmetics, 8.5 per cent; drugs, 15.7; liquor, 11.8; books, 16.8, and miscellaneous items, 14.9.

BILL TO PENALIZE MOTORISTS WHO DODGE STATE SALES TAX

Kansas City Proposes $20 Payment by All Seeking License There Who Bought Cars Outside Missouri.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 25. — Aimed at motorists who purchase their automobiles outside of Missouri to avoid the State sales tax, an ordinance was drawn today by Mayor Bryce B. Smith to require payment of a $20 investigation fee on such vehicles.

Mayor Smith said the ordinance would be presented to the council Monday. It proposes that an applicant for a city automobile car license must present a certificate showing where he purchased his car. If it shows purchase in another state, he would be required to pay the $20 fee.

Spending Policy Changes Advised In Aid of Productive Opportunity

"Failure of Business Confidence" Noted in Fortune Round Table Article Mentioned by Hopkins in Speech.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—A round table of business executives and others brought together by Fortune Magazine found the "fiscal policy of the administration had brought with it a failure of business confidence," and recommended changes in Government spending policy to "increase productive opportunity."

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins in his speech at Des Moines, Ia., asked his hearers to consider Government spending "seriously and not in any narrow partisan way" and to "consider such careful analyses . . . as are found in the current issue of Fortune Magazine, . . . written by 11 active and well-informed men, most of them in business."

Although Fortune will not appear until Monday, its publishers made the text of the article public today because of Hopkins' speech.

Views on Spending.

The 11 men, who include a farmer, a Judge, a writer, a laborite, an economics professor and several business men, fell generally into two schools of thought on Government spending. The findings of the men were summarized by the magazine in the following "highlights":

"There are 10,000,000 men out of work; few new industries are being created; little new capital is being invested. What is the cause of the trouble? One school says that Government spending will revive the economy. Another thinks that spending is the great obstacle to recovery. Which is right? The round table believes:

"1. That both schools make some good points but that neither has the answer.

"2. That Government should invest its money so as to increase productive opportunity rather than merely spend to create purchasing power.

Want of Business Confidence.

"3. That the fiscal policy of the administration has brought with it a failure in business confidence.

"4. That the spirit of enterprise languishes largely because of the belief that the administration does not really care about the system of private enterprise.

"5. That these intangible concomitants of the spending program should be at once corrected.

"6. That, in general, the social and labor reforms so far established should be retained.

"7. That public spending should indeed be used to counterbalance the business cycle.

"8. But that this should be done within the framework of a periodically balanced budget and a dependable debt-retirement plan."

(Hopkins in his speech said he accepted the premise that there was a lack of business confidence, that such lack was a "hard, stubborn fact and may be as real a deterrent to restored business health as any we have to deal with." He also said that if in addition to the economic disruptions of the past decade, "add to that the legislative reforms and new Government activities and you have the reason why many people have lost their confidence.")

Deficit vs. Consumer Spending.

Fortune's round table findings in effect recommend further Government "deficit spending" (i. e., spending with an unbalanced budget in periods of hard times) but with emphasis placed on permanent, productive public works (such as PWA, which many economists believe stimulate heavy industry and thus, indirectly, bring more lasting recovery) as opposed to "consumer spending" (such as the WPA, in which the money is disbursed at once along the lowest levels.

Some industrial leaders who have discussed with Hopkins governmental spending policies have said that he had apparently changed his views from favoring "consumer spending" to favoring "capital spending," although he once successfully defeated the effort of Secretary of the Interior Ickes to have the latter method favored.

Men at Round Table.

The round table forum was designed, the magazine said, to get some "new thinking" on the subject. Members of the round table were: Chester I. Barnard, president New Jersey Bell Telephone Co.; David Cushman Coyle, Washington, engineer and writer; Douglas Gow, research department, Detroit Edison Co.; Judge Blanton Fortson of Atlanta, Ga.; Clinton S. Golden, regional director, Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, Pittsburgh, Pa.; James W. Hook, president, Geometric Tool Co., New Haven; Allan B. Kline, farmer, Vinton, Ia.; Beardsley Ruml, treasurer, R. H. Macy & Co., New York; Sumner Slichter, professor of business economics, Harvard University; Edgar W. Smith, cive-president General Motors Overseas Corporation, New York, and Edward Warner, engineering and aviation consultant, Washington. Raymond Leslie Buell and Russell W. Davenport of Fortune's editorial staff attended the discussions.

A chief minority report in objection to the general tenor of the majority report was made by Barnard, who said he thought the approach to recovery should be primarily social and not economic. He said: "My belief is that the economic difficulties past and present lie chiefly in the unequal distribution of the opportunities for productive employment, and that the correction of these difficulties requires direct attack at the fundamental point as a social rather than an economic process."

ALASKA BISHOP, 82, CALLS BEANS BEST FOOD AT SUB-ZERO

Has Served Episcopal Church There 44 Years and Is Going Back.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Broad-shouldered, bright-eyed Bishop Peter Trimble Rowe, 82 years old, said today the world seemed more materialistic now than ever before, "but I'm not worried—people are much better than they seem to be."

He is visiting New York, but after a few weeks he will resume his work in Alaska, where he has been in service for 44 years. He is the oldest active missionary Bishop in the Protestant Episcopal Church, with 37 winters of snowshoe and dog-sled travel and seven more of airplane journeying behind him.

By flying, the Bishop now covers as much of his diocese in five months as he covered in three years by dog-team. There were three churches in the diocese when he started; now there are 37, and three hospitals.

Bishop Rowe was born in Toronto, went to Alaska from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., married the former Rose Fullerton, of Winnipeg, has four sons. In their Alaska days, Jack London, Rex Beach and the late Tex Rickard were among his many friends. He often preached in Rickard's gambling place in Nome.

"Do you know the best food for a traveler in sub-zero weather?" Bishop Rowe asked. "It's beans, not pemmican. I cook the beans soft before I leave, spread them out, let them freeze separately. Then when I stop at night on the trip, I put them in a frying pan with a little grease. The bacon seasons them."

CATHOLIC LEADER CHARGES POLITICS IN STATE RELIEF

The Rev. Dr. John O'Grady Tells Senators He Favors Bill for Permanent Program.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — The Rev. Dr. John O'Grady of Washington, told the Senate Unemployment Committee today he had observed evidences of politics in State administration of the unemployment benefit program and the employment service.

Dr. O'Grady, representing the National Conference of Catholic Charities, said he approved a bill by Committee Chairman Byrnes (Dem.), South Carolina, to set up a permanent unemployment program involving liberalization of social security benefits and establishment of a new Department of Public Works. He urged that the Government coordinate its unemployment benefit program with efforts to find work for the jobless.

In Arizona, Dr. O'Grady said, unemployment benefit and employment service authorities sought to "make a political football" of a proposal in the State Legislature to revamp the two programs.

Ray R. Adams of Utah, president of the Interstate Conference of Compensation Agencies, told the committee that the present "cumbersome arrangement" has hindered administration of both the unemployment compensation and the employment services.

Byrnes' program would unify the services.

$7,250,000 Locomotive Order.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 25.—A. D. McDonald, president of Southern Pacific Co., announced orders today for 40 locomotives to cost about $7,250,000, as part of Southern Pacific's 1939 improvement program. Twenty-eight oil-burning freight and passenger locomotives for mountain service were ordered from Baldwin Locomotive Works and 12 coal burners for freight and passenger service on the Rio Grande division from Lima Locomotive Works.

TOMORROW FINAL DAY TO FILE FOR MARCH PRIMARY

Only Three Contests So Far on Democratic Ticket for Aldermen, Two on Republican.

With the municipal primary election only 12 days off and tomorrow the last day for filing candidacies, the most listless political campaign in many years is under way.

So far, the only contests are for three places on the Democratic aldermanic ticket and two on the Republican. In only one instance, the Democratic race for Twenty-second Ward Alderman, are there more than two candidates. This is the only contest holding signs of political interest.

Each of the two major parties will nominate candidates for President of the Board of Aldermen and Aldermen from the 14 even-numbered wards, in the primary March 10. Those elected, April 4, will constitute a majority of the city's lawmaking body. The board president will be one of the three members of the fiscal body, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. Aldermen, while representing wards, are nominated and elected by city-wide vote.

Aldermen are paid $1800 a year each and the board president $3000.

Attorney William L. Mason, who has been aldermanic president for the last four years—the first Democrat to hold this office—is unopposed so far. Politicians do not expect him to have an opponent, as he has the complete support of Mayor Dickmann's machine.

Clifford Greve Jr., lawyer, is the only Republican candidate for president an dis not likely to be opposed. The Republican City Committee indorsed his candidacy unanimously Friday. A group of independent Republicans, proposing an effort to rehabilitate their party, espoused his candidacy. They are headed by Claude B. Ricketts. Greve's selection is in line with the tendency to bring young blood into the party councils; he is 32 years old.

Eleven of the 14 Aldermen whose terms are expiring have filed for renomination. Alderman Charles A. Routledge of the Second Ward and Alderman Arthur E. Pahl of the Twenty-fourth have announced that they would not run. Routledge was in the former majority faction which opposed Mayor Dickmann and there was no prospect that he would receive administration backing. Pahl, a member of the former minority backing Dickmann, switched to an anti-administration stand.

The machine is supporting James P. Broderick, an auditor, for the Second Ward place and Louis G. Berra, now a Deputy Jury Commissioner, for the Twenty-fourth Ward. Alderman Gregory V. Murray of the Tenth Ward, another member of the old anti-Dickmann faction, has not decided whether to run again, but has been canvassing the prospect of obtaining political backing. The machine in his ward has indorsed Dennis T. Bahlinger, now a deputy assessor.

Igoe Man Faces Competition.

The Twenty-second Ward Democratic contest is chiefly between Nick Reidy, incumbent, who is aligned with the William L. Igoe party faction, and Edgar J. Feely, a clerk in the License Collector's office, who was brought out by Justice of the Peace James A. Burke, the ward committeeman. Chairman Robert E. Hannegan of the Democratic City Committee, a Dickmann lieutenant, has been seeking to avoid strife in the primary and an effort may be made to get Feely out of the race, but he said yesterday he was in it to stay. The third candidate is John R. Coyne.

A Twentieth Ward Democratic factional fight has been avoided, in the interest of harmony, by the indorsement of Alderman Walter W. Ziegenbalg, formerly an anti-Dickmannite, by the organization of City Treasurer John J. Dwyer, committeeman. Ziegenbalg has an opponent, Matthew A. McLoughlin, a dry cleaner. The only other Democratic contest so far is in the Twelfth Ward, where Alderman Lawrence P. Walsh, supported by the machine, is opposed by Michael J. Aubuchon, a lawyer. There are Republican contests in the Fourth and Eighth wards, and one is in prospect in the Twentieth Ward.

So far there are no Republican candidates in the Sixth, Twenty-fourth or Twenty-eighth wards. Time for filing candidacies will expire at 9 p. m. tomorrow.

In the election five of the 12 places on the Board of Education will be filled. Time for filing nominating petitions for these positions will expire March 20. The Fifteenth Ward Republican organization, meeting Friday, indorsed John A. Fleischli, an incumbent.

FORD OBJECTION OVERRULED

Curtailment of Evidence Issue in Kansas City NLRB Case.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 25.—P. H. McNally, trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board, overruled today an objection by counsel for the Ford Motor Co. to a ruling that would materially curtail evidence in a year-old hearing of a complaint against Ford labor practices.

Ford attorneys had charged the board's ruling was "unlawful" and an "arbitrary and oppressive denial to the Ford Motor Co. of a fair and impartial trial." The ruling would eliminate Ford evidence the board has classified as "cumulative and immaterial." Arguments lasted several weeks.

POLICE SEEK EAST ST. LOUISAN WHO SAID HE'D KILL SELF

Note of Man Who Lost Job Says He Will Let "Old Mississippi" Take Care of Him.

East St. Louis police are searching for Roy E. Roberts, 1455 Missouri avenue, an unemployed locomotive fireman, who threatened to end his life in a note left at his home last Thursday and in a letter mailed from St. Louis Friday.

In the note, found by his wife, Mrs. Mildred Roberts, he said he was discouraged and that, "I am going to make a good job of it. You will not have any funeral expenses." The letter contained several receipted bills and a note stating, "I am disgusted with life and letting old Mississippi take care of me."

Roberts was laid off early last week. His wife said she found the note under her purse several hours after he had left home. They have two children.

Sister of John H. Farish Dies.

Mrs. Caroline Farish Dietrich, a former St. Louisan, died last week at Bel Air, Md., her home. She was the widow of Edward A. Dietrich of Maryland, and a sister of John H. Farish, St. Louis real estate dealer. She was 67 years old.

COUNTY GAS CO. PLEA ON FUTURE SECURITIES

Seeks Authority to Reimburse Treasury for $1,818,000 in Plant Improvements.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 25.—The St. Louis County Gas Co. filed an application with the Missouri Public Service Commission today for authority to reimburse its treasury for $1,818,661 of company funds expended for plant improvements during the last five years, through an issue of its securities at some future date.

In asking for approval of the expenditures as a basis for issuance of securities later, the company stated it did not deem it necessary or advisable to issue the securities now or in the immediate future. The company asked that it be permitted to file a supplemental application at some future date, for authority to issue and sell the securities when it was considered expedient.

Under the law utilities expending funds for improvements, which are derived from sources other than the sale of securities, are permitted to capitalize such expenditures through security issues, if approved by the commission for that purpose within five years after the expenditures were made. The St. Louis County Gas Co. said the expenditures for which approval is sought were made between March 1, 1934, and last Dec. 31.

The St. Louis County Gas Co. has outstanding $3,000,000 in common stock and $1,500,000 in bonds, and has paid dividends of 12 per cent a year on its common stock in each of the last five years. The company has no preferred stock. The common stock, except for qualifying shares of directors, is owned by the North American Co., which also is the holding company for the Union Electric Co. of Missouri.

NEW ARMY AIR CORPS PILOT CLASSIFICATION

Rank of 'Command Pilot' Created for Veterans in Charge of Large Planes.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—Secretary of War Woodring ordered reclassification today of all air corps flying officers "to provide for increased safety and efficiency."

The new rating of "command pilot" was created for flyers with experience of at least 2000 hours at the controls.

These veterans, officials said, will command such big craft as the army's 17-ton "flying fortresses" with their crews of six or more officers and men. They may not actually pilot the big craft.

Thus the army undertook to solve problems growing out of the increase in size of aircraft and crews and the advancing ages of some able air corps flyers.

The new ratings, in line with the practice of the principal commercial airlines, are:

Command pilot—All officers with 20 years' service in the air corps and 2000 hours' pilot experience or with 15 years' service and 3000 hours' pilot experience.

Senior pilot—Officers with 10 years' service and 1800 hours' pilot experience.

Pilot—All graduates of the air corps flying school.

Combat observer—All graduates of the combat observers' course at the flying school.

Technical observer—Those air corps officers who have not received a higher rating, or who will fly under this category in temporary circumstances when their physical or professional condition may not warrant flying under a higher rating.

Previous ratings were military airplane pilot, airplane pilot and airplane observer.

YALE PARENTS IN DEBATE

Student's Mother to Defend NLRB Against Another's Father.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 25.—The Yale Political Union, arranging for a debate March 1 on the question of amending the Wagner Act, sought help from two students, Snowden Herrick and Ellis A. Ballard.

Herrick persuaded his mother, Mrs. Elinore Herrick, New York, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, to come here to defend the act. Her opponent will be Ballard's father, Ernest S. Ballard, who has represented General Motors and Inland Steel in legal fights with the NLRB.

Federal Trade Board to Review Regulatory Work

commission made 1800 investigations, approved 576 stipulations and issued 305 complaints, 246 of which were followed by orders to cease and desist. It won 18 appeals to the Federal Courts and lost four, one of which, however, was later reversed by the Supreme Court.

Out of 161,825 questionable radio and published advertisements investigated during the last four years, the commission finds that 30.5 per cent dealt with drugs and drug products; 14.9 per cent with illicit sales promotions; 12.5 per cent with correspondence courses and mail order offers; 9 per cent with automobile, radio, refrigerator and other equipment lines; 6.8 per cent with food products and beverages; 6.1 per cent with cosmetics and toilet articles, and 5.3 per cent, with health devices, instruments and apparatus. The remaining 14.9 per cent was divided among miscellaneous items such as apparel, tobacco products, gasoline and lubricants and materials for pet breeding, poultry raising and specialty building.

Expert Assistance Required.

Such inquiries demand expert scientific assistance, especially from analytical chemists, which is generally obtained from other Government departments. The pains which the establishment is willing to take, and the resources it may command, are illustrated by a recent case involving a Chicago firm which manufactures electrical organs. This instrument, according to advertisements, "produces the entire range of tone-coloring necessary for the rendition, without sacrifice, of the great works of classical organ literature; encompasses "the complete gamut of musical tone colors," and possesses "an infinite variety of tones, covering the flute, diapason, string and reed families."

The commission summoned professional musicans and conducted comparative auditory tests. It also brought into play a scientific device known as a "recalibrated tone analyzer," by means of which it was able to announce that only in the flute register, which possesses few overtones, is an electric instrument capable of reproducing the sounds of a pipe organ. "It cannot," the commission determined, "reproduce pipe organ reed, string or diapason tones which require a large number of harmonics in audible amplitudes."

"Findings are," the record continues, "that the approach or build-up of tones, and their decay or fadeout—which are essential to proper rendition of pipe organ music—are not possessed in appreciable amount by the respondent's instrument because of the sudden starting and abrupt stopping due to its electrical motivation." A cease and desist order was issued against the manufacturer.

Vitamin Products Studied.

The new field of vitamins, according to the commission's public records for the last 12 months, has become a happy hunting ground for manufacturers of medicinal preparations. A great Chicago mail order house signed a stipulation to cease representing that adequate amounts of vitamin E are not present in average diets, or that any substantial proportion of the population is exposed to vitamin E deficiency. Another Chicago company agreed to desist from proclaiming that its vitamin EE would relieve lowered basal metabolism, and confessed that "there is no such thing as vitamin EE or double E." A New York manufacturer acknowledged that his product, though advertised to that effect, contains no vitamin EE.

A Pennsylvania firm was brought to deny published claims that vitamin E deficiency "causes loss of charm, pep and vigor" or induces "muscular weakness, dullness of mentality and skin diseases"; and that its product would restore such losses. A concern in the State of Washington was forced to agree that its vitamin A concentrate has not "100 times the strength of cod liver oil," and that it does not cure asthma, prevent hay fever or build up the mucous membrane of the nose. A New York vendor acknowledged the falsity of claims that his "vitamin E" product would eliminate marital unhappiness. A Los Angeles firm was compelled to retract representations that its vitamin-bearing products would cure rheumatism, that vitamin B is "the" nerve vitamin, and that vitamins B and G stimulate appetite and digestion.

Others Sign Stipulations.

A San Francisco firm signed a stipulation to cease representing that its nostrums prevent oak and ivy poisoning, or "stop mosquitoes from sucking human blood." From Lexington, Ky., came acknowledgement that a vendor's "fine old Indian tonic" was not created by Indians, and is not an effective remedy for indigestion, rheumatism, neuritis, heart palpitation, shortness of breath and insomnia. A Muncie (Ind.) firm agreed in writing that its "concentrated modern capsule remedy" is not an "amazing new discovery," compared to which "other medicines are like water;" and that it will not "assure good health and pep" or "accomplish wonders."

A Cincinnati firm promised to cease using the word "laboratories" in its trade name until it actually owns and operates an adequate laboratory, and representing that its "herb tonic" contains herbs, "acts like magic" and is "a Godsend to humanity."

Among other "false and misleading claims" which have been recanted under pressure from the commission are representations regarding alleged cures or preventatives of colds, influenza, pneumonia, scalp disorders, babies' coughs, sunburn, insect bites, athlete's foot, constipation, eczema, neurasthenia, typhoid, jaundice, obesity, corns and bunions, croup, whooping cough, worms and inflamed eyes. A Hollywood company agreed to cease advertising that its "cream" will remove signs of age, or replace with smooth skin scars caused by cuts, burns and smallpox.

Injunction Proceedings.

The commission resorted to injunction proceedings against a Chicago chain of drug stores selling a weight-reducing compound which was found to contain dinitrocresol, a drug the administration of which may be followed by cataracts or other eye afflictions. United States District Judge Barnes issued a preliminary injunction on Sept. 16, 1938. Two weeks later a formal complaint was served on eight respondents, and on Jan. 11 of this year a cease and desist order was entered by the commission.

A New York firm was ordered to cease its unauthorized use of the name of a famous German naturalist in advertising bird foods and remedies, and to desist from claims that its perches, containing a vibrating spring, "simulate the swaying of a tree branch as a bird alights on or jumps from its surface." A specialty firm in Chicago was directed to put an end to representations that its product, found to be merely a gentle laxative, is a cure for distemper, coughs or colds in dogs and other animals.

That his "magic Indian hair-grower" is not imported from India and will not grow hair was confessed in a stipulation by a Chicago vendor; also that his creams will not, as claimed, remove freckles, wrinkles and pimples, and that "the burning of his incenses do not bring luck, friends and prosperity." Several firms were directed to cease the unauthorized use of the word "Doctor" in their trade names. False and fictitious price-listing was found in sales of soap; beside lottery and gambling methods of promotion in the merchandising of chewing gum, candy, bakery products, cigarettes, cameras, fountain pens, clocks, smoking sets and radios.

"Exaggerated and untrue" were pronounced the representations of a Hollywood corporation, against which a cease and desist order was entered, that its preparation will benefit bleached, dyed and gray hair, that it has been tested in the world's foremost laboratories, and that it is used "in Hollywood's studios and by the screen's smartest stars."

Labeling of Fabrics.

One of the most popular department stores in New York was ordered by the commission to cease using the labels "wool," "chiffon," "crepe," "satin" and "taffeta," unless the fabrics so designated are made entirely of wool or silk, or unless they are accompanied by words in conspicuous type specifying each constituent fiber or material. A Park avenue firm was directed to desist from misbranding plush and pile fabrics which simulate furs, from using the labels "seal," "sealskin" and "moleskin," and from adorning such materials with pictures of seals on an ice floe. Another Manhattan department store was ordered to cease employing the terms "silk" and "crepe" on articles not composed of pure silk. Similar directions were issued against three New York dealers in piece goods and fabrics, and a New York vendor of mufflers and scarfs.

A New Jersey manufacturer was commanded to end the use of the word "Sheffield" to describe his silver-plated hollow silverware. A New York company was directed to discontinue false representations that its silverware is sold at special reduced prices and is of specified quality and standard. It was also ordered to cease false claims that it is a manufacturer of silver-plated ware. The commission has issued instructions setting forth the conditions under which the label "stainless steel" is permitted.

Two manufacturers of concrete funeral vaults, one in Ohio and the other in Massachusetts, have been forced to cease using such slogans as "permanent," "everlasting" and "100-year products," and representing that their vaults are waterproof and airtight. A few days ago the commission issued a complaint against an Atlanta company making synthetic tombstones. The respondent was alleged to have represented that its products are made of genuine marble and granite, and that "a footstone is given free with every order for a tombstone or memorial, when such is not the fact."

'City Within City' Ready For Voting on New Pope

Cardinals' Closely Guarded Meeting Place in Sistine Chapel Opened to Few Invited Guests—$100,000 Spent on Preparations.

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 25.—The closely-guarded "city within a city," where the College of Cardinals will meet in secret conclave Wednesday to elect a new Pope, was opened today for the inspection of a few guests.

Sixty-two cardinals, three of them Americans, will be immured there in the Sistine Chapel until they have chosen the 262nd pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church.

Until the necessary two-thirds majority names a successor to Pope Pius XI, the utmost secrecy will guard the proceedings behind bolted doors, bricked-up entrances and other barriers thrown around the temporary conclave quarters constructed in the chapel.

Although the conclave begins March 1, balloting is not expected to start until the following day. Three cardinals from the new world will have time to reach Vatican City for the voting. They are William Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, Sebastiano Cardinal Leme of Brazil and Santiago Cardinal Capello of Argentina, who are scheduled to land at Naples Tuesday, making the conclave complete.

With the 62 cardinals, the "city within a city" will house their assistants, servants, cooks, doctors, barbers, guards and other functionaries—in all about 300 persons.

To care for them, preparations involving an estimated expenditure of $100,000 have been made.

In the dimly-lighted chapel those preparations seemed virtually complete as carpenters and Swiss guards showed a few visitors around beneath the famous frescoes of Michelangelo.

At the altar end of the chapel, the floor has been raised to adjust it to the height of a temporary altar constructed for use during the conclave.

Ranged on three sides of the green felt-carpeted space are 62 seats for the members of the college, each with a purple canopy and a small desk draped also in purple. The chairs, with backs and red-covered wooden seats, are placed in a U-formation, eight facing the altar and 27 lining each side.

The same green felt that covers the floor is used to cover one large table and four slightly smaller ones in the center of the meeting place. These are to be used in counting and tabulating ballots. Quill pens and silver ink-stands are on each desk.

Nine-foot marble screens shut off the conclave meeting place from the remainder of the chapel and a ramp has been erected to give easier access to the raised section by the Cardinals, whose ages average 70 years.

Outside the screened-off area the long floor space is broken only by a tiny stove, freshly coated with aluminum paint. A small stove-pipe rises from it 20 feet and points out through a window to extend on up to the roof. In this stove electors' ballots are burned and the smoke, seen by thousands waiting in St. Peter's Square, signifies to the world the progress of the conclave. White smoke signifies a new Pope has been chosen. Black smoke, made by mixing straw with the ballots, means that no one has received a two-thirds majority.

Elevator Manager at Nevada, Ia., Fatally Wounds Woman Then Takes Poison.

By the Associated Press.

Corbin, 52, had a wife and three children. Miss Berry was employed in his office for three years, leaving to accept a position in a bank. She was a native of Missouri and came here five years ago.

Report on Clayton Road Fire Wrong In One Edition.

In the report of last Wednesday's fire in the building on Clayton road between DeMun and Yale avenues, it was incorrectly stated in one edition of the Post-Dispatch that the fire "apparently started in or near the store occupied by the Midland Importing Co."

The Midland company, a liquor concern, was, as a matter of fact, the only store not damaged by the fire, which began at the other end of the building.

TOLMICH SETS WORLD 65-METER HURDLE RECORD IN NATIONAL MEET

CUNNINGHAM 1500-METER VICTOR OVER GENE VENZKE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Flashing a timely return to his brilliant 1938 form, Allan Tolmich of Detroit raced to a new world record of 8.4 seconds in capturing the National A. A. U. indoor 65-meter hurdle title in the championship tonight before a crowd of 14,000 at Madison Square Garden.

The former Wayne University star, in setting up the new mark, clipped one-tenth of a second off the record he had set in last year's meet. He won by two feet over Roy Staley of the Southern California A. A. Fred Wolcott, the blond out-door streak from Rice Institute, ran third in his first competitive appearance on boards.

Glenn Cunningham, still the miler without a master, switched to 1500 meters and made it the occasion for his fourth national indoor championship at that distance. The Kansan trimmed Gene Venzke by six yards in 3 minutes 54.6 seconds.

Cunningham, who set a world record of 3:48.4 in winning this title a year ago, ran the race the way he liked and won it as he pleased. As he has done in almost all of his races this season, the 29-year-old champion was satisfied with third or fourth place through the early and middle stages, but set out after Venzke as soon as the New York A. C. runner moved into the lead with three laps to go.

Venzke was able to hang onto the runner-up spot, while Chuck Fenske of Wisconsin barely fought off Archie San Romani to take third.

Venzke returned to the boards in the final event of the night, the 2900-meter medley relay, to run the third leg of 800 meters and send his New York A. C. teammate, Phil Graves, off to a lead on the final 1500-meter leg that enabled the winged footers to hang up a world record of 7:08.3 for this event. The former mark, 7:09, was set in 1933 by a Princeton team that was anchored by Bill Bonthron.

The 69th Regiment A. A., with Charley Beetham, 600-meter winner, running the anchor leg, cracked an eight-year-old world record in capturing the 1600-meter relay title in 3 minutes 17.2 seconds, six-tenths faster than the previous mark set on March 7, 1931, by the University of Pennsylvania's wonder team.

Armstrong to Defend Titles Here March 16 Against Lew Feldman

By W. J. McGoogan

Lew Feldman, 31-year-old lightweight boxer born in Scotland, will get another chance at Henry Armstrong, this time at the Auditorium, March 16, when he meets Henry over the 15-round route with Armstrong's light-weight and welterweight titles at stake.

The match, promoted by Tom Packs with Larry Atkins as matchmaker, was closed yesterday with the two men agreeing to weigh-in at 135 pounds which Russell Murphy, chairman of the Missouri Athletic Commission, agreed would place both of Armstrong's championships in jeopardy.

Feldman had a chance at Armstrong once before when Hammering Henry knocked him out in five rounds in the Hippodrome at New York last year.

Lew recently won an important victory when he stopped Norment Quarles and it was this triumph which really decided Atkins he would make a good match for Armstrong.

Among His Victims.

Since 1933, Feldman, who has been boxing nearly a dozen years, has fought upwards of 100 bouts, winning more than half of them.

He has defeated such fighters as Howard Scott, Ritchie Fontaine, Eddie Zivic, Joe Ghnouly, Midget Wolgast, Mike Belloise, Petey Sarron, former world's featherweight champion, Battling Battalino and others.

He has lost some bouts, too, be-

WRAY'S COLUMN

And You Think You Have Worries!

WORRIES? Bo, you don't know what they mean. Ask the manager of a major league baseball club—you can learn about worries from him. Like a turtle without a shell, his neck always is out. And the man with the ax is not far behind him.

Somebody else picks a bunch of baseball players and hands them to the manager. He hasn't anything to say about their selection. But if the team fails from any cause — illness, accidents, sore-arm pitchers, sore-headed players, better talent on other teams—off comes the manager's head. He's the scapegoat.

As a result, baseball managers cannot figure on much more than two years' tenure of office with any one club.

Six managers — four of them brand-new and two of them coming up with half a season's experience—will be on the firing line this campaign. Ray Blades of the Cards, Fred Haney of the Browns, "Doc" Prothro of the Phillies and Durocher of the Dodgers will be new to the spotlight; Hartnett of the Cubs and Del Baker of the Tigers were mid-season experiments last year.

WILL THEY BE NERVOUS!

They will, if they recall the short-lived experiences of many big league leaders. Here in St. Louis since 1900 managers have been fired from the Cardinals after only two years and four months' average tenure of office. With the Browns they lasted on an average two years and seven months.

Still more discouraging is the fact that only four or five of the discharged leaders of both clubs subsequently made good in the major leagues.

Only two former managers of the Browns ever held a major league managership subsequently. And, of all persons, guess who one of them was? Branch Rickey, who later served five and one-half years as leader of the Cardinals before Hornsby crowded him out of the job.

The other? That was "Silent" Dan Howley, who took a whirl at Cincinnati after parting with Phil Ball.

Huggins and McKechnie were

METZ LEADS IN GEORGIA GOLF

By the Associated Press.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Feb. 25.—Dick Metz, Kansas-born professional golfing ace from Chicago, shot a par-shattering 68 to take the first round lead today in the $3000 Thomasville Open tournament.

The 30-year-old Metz was one of nine players to crack par over the rain-soaked Glen Arven course. His four-under-standard figures gave him a one-stroke lead going into the final 36 holes tomorrow.

Another Chicago sharpshooter, John Bulla, set the pace for most of the day with an opening 69 and tall Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., winner of the big, New Orleans Open purse last week, came in late with a great finish to equal that figure. Picard finished in the rain with two birdies and an eagle on the last four holes.

Metz, winner here two years ago, played methodical golf most of the way, but he rolled in his share of good-sized putts in accumulating 14 pars and four birdies. He hit the cup with putts of 15 and 20 feet despite the downpour and on other holes chipped deadly.

Long-knocking Jimmy Thomson of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., listed among the favorites, pulled a shoulder muscle in driving from the fourth tee and had to withdraw.

Uniteds Lose in Kansas City With Cochran Playing

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 25.—The St. Louis United Service basketball team, tired after a hard trip through a snowstorm, was eliminated in the Naismith invitational basketball tournament here tonight by the Kansas City Simmons, 29-22.

Denny Cochran, former star at St. Louis University, but recently dismissed from the college squad, scored only three points and committed three fouls. Cochran was signed by the United Service team especially for this tournament.

Beck starred for the St. Louis five with 10 points. Nodler of Kansas City was held to one point in the first half but cut loose in the final 20 minutes and at the finish had 12 points to lead his club in scoring.

SEABISCUIT 15 TO 1 IN CLOSING ODDS ON SANTA ANITA HANDICAP

Kayak II was the favorite at 6 to 1 to win, 2 to 1 to run second and even to show, in the Santa Anita Handicap to be run Saturday, in final future quotations, according to James Carroll, who reported yesterday the closing of books. Charles S. Howard's Seabiscuit, which has shown lameness in the last week, was at 15.

Second choices, at 8 to 1, were Jacola and Specify; third choices, at 10 to 1, Heelfly, Impound and Xalapa Clown, and at 12 to 1, War Minstrel and Ligaroti.

PEPPER MARTIN ACCEPTS TERMS; BOTH TEAMS AT CAMP THIS WEEK

By J. Roy Stockton

Johnny Leonard Martin, the Wild Horse of the Osage, has agreed to terms with the Cardinals for 1939, and the spring training phase of the new baseball season is just around the corner. Secretary Leo Ward of the Redbirds is on his way to St. Petersburg, to prepare for the arrival of the Cardinal athletes Thursday and Scout Ray Cahill and Coach Freddy Hofmann of the Browns will depart this evening for San Antonio.

A few athletes are still unsigned. Joe Medwick, the important left fielder for the Cardinals; Catcher Mickey Owen, and Don Padgett, who would like to be an outfielder instead of a catcher, are negotiating for better terms. Pitcher Buck Newsom of the Browns and a few others are not satisfied with what Bill DeWitt and Don Barnes have offered.

But holdouts or no holdouts, the Brownie batterymen will swing into action Wednesday, while all the signed Cardinals are scheduled to hold their first workout Thursday, under Raymond Francis Blades, the new manager.

Fred Haney, new leader of the Browns, will arrive at San Antonio tomorrow, he informed the St. Louis office, and will go into a huddle with Cahill and Hofmann on spring training plans.

St. Louis Boy Gets Trial.

Several members of the Browns who live in the St. Louis district, or who will stop over momentarily on their way south, will be in a party leaving St. Louis at 5:30 o'clock tomorrow evening, Secretary Charley DeWitt announced last night. They are Emil Bildilli, Bill Cox, Ed Cole, Ewald Pyle, of the roster record, and Lloyd Hanning, a pitcher from Cedar Rapids, and Bob Bergin, former St. Louis U. High School pitcher. The young-

Muny Soccer Again Postponed; Midweek Games May Be Played

Successive weeks of postponement of Municipal Soccer Association playoffs may force some mid-week games, it was said by a member of the league executive committee last night.

It is estimated that the playoffs, in which six group winners are involved in a two-defeats-and-out competition, will take up five rounds, which ordinarily would mean five Sundays. Without further interruption, this would run the series through April 2, which is much later than the Park Department plans. From three weeks to a month is needed to transform the soccer fields into baseball diamonds. One midweek doubleheader, possibly at Walsh Stadium at night, would relieve the situation, it is believed.

The winter's heaviest snow prevented the playing of today's scheduled program at Fairground Park, which will be held over to next Sunday. The teams are paired as follows: Taits vs. Maloneys; Zeltmans vs. Gems; Schumachers vs. German Sport Club.

Whichcee, win $13, place $6, show $4; Today, place $5.40, show $4; Congressman, show $4.40.

Whichcee went to the front early to open up a good lead rounding the first turn and, increasing his advantage on the back stretch, was never in serious trouble, winning with speed in reserve. Today was in close quarters rounding the first turn but improved his position readily thereafter in a good effort. Congressman swerved slightly right after the start but quickly raced to a contending position and was going fairly well at the end. Cravat was slow to get in stride and badly outrun for the first half mile, was forced to race very wide when making his move but was going strongest of all at the end. Heelfly, equipped with a blinker at the gate, acted and broke well and raced evenly.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 25.—Maj. Austin C. Taylor's Whichcee captured the $10,000 San Antonio Handicap in a stunning upset today and emerged as a strong candidate in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap next Saturday.

Leaving the favored Sorteado, Heelfly, Jacola and others to straggle in out of the money, Maj. Taylor's five-year-old gelding jumped into an early lead and, given a rousing ride by Jockey Basil James, clung to it over the mile and one furlong route and won by more than two lengths.

Completing the rout of the betting favorites, Neil McCarthy's Today, the seven-year-old reconditioned bay which upset the great Seabiscuit Feb. 14 when the latter went lame, ran second, and Fred Turner's Congressman, a four-year-old running as a field entry, slipped in third.

Sorteado, C. S. Howard's Argentine importation, Jacola, Edward Friendly's 1938 filly queen; Townsend B. Martin's Cravat, Ligaroti, Gosum and the rest of the field of 17 starters could offer no excuses for losing to Whichcee. The Taylor horse served warning he would be dangerous one week ago when he ran third to Kayak II on his first start of the year.

The winner's time was 1:49 2-5.

Whichcee paid $13, $6 and $4; Today, an entry with Gosum, paid $5.40 and $4, and Congressman, $4.40.

Sorteado dropped out of the competition at the one-mile mark, and Cravat and Jacola, making their initial race at Santa Anita, were slow getting started and never were serious threats. Heelfly was permitted to wear special blinkers at the start, and while he came up on the inside as they turned for home, never was able to overhaul the leaders. He finished sixth behind Cravat and Gosum.

Sorteado finished thirteenth and his South American "cousin," Ligaroti, ran last. Victory to the Canadian sportsman was worth $10,950 net, while Today won $2000, Congressman $1000 and Cravat $500.

Bourbon King, Ossabaw and Wild Turkey were scratched.

Winner of $20,000 Florida Stake Stablemate of Lawrin, '38 Victor

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 25.—Technician, like Lawrin, a speedy son of Insco, probably assured himself the favorite's role in the Kentucky Derby when he outran and outgamed Volitant in the stretch to win the Flamingo Stakes by a half-length at Hialeah Park today.

Running comfortably in second place all the way around until they hit the final furlong, Technician came on the outside under a hard hand-ride by Ira Hanford to catch Volitant, ridden by Don Meade, about 50 yards from the wire and then slid past him with seeming ease.

The winner's time for the mile and a furlong was 1:50 1-5, well off the track and world record of 1:48 1-5 held jointly by Brevity and Stagehand, but fast enough considering a strong breeze the field faced on the back stretch. He started a favorite and paid only $5 for his victory, while Volitant, second in the betting, paid $3.70 to place. Volitant carried the silks of the Saratoga stable of George Bull and John Morris.

H. M. Woolf.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Day Off took third, a length and a half behind Volitant and six good lengths in front of the fourth-place Timeful. The others wound up in this order: Shambles, Chalmac, Easy Mon, Joharie and Get Off.

Heading for the Derby.

The victory was worth exactly $20,000 to Herbert M. Woolf, jubilant owner of both Technician and Lawrin, which won the race last year and went on to capture the Kentucky Derby. With Technician's performance today, Trainer Ben Jones was more confident than ever of taking the three-year-old classic twice in succession.

Technician looked like a great colt every step of the way today. While Easy Mon, Get Off and others held up the start for five minutes as they danced around outside the gate, the favorite scarcely rippled a muscle, but he was ready when the bell rang and jumped in Technician ran like a real good colt. He broke well, was placed behind Volitant for the first seven furlongs, then began to move up. He was steered to the outside of the leader, caught Volitant in the last sixteenth and won going away. Volitant was whipped away from the gate and assumed an easy lead going into first turn. He was steadied along and, saving ground, stood long drive gamely. Day Off got away well in motion but was eased back off the fast early pace, made his bid in stretch and was a fast going third. Timeful was a bit slow to get into his stride, was taken wide all the way and was next best. Shambles never a factor. He beat a lot of tired horses. Easy Mon followed pace for six furlongs then quit. Joharie outrun from the start. Chalmac displayed keen speed for six furlongs, then tired.

SABIN REACHES THIRD ROUND OF NATIONAL INDOOR TENNIS

FAVORITE IS EXTENDED TO THREE SETS

New Orleans Youth Upsets Gilbert Hall; Gene Mako, Ill, Has Match Postponed Until Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The seeded lists in the national indoor tennis championships were smashed twice in second round competition today, but the upsets played only second fiddle to the one that almost happened—but didn't—to favorite Wayne Sabin.

Bill McGehee, 19-year-old New Orleans youngster, who plays for nearby Scarborough School, and John H. Pitman, a lightly-regarded New Yorker, were the "upsetters" as the men's singles swept past the second-round hurdle. McGehee outlasted J. Gilbert Hall, Orange, N. J., veteran, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4, and Pitman surprised Frank A. Froebling, of Chicago, 6-3, 6-3.

Mako Has Cold.

Before they clicked, however, the day's spotlight was taken and held by the stiff battle Sabin, the Portland, Ore., Davis Cup hopeful and this tournament's ranking performer, was given by Leonard Hartman, an ex-Columbia University crew man.

Playing as though he had the idea it was a tea party, Sabin was behind in the first set; never had a look-in during the second and had to take three of the last four games in the third before pulling out the match, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4.

Five of the other six members of the ranking men's contingent swept through second round matches handily, while Gene Mako, the blond internationalist from Los Angeles, had his contest postponed until Monday. He had a heavy cold.

Miss Taubele Wins.

The women's seeded brigade of four, headed by Norma Taubele, little New York red head, had an easier time of it getting by first-round play. Miss Taubele set the pace by overwhelming Mrs. Mary King-Smith Prosser, Bronxville, N. Y., with the loss of only one game to lead Helen Bernhard of Forest Hills, Millicent Hirsh of New York and Barbara Nields of Cleveland, seeded behind her, into the second round.

Sidney Wood, tall, thin New Yorker, favored with Sabin and Mako in the current play, met only mild resistance in trouncing Robert Kelleher, Forest Hills, 6-3, 6-2, to reach the third round of men's singles. Frank Bowden, New Yorker seeded fourth and Joey Fishbach, St. John's (Brooklyn) University netman and national junior champion, also came through with uneventful straight set verdicts.

Gregory Mangin of Forest Hills, former four-time winner of the national indoor title, met unexpectedly tough going before overcoming Edward Jenkins, New York, 10-8, 6-2.

ARMSTRONG TO DEFEND TITLES HERE MARCH 16 AGAINST LEW FELDMAN

ing stopped by Frankie Terranova in 1937 in addition to the kayo he suffered at the hands of Armstrong.

He fought Billy Beauhuld a draw in eight rounds in New York, Dec. 21, 1936, and later Beauhuld was stopped by Armstrong in Armstrong's first bout after winning the featherweight championship, which Henry later relinquished to forestall the necessity of making the 126-pound limit.

Armstrong is now recognized as the welterweight and the lightweight titleholder of the world.

As Good as Could Be Had.

Murphy, in speaking of the match, said Feldman's record is such as to convince him that he is just about as good a man as could be had to test Henry here.

In the Quarles match, fought Feb. 21 in New York, Lew hit Quarles with a solid right to the jaw in the fifth round and dropped Norment for a nine count. Quarles fell backward and struck his head. He was groggy when he rose and was knocked down twice more before the referee stopped the fight.

In the first four rounds, according to the New York Sun, Quarles had the better of the going and Feldman was groggy in the third from a smashing right to the head.

It was the third meeting of the pair, Quarles having won decisions twice previously.

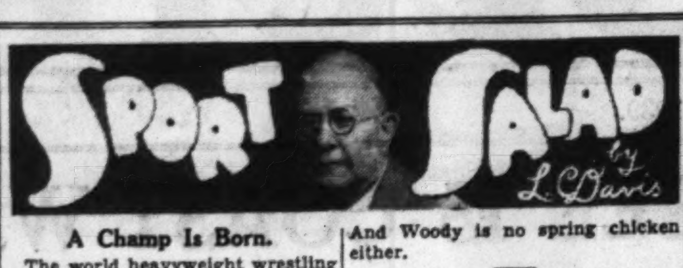
"Popular" Prices.

Atkins stated he had made arrangements to increase the seating capacity of the Auditorium for the contest and the prices would be popular which likely means that they will range from $1.10 to $3.60.

It will be the first time in the history of boxing here (at least modern history) that a St. Louis born fighter has defended a world's championship in a home ring.

Armstrong, who recently signed to box Davey Day of Chicago in a title fight in New York, is to box Bobby Pacho in Havana, Cuba, Friday night. He is expected to come directly to St. Louis from Havana.

Armstrong, too, is scheduled to go to England to defend his welterweight championship against the holder of the British Empire welter crown. Later, Henry is scheduled to meet Lou Ambers in defense of his 135-pound title. So it is clear that Henry has a pretty busy schedule ahead.



A Champ Is Born.

The world heavyweight wrestling championship of the National Wrestling Association changed hands and feet again Thursday night at the Arena when Lou Thesz kicked the crown off Everett Marshall's head. Two referees went down before the furious onslaught of the enraged pachyderms before the issue was decided in favor of the local boy.

LOU THESZ again is wrestling champ,
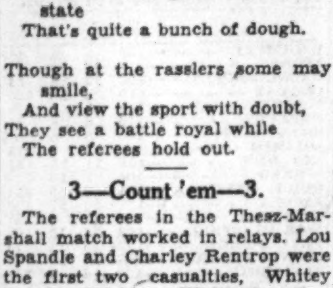
On Lou there are no fleas;
He took Ev. Marshall into camp,
Likewise three referees.



A nineteen-thousand-dollar gate
Turned out to see the show;
While not six figures, we would state
That's quite a bunch of dough.

Though at the rasslers some may smile,
And view the sport with doubt,
They see a battle royal while
The referees hold out.

3—Count 'em—3.

The referees in the Thesz-Marshall match worked in relays. Lou Spandle and Charley Rentrop were the first two casualties, Whitey Brexler finishing. Whitey is a fireman and refused to be put out.

Tony Galento got Abe Feldman in the third round of their scheduled 10-round bout at Miami. A report of the fight said that at the end Feldman had a knot on the side of his face the size of a lemon. Indicating that lemons, like chickens, come home to roost.

Speaking of chickens coming home to roost, see where Woody English has gone back to the Cubs. And Woody is no spring chicken either.

The Missouri Athletic Commission henceforth will regard wrestling matches as exhibitions only. That about makes it unanimous.

Not that the M. A. C. ever did take the ground and lofty tumblers seriously but it thought it was time to put itself on record officially. So it being now understood that no championships are involved, except in the minds of the promoters, we look for bigger and better business all along the line.

IN which we do not find a thing,
The artists' style to cramp;
For every guy must have his fling,
And every state its champ.

At the age of 71, Ed Barrow took time out to compile an all-time all-star baseball team. They all fall sooner or later.

Strangely enough he includes only two modern players on his team, to wit: Babe Ruth and Bill Dickey. The other seven positions go to Ty Cobb, Honus Wagner, Christy Matthewson, Nap Lajoie, Jimmy Collins, Hal Chase and Tris Speaker.

In picking his all-star team, Barrow throws out the record book and relies on what he has seen and knows. Looks like the old boy has something there.

A guy can see a whole lot in 71 years if he keeps his eyes open.

See where Maxy Rosenbloom has only 16 knockouts to his credit in more than 300 bouts covering a period of 16 years. On the other hand Slapsie has heard the birds twitter only twice, leaving a balance largely in his favor.

Cedar Rapids Echo.

A young ball player signed to an Elmira contract will go through his paces with the Brooklyn Dodgers at their Clearwater (Fla.) training camp next month and if official members of the Cardinals happen to see him in action, their minds will flash back to the Cedar Rapids decision by Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis last spring.

The player is Harold (Pete) Reiser and Scout Charley Barrett of the Redbirds still feels bad every time he hears the boy's name mentioned.

"There's a boy that's going to go places," Uncle Charley said a bit sadly. "We picked him up at a trial camp at the Public Schools Stadium when he was only 17 years old. I took a shine to him myself and we sent him to New Iberia, La. They couldn't see him down there and so I got hold of him and packed him to Union Springs, Ala. After a week they quit on him there, so I took him to Newport, Ark., and he finished the season there and did all right.

"In the spring of 1938 I took Reiser to Winter Haven and paid his expenses myself at the training school there. Everybody liked him there. Blades wanted him for Rochester and then Judge Landis comes along and makes him a free agent.

"That kid is going to be a star. He's a switch hitter and I'm not fooling when I say he can throw as well with one hand as he can with the other—and he has a great arm. After the Judge turned him loose the Brooklyn club stepped in and signed him and sent him to Superior, Wis., where last year he batted about .330 and hit 19 home runs. Brooklyn has him ticketed for Elmira this year and that's a jump from Class D to a Class A League. Yes, we lost something when we lost that boy."

Better Than Bottomley.

Didn't Charley have anything to feel happy about? Some promising young player who hadn't been freed by Judge Landis?

"I'll say we have," Barrett replied, beaming happily again. "I wanted to bet Branch Rickey a hat this morning that the boy I'm talking about will be in the big leagues in three years. But he wouldn't bet me. Know why? He figured I was right. And I figure that way, too.

"This boy's name is Russell Leach. He's a St. Louis boy, too, and he was recommended to me by Connie Reed, who by the way is the man who found Charley Grimm. Leach is 6 feet tall, weighs 180 pounds and he's only a youngster, too, 18 years old, and he reminds me a whole lot of Jim Bottomley, only he's better than Bottomley was when we found him.

"This boy Leach was at Monett last year. That's one of our farm clubs and Leach hit .356 there. So we took him and sent him to New Iberia, which is in a better league and at New Iberia the boy hit .320. Watch him move to the big leagues. It won't take long. He's a left-handed batter and thrower and sure knows how to handle himself. He's a natural at first base, with a good arm, and shifty with his feet. He's going to play at Albany, Ga., next season and you'll be seeing him in a Cardinal uniform one of these days."

A Shrinking Fine.

"Can you use one more story about George Sisler?"

It was Willis Johnson talking. Willis, you know, was secretary of the Browns for 20 years or more and was on duty during Sisler's days with the St. Louis American League club, as player and manager. Certainly we could use another story on Sisler. And here it is:

The Browns were in the East, with Sisler as manager. Johnson was getting his mail at the desk at the old Aldine Hotel, in Philadelphia, when Sisler came out of the elevator.

"Willis," said Sisler, looking down at his own feet and nervously outlining little circles with the toe of one shoe, "what do other managers in the major leagues do when a player stays out all night? I mean how much do they unusually fine a man who does that?"

"Oh, $250 or $300," Johnson replied.

"Gee, gosh, but that's too much money," and Sisler blushed and made more and faster circles with the toe of his shoe.

"Well, George, you asked me and I told you," said Johnson tersely.

The Way of a Fine.

Sisler continued peering at his feet. Finally he said: "What do you do in such cases? Do you notify the home office?"

"Yes, you have to do that and the office takes the fine out of the player's next pay check."

"Well, you'd better send a telegram," said Sisler. "Joe Doques was out all night, drunk. But I don't want to take $300 from him. That's too much money. Better make it $200."

"Whatever you say, George," said Willis, reaching for a telegram blank.

George moved away nervously to the dining room, but before Willis had fairly started the telegram, Sisler was back.

"I've been thinking it over," he said, "and $200 is a lot of money. Better make that $150, if you haven't sent that telegram."

The Boy Finally Called.

So Johnson rephrased the telegram and called a messenger boy. But before the boy came, Sisler was back again.

"You haven't sent that wire yet?" he asked shyly.

"Not yet," Johnson replied.

"Let's make that $100," said Sisler.

"Whatever you say," Willis agreed, and Sisler went back to his breakfast. He didn't have time to finish it, however, when he appeared again. Had the telegram been sent? Yes, the boy had just taken it.

"Too bad," Sisler said gravely. "I thought I ought to cut that to $50. You know $100 is a lot of money to take away from a ball player."

All big league managers aren't like that, Willis told us, concluding the story.

"The other contrast was Hornsby. He'd just call me and tell me to telegraph another fine for a certain catcher. 'Make it 500 this time,' he'd say, and he made them all stick, too."

$219,695 TAXES ON SPORT PAID BY MINNESOTA U.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Feb. 25.—Announcing winding up of the State's long fight with the Federal Government over payment of admission taxes on athletic contests at the University of Minnesota, Julius A. Schmahl, State Treasurer, said today the taxes, totaling $219,695, had been paid in full.

The Government's demand for 6 per cent interest, part of it dating back to 1932, when the tax became applicable, was turned down, Schmahl said.

The Internal Revenue Department contended the State owed the Federal admission tax on every ticket sold to university football, basketball, baseball and other games. The university claimed the tickets were tax-exempt under the institution's charter.

A decision by the Supreme Court of the United States held that such taxes must be paid.

PEPPER MARTIN ACCEPTS TERMS; BOTH CLUBS AT CAMP THIS WEEK

sters will serve as batting practice pitchers and also will have a chance to move into the Brownie fold, if they show enough. On the way South, John Sams, another young pitcher, who was with Springfield, Ill., last year, will join the party.

The Cardinals were happy last night to announce that Pepper Martin had fallen into line. Pepper failed to reach an agreement with Branch Rickey at a conference here recently, but took his contract with him, back to his Oklahoma home and said he thought a compromise with honor could be reached without much difficulty. No official statement has been made about the Johnny Martin contract, but it is assumed that the Wild Horse was asked to take a substantial cut in salary. He wired Rickey last evening that he finally had decided to sign the contract. Martin probably received about $9000 last year and was offered about $7500 for his services in 1939.

Breadon May Sign Medwick.

With training scheduled to start Thursday, the signing of Medwick probably will be turned over to President Sam Breadon, who will be in St. Petersburg March 1. Sam signed Joe last year, after a short conference at the training camp.

According to Ed Staples, director of information for the Cardinals, only six players on the roster are unsigned. They are Medwick, Padgett and Owen of the 1938 squad and Herman Franks, Harold Epps and Johnny Hopp, recruits. Franks is a catcher from Sacramento, Epps an outfielder from Houston and Hopp a fly-chaser from the Rochester club.

The signed contract of Mel Mazzera, outfielder, was received at the Browns' office yesterday. Mazzera was in 86 games last year, batting .279. He bats and throws left-handed, and makes his home in Stockton, Cal. He won two games last year with ninth-inning home runs, both coming in pinch-hitting roles.

Macks and Indians In Philadelphia's First Night Game, May 16

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25.

THE Athletics and the Cleveland Indians will meet here on May 16 in Philadelphia's first major league night baseball game.

WASHINGTON U. ENTERS 14 IN VALLEY MEET

Fourteen Washington University Bears have been entered in the sixteenth annual Missouri Valley Conference indoor track and field meet to be held next Saturday at Drake University, Des Moines, Ia. The Bruins will compete in 11 individual events and the mile relay.

Last year, Coach Huddy Hellmich's squad took third honors in the Valley indoor competition. As usual, the Red and Green will be handicapped by the lack of proper indoor training facilities, their only running to date coming on the 17-and-a-fraction laps-to-the-mile track in Francis Gymnasium.

Heading this year's entry list will be a number of veterans including Capt. Fred Leyhe, Chester Schaum, Reyborn Gordon, Bob Gerst, Bill Brooks, Read Boles, Elmer Miller, Evan Wright, Des Lee and Paul Gutman.

Schaum is counted on for a good race in the 50-yard dash and 440-yard run, while Leyhe should be good for points in the quarter-mile event.

Schaum, Gutman, Leyhe and Brooks form a veteran relay combination and have already competed in the Illinois Relays this season, although they failed to carry off any honors in that meet.

Gerst has been among the leading jumpers of the conference for the past two years and will undoubtedly finish among the first four again this year.

The complete entry list:

50-yard dash—Schaum and Harry Davis.

50-yard high hurdles—Boles and Wallis Schoenbeck.

50-yard low hurdles—Boles and Schoenbeck.

440-yard run—Schaum, Gutman, Leyhe and Brooks.

880-yard run—Miller and Brooks.

Mile run—Gordon, Miller and Wright.

Two-mile run—Gordon, Luethge, Miller and Wright.

Shot put—Desmond Lee.

High and broad jump—Gerst and Robert Scott.

Mile relay—Schaum, Gutman, Leyhe and Brooks.

The Allhoffs' five-man team went into second place behind the Wilke's, scoring 3081 with a handicap of 81.

Steve Hesse led the singles bowl with 671, his handicap was 81 pins. E. A. Lipps was second with 660, with an 84-pin handicap and F. H. Beneke, third, with 659—87-pin handicap.

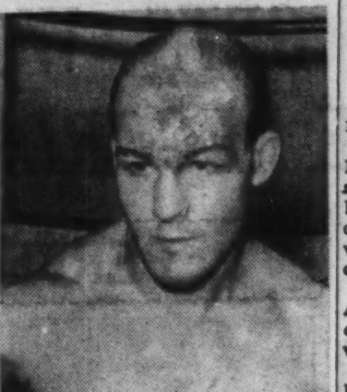
Ceccarelli, a "Club Fighter," Works Here for Moore Bout

Italian Light-Heavyweight Wades in With Real Power; Show Thursday Night at Coliseum.



CECCARELLI

Domenic Ceccarelli, the bald Italian, who is to meet Archie Moore, St. Louis Negro, in a 10-round bout at the Coliseum Thursday night, has impressed favorably those who have seen him work out at the West End Gymnasium here since his arrival.

Ceccarelli is known to the trade as a club fighter, that is, one who is not particularly long on science, but makes up for that lack with his aggressiveness and punching power. He is ever ready to wade in and trade punches. He has been fighting out of New York during his two years in the United States.

Moore, a real middleweight, got tired waiting around for the 160-pound boys, so he had to step out of his class to get a match and meet Ceccarelli, who is a light-heavyweight.

The agreed weight for the contest is 170 pounds, but yesterday Domenic weighed 174 to 162 for Moore. Thus the Italian likely will have a weight edge of 8 to 10 pounds when the two boys get into the ring.

In another 10-rounder, Tiger Walker of Cincinnati takes on Jackie Burke, who gave Fritzie Zivic such a warm reception when they met at the Coliseum recently.

In three four-rounders, Dave Riley meets Bill Henley; Eddie Lee, little St. Louis-born Chinese boxer, opposes Billy Born of Belleville, while James Dobbins, huge Negro heavyweight, boxes an opponent yet to be named.

Among Ceccarelli's sparring partners has been the clever Negro, Deacon Logan, while Moore has been working with Monroe Harrison at the Slaughter A. C.

WRAY'S COLUMN

successful comebacks among the Cardinals' many leaders.

Thus the newcomers face the prospect of something like two and one-half years' life as big league leaders, and only one chance in eight or 10 of ever being hired to manage any other major league group, when fired.

Seem to Like It.

IT'S A WONDER ANYBODY ever wants to tackle one of these jitterburg managing jobs. Yet see the scramble for a chance to get on the anxious seat when an opening occurs.

To some of us it seems that the manager is, rather unfairly, placed on a spot. It appears in many cases that the man who supplies the baseball players ought to be fired in case of a team's failure, rather than the manager.

After all, the pilot of today seems little else than a liaison officer between the ball field and the front office. One or two are vested with responsibility — the others are just Punch-and-Judy boys.

MANAGERS OF LONG AGO were more fortunate—or were they? At least they were made responsible for assembling material as well as for its success on the field. They also had to ride herd on the players' behavior —all too frequently it was misbehavior.

When things went wrong with their clubs they were held responsible.

That situation gradually has disappeared, with the advent of the business manager. Fellows like Bob Quinn set the tide in a new direction.

Quinn was an experienced baseball man. He knew players. He knew how to bargain. He contended that the hiring of baseball players and arguments over their salaries should be taken out of the manager's hands.

Managers who had to sign their players and have disputes with them about salaries frequently lost the good will of their men. They could not get the whole-hearted support of their players, Quinn contended.

If club officials do the signing, players can't get sore at the manager, he argued. This started club pilots on the road to the "straw manager" era and the coming of the chain store did the rest.

As Comiskey Saw It.

THE MANAGERS—they were called "captains" then—of teams in early times viewed matters differently. Away back before the American League was born or the chain store system thought of, the Old Roman, Charles Comiskey, observed to a reporter: "A manager should have a free rein in running a team. As soon as he allows owners to interfere with him he lowers himself in the estimation of the public. If the team commences to lose games the people become disgusted and stay away, whereas, if they knew that the manager was being allowed to do his best they would remain loyal even if the team did lose . . .

"If the people believe a team is doing its best to win, they will turn out no matter what position the club is in. But if they believe that a team from a large city has ideas of selling players of class for financial gain then the fans will not lend their support to the club, if it is losing. These things have hurt the game to a great extent, in the second-rate cities.

"Another fruitful cause of shrinkage in gate receipts is in reports of internal dissensions in a home club. If the fans have cause to believe that the setbacks are caused by interference on the part of the club owners or minor officials they become disgusted and remain away."

IMAGINE THE MANAGER of a team today telling the club owner: "Keep your hands off this club—I'm running it!"

And, while giving the manager full authority to build up a club and spend its money for players might place the responsibility more correctly, we doubt if it would help big league pilots to improve their teams.

That, of course, is because even with unlimited money you can't always buy the players you want or need. Neither can club owners. It would seem fairer in some cases, however, to give some managers a better chance to make good than can be possible in the couple of years now considered a sufficient test.

WALTER PLEKAN NEW Y. M. C. A. HANDBALL KING

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, O., Feb. 25.—Walter Plekan, 22-year-old Buffalo, N. Y., star, won the National Y. M. C. A. handball singles championship today when he coasted to a 21-7, 21-9 victory over Sam Atcheson, six-time champion from Memphis, Tenn.

The youthful Plekan, National A. A. U. Junior King, was too fast and clever for his veteran rival and wore him down in a hurry.

The doubles title went to Al Zerbo and Dr. Milton Lappin of Detroit as they downed Stanley Hitz and Hubert Simmons of Harrisburg, Pa., 21-18, 21-14.

The consolation honors were taken by Joe Kulwicki of Cleveland as he defeated Jerome Smith of Cleveland, 21-17, 21-13.

Plekan succeeds Earl Srenco of St. Louis as the national titleholder. Srenco won the event last year at Detroit, but did not go to the tournament at Toledo.

So far as the St. Louis U. Billikens are concerned, the basketball season is over and, if any tears were being shed by them, they were not discernible by the observing eye.

A scant 250 watched the obsequities at the university gym last night as the Billikens lost to the Missouri Miners from Rolla, 25 to 24. This victory broke a 15-game losing streak for the Miners and made the Billikens' record for the season five victories and 16 defeats for a percentage of .240.

The going was close throughout, with the Miners leading at halftime, 16 to 13. The Billikens caught up in the second period and even went ahead temporarily, but two free throws made by Kamper proved the margin of victory.

Herb Kamper, former Beaumont High star, was the top player of the game, scoring 16 of his team's points. Dudenhoeffer was high for the Billikens with eight.

Billikens Start in Front.

St. Louis started briskly as Fleming and Dudenhoeffer scored set-up shots, the Miners not counting until Kamper sank a field goal after three minutes of play. The same former Beaumont High star accounted for a free throw a few seconds later.

After five minutes the Billikens were leading 7-5, Kamper having scored all the Miners' points. There was a lull for a while but then the ubiquitous Kamper got another from the floor and it was all tied up. The Miners took the lead on Niemiller's successful free throw.

Watts then came through with a fielder and a pair of frees to extend the Miners' advantage to 13-7. Songer came in for St. Louis to score from the floor but this was matched by one by Kamper, scoring his ninth point of the period. In the last five minutes the Billikens gained a bit but the score was 16-13 in favor of the Miners at the half.

Score Tied, 20-20.

In the second half there was no scoring for three minutes. Then Fleming put one in and the Billikens were only a point from a tie. Another three minutes passed scorelessly, after which Watts and Al Dudenhoeffer exchanged baskets. The Miners still led by a point.

This status quo was maintained until a free throw by Dudenhoeffer tied in at 18-all. With the period half gone, it was 20-20 on baskets by Kamper and Carlew.

Kamper's free throw broke the deadlock and the Miners went three points up on two more "frees" by the high-scoring Kamper. A free throw by Fleming of the Billikens put the teams two points apart.

With three minutes remaining, Dudenhoeffer's field goal and free throw put the Billiken one up, the first time they had been in the lead since early in the game.

Kamper, however, put in two free throws in the final two minutes for the Miners, who then kept control for the remainder of the game.

P. WANER AGAIN REJECTS OFFER

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 25.—Paul Waner, veteran star of the Pittsburgh Pirate outfield, today declined a second contract and the management let it be known there probably wouldn't be another offer.

A few days ago, Waner rejected the first contract, calling for a 45 per cent cut in pay from his salary of last season—reputed to be $16,000.

Pirate President Bill Benswanger, diclosing Waner refused the club's second bid in a telegram from his Sarasota (Fla.) home, declared:

"In an effort to adjust the differences we offered Paul a 20 per cent increase over our original offer. Paul has seen fit to decline it.

"We are sorry, but that is as far as we can go."

The batting average of the three-time National League batting champion dropped to .280 last season. He will be 36 years old in April.

DeMolay Games.

The Ferguson DeMolay basketball team will meet the Centralia (Ill.) five in an exhibition game on the DeMolay program at Bethlehem Hall this afternoon. In league contests Granite City will meet Rabboni, Carondelet will play Harmony and Sentinel will oppose Maplewood.

At the quarter, rounding the first turn, he was two lengths behind, and the same at the half. At three-fourths of a mile Meade began stretching Volitant out, and he picked up another length on the son of Insco. The shout went up: "Volitant's got it." But they didn't know Technician, out to score his third victory in four starts here.

As they came around the turn toward the grandstand, Technician was up fast on the outside and gaining at every stride. At the furlong pole he was alongside the leader, and in seconds he was bobbing past him. At the wire he was going away fast, with plenty of running left in him. He will need another furlong in the Kentucky Derby, and he appeared today to have it.

In Wrestling Exhibition.

FLYERS MEET ST. PAUL, ONLY VISITOR TO WIN

The Arena will be the scene of only one playoff series of the American Hockey Association, according to present indications.

As the building will not be available after March 15 until the Flower Show is over, March 26, Ed Steffen, president of the Flyers, suggested to William F. Grant, president of the league, that the St. Louis team play Minneapolis three games here, March 12, 13 and 14, then let the third and fourth place teams play off, with the winners of the two series meeting in some city other than St. Louis.

In the past season or two it has been the practice for the first and fourth teams to play a series of three games and the second and third place teams do the same thing. Then the winners of the two series meet in a best three-out-of-five series to decide the title.

If the league ends as it is now, and which is almost certain, the Flyers will play the Millers, while Tulsa plays St. Paul. And the winners of those two series would meet for the championship.

Thus if the Flyers defeat Minneapolis in three games here they would play the victors in the secondary series in a three-game set in either Tulsa or St. Paul.

Steffen said last night he had suggested such an arrangement to Grant because he didn't want to hold the Flyer players over until after the Flower Show.

The St. Paul Saints, the only club to defeat the Flyers at the Arena this season, will furnish the opposition for the St. Louis club here tonight.

The Flyers, who have been in first place most of the season (and still are) have only six more regularly scheduled games to play before the playoffs and it would seem that their three-game margin should carry them through.

None of the Flyers was suspended for Friday night's fracas with the Minneapolis Millers, up to last night, at least, and probably none will be. There might be a fine or two meted out, however.

Following tonight's contest, the Flyers go to Tulsa for a contest Tuesday.

Oscar Hansen of Minneapolis continues to lead the league in scoring with 75 points, just six ahead of his teammate, Nakina Smith, who has 69. And third is Butch McDonald, also of the Millers, with 61, and fourth is Leo Lespi, another Miller, with 58.

Cliff Purpur is the top Flyer with 57 points.

Hard to Believe.

ALTHOUGH it could never be guessed by watching all this snow fall, the next big moment in Missouri's outdoor sports world is the opening of the rainbow trout fishing season in State parks, March 1.

The best fishing should be on the Bennett Spring, Roaring River and Montauk State Park trout streams, as these are the areas planted with State-produced trout. However, many other small spring branches stocked with rainbows from the Federal hatchery should afford good fishing facilities.

Each of the State park areas has its own rules, with well-marked fly-fishing waters set aside from live-bait anglers. In each case, however, the rule adopted last September providing that in addition to the regular State fishing permit, anyone fishing within the park area must have a daily fishing tag, will be enforced again this year.

Tags are sold at 25 cents each by park superintendents. Revenue derived from this source will be used for improvement of the trout fishing on the State-owned areas. This plan, started before the season closed last November, has met with general approval of ardent trout fishermen.

State park and conservation officials say that the waters at each of the major trout-fishing parks have been well stocked with legal-size rainbows and that ample supply is left in the holding ponds for liberation later in the season.

The daily creel limit is 10 rainbows; the minimum length eight inches.

New Fish Planting Record.

I. T. Bode, director of the Missouri Conservation Commission, recently announced that through the co-operation of the many conservation organizations in the State, a new record in fish planting—more than 4,000,000—has been reached. The productions and distributions are as follows:

Black bass, large mouthed, 927,193; small mouthed, 138,920; bluegill sunfish, 1,041,141; channel catfish, 196,175.

Green sunfish—796,277; other catfish, 259,510; goggle-eye, 4100.

Crappie—646,076, rainbow trout, 178,797.

The total of 4,188,189 fish, all of which were at least fingerling length, represents a general increase in the grand annual total with a sharp increase in bass and channel catfish.

Under the Conservation Commission's policy of furnishing fish only for areas open to public fishing, the bulk of the plantings were in streams. The hundreds of separate plantings were largely made in co-operation with county conservation groups, with the assistance of Wildlife Conrervation Agents, who had made stream surveys to determine the best places to release the fish.

About Quail.

A letter from G. W. Wallace, Potosi, Mo., includes the very interesting questions: "Isn't it true that many quail taken from yards for restocking purposes are unable to survive when put out on their own? What age do these quail usually reach?"

Domestic birds of all kinds have a most difficult time when placed "on their own" and have to scratch for their food while keeping an eye open for natural enemies.

Field trial handlers and hunters often comment upon the weakness of released birds. There are times when many of them cannot summon enough wing power to reach a cover only a short distance away. Often they alight while still in an open field.

Hunters of 1938 who expressed their opinions to this column were unanimous in stating that not in the past 10 years had the birds been so strong and cunning. The State began an extensive restocking program about three years ago and it took a couple of years to get the domesticated bird returned to his normal state. Now we have a good crop.

Support for the Commission.

At the last meeting of the Wildlife Conservation Organization of Missouri a resolution was drafted for presentation to Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, urging the defeat of the two bills recently presented by Senator Quinn and Representative Spearman which would totally abolish or seriously cripple the commission.

Practically all active conservation organizations in the State are rallying to the support of the commission and feel that to allow the department to slip back into politics would be very detrimental.

The next regular meeting of the Wildlife Conservation Organization will be March 9, 8 p. m. at Gambrinus Hall, 3628 Wisconsin avenue, according to M. O. Reischauer, secretary.

Twenty Dollars Average Fine.

A check-up of 118 arrests made by Missouri's Wildlife Conservation Agents last month shows that fines and costs assessed each of the persons convicted during the 30-day period amounted to the price of the average State and city motor car licenses and enough gasoline for several week-end trips.

Although each of the four district supervisors and 36 conservation agents have a sizeable area to patrol, they do get around a bit, as evidenced by the increased number of violations of conservation regulations prosecuted. The total of 118 arrests was nearly double the total for the same period of 1938, when only 63 arrests were made. The force of conservation agents now in the field was selected under the merit system last April and started its activities in July.

Reports from the Justices of the Peace show that of the 118 cases brought before them last month, 106 resulted in convictions, with six dismissals and six cases pending. These officials assessed fines totaling $938.95 and costs of $997.65.

Disregard of closed seasons, exceeding the bag limit and failure to have proper licenses brought the majority of arrests in this period.

Old Age Fishing.

With conservation ranking with old age pensions as one of the nation's chief interests, according to a recent Gallup survey, the United States Department of Interior has inaugurated a series of Saturday afternoon conservation broadcasts. These programs may be heard by interested Missourians at 4 p. m.

POLISH STUDENTS SMASH WINDOWS IN NAZI EMBASSY

Break Through Guards in Warsaw in Protest at Alleged Beating of Poles in Danzig.

By the Associated Press.

WARSAW, Feb. 25.—Polish university students broke through police lines and smashed two ground-floor windows at the German Embassy today, capping two days of angry demonstrations in protest against treatment of Polish students in the Nazi-controlled Free City of Danzig.

The incident led the Polish Foreign Office to express regrets to the German Ambassador immediately. The police guard around the embassy was doubled.

Anti-German demonstrations also were reported staged in the Polish university city of Cracow and at Poznan. Windows of two German stores were reported smashed at Poznan.

The attack on the embassy followed a cordial student welcome of Count Galeazzo Ciano, Foreign Minister of Italy—Germany's axis partner—who arrived for a five-day visit which diplomats said was to win Poland's "moral support" for Italian colonial aspirations.

From the railroad station, Count Ciano drove with his wife, Edda, Premier Mussolini's daughter, to the Italian Embassy, and there stood on the balcony and acknowledged the cheers of 2000 students of Warsaw University. He shouted in Polish: "Long live Poland."

Pleased by Ciano's use of their language, the students trooped from the Italian Embassy to the tomb of the unknown soldier, shouting, "Down with the Germans!" and "Poland should restore order in Danzig!" Ciano arrived at the square after them and laid a wreath at the tomb. The students were quiet during the ceremony.

Attack on Embassy.

Then they started for the German Embassy. Police lines were drawn to block all streets leading to the embassy, but about 100 students broke through and smashed the windows.

The attack was said to have been caused by reports that men in Nazi uniform had forced their way into the Danzig Polytechnic Institute and beaten several Polish students who were pointed out by German students.

Count Ciano and Poland's Foreign Secretary, Col Joseph Beck, apparently got down to business immediately. Throughout their automobile ride through the capital's streets they talked. Later the first business talks among Ciano and his hosts took place over tea cups in the home of Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, inspector of the army.

Not Eager to Take Sides.

Poland is in great need of outlets for emigration and of sources for raw materials, but it was hinted that Poland's leading statesmen were not anxious to enter into any commitments on colonial questions with Count Ciano.

They are pictured as more interested in discussing these questions with the British Secretary for Overseas Trade, R. S. Hudson, who is coming here next month.

Italy's territorial claims against France—not yet officially promulgated—fail to excite the Poles, who prefer to consider them a problem France and Italy must settle between themselves.

Since France is an ally of Poland and Italy a friend, this country would be happy to see a French-Italian understanding.

$206,730 PAID MISSOURI JOBLESS OVER TWO WEEKS

25,203 Receive Average of $8.20 a Week Under State Law; 50,492 Applications.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 25.—Unemployment compensation checks to jobless workers totaled $206,730 between Jan. 30 and Feb. 15, the first two weeks of payments under the Missouri law, State officials announce today. Chairman Andrew J. Murphy Sr., of the State Unemployment Compensation Commission, said 25,203 checks were mailed. The weekly payments averaged $8.20.

The commission received 50,492 claims up to Feb. 15. Of these, 38,921 were declared eligible and 9686 ineligible. The rest are still pending.

Payments under the Missouri law started this year but a waiting period was required after the filing of claims, as a result of which the first checks did not go out until the end of January.

More than half of the payments were made to St. Louis and Kansas City jobless. St. Louis checks totaled $95,637 and in Kansas City $37,488.

COURSE IN CAMPING FOR SCOUT LEADERS

Spring Training Lectures to Be Given at Mullanphy School.

A spring training course in camping, with lectures by experts, will be held March 20 and 27 and April 3 and 10 at the Mullanphy school, 4221 Shaw boulevard. About 500 scout leaders are expected to attend.

Each troop registering for the special course is requested to name four or more members of its unit who will attend. This group must include the scoutmaster, a troop committeeman and two others, preferably older scouts.

Conrad E. Meinecke, scout executive of Buffalo, N. Y., will explain the troop camping program of the Buffalo Council, and Wes H. Klusman, assistant director of the National Boy Scout Camping program, will outline camping technique of other successful councils.

The meetings will be divided into three sections, one for scoutmasters, who will study duties and methods of camp directors; another for committeemen, who will discuss camp promotion methods, and a third for study of quartermasters' duties by older scouts and adult leaders.

Special awards will be given at the end of the course. Commissioned leaders who earn the special award, and also camp with their troop at the annual Camporee, May 19 to 21, will receive a special training certificate for a specialization course.

A free camping plan, under which troops taking their own equipment and furnishing their own food will not be charged fees at Irondale and Lions' Den reservations, was announced at meeting of 500 scoutmasters last week.

The Boy Scout Council will furnish the camp site, medical supervision, drinking water, health and sanitation facilities, and the services of instructors in swimming, woodcraft, nature lore and other camp activities.

Under an alternative plan troops may take their own equipment and receive hot food carrier service for a fee of 60 cents a day for each scout. The regular camp cooks will prepare the food and put it in containers capable of keeping it hot for two hours.

The South district will hold its spring dinner meeting March 7 at the St. Paul's Evangelical Church, Giles and Potomac streets. Circuit Judge John A. Witthaus will be the guest speaker.

NORMA SHEARER "VERY ILL"

Temperature Drops to 102, However, Doctor Says.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 25.—A statement saying that Norma Shearer, movie star, "is very ill," but that her condition is not alarming, was issued today by her physician, Dr. Joel Pressman.

Miss Shearer was taken to a hospital Wednesday, suffering from a throat ailment. Last night, Dr. Pressman said, her temperature rose to 105, and he called a consultation with two other doctors. Today, he said, the streptococcus infection had subsided. He said her temperature was 102 this afternoon.

ANTI-TOWNSEND GROUP URGING VOTE IN HOUSE

They Believe It Will Scuttle Plan and Embarrass Members Favoring It.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — The House may get a chance to vote on the Townsend old-age pension plan.

House leaders and some members of the Ways and Means Committee said today they were considering forcing a vote on the plan because they believed it would accomplish two things:

1. Help scuttle the Townsend movement by showing the people it isn't going to pass and hence shut off some of the stream of dimes and quarters from the pockets of elderly people into Townsend coffers.

2. Put both Democrats and Republicans who have been flirting with the plan "on the spot."

The Townsend bill calls for a 2 per cent transactions tax to finance pensions up to $200 a month for persons over 60.

When a vote may be reached has not been decided, since hearings on the plan and all other proposals for altering the present social security system probably will continue for several weeks. Some Ways and Means committeemen already are talking, however, of sending the bill to the House with a recommendation that it be defeated. Democrats feel that it might be good strategy, because the Townsendites have in many instances allied themselves with Republicans.

A number of legislators from both parties also said they were convinced that Congress would have to face the issue of the Townsend program some time, and that they thought a vote this session would dispose of it once and for all.

For three and a half weeks the Ways and Means Committee has been holding hearings on the Townsend and general welfare pension plans and other proposed substitutes or changes in the Social Security Act. Members said they wanted to give full and complete hearings as a means of educating the public. Accordingly, the two pension plans have received emphasis, first from propnents and then this week from economists with established reputations who have called them wholly impractical.

The general welfare plan proposes a 2 per cent gross income tax to finance pensions of $30 to $60 a month for those over 60.

FRANK E. MORRIS RESIGNS AS PROBATE COURT CLERK

He Will Resume Law Practice; Thomas J. Boland Will Succeed Him.

Frank E. Morris, 5601 Kingsbury court, resigned yesterday as chief clerk of the St. Louis Probate Court, a position he has held, by appointment of Judge Glendy B. Arnold, since May, 1935. His salary has been $5500 a year. Morris, an attorney, will leave the probate office March 15, at which time he will resume the practice of law.

In accepting Morris' resignation Judge Arnold complimented him on his administration of the office and expressed regret that he was leaving. In addition to other duties, Morris has presided at special sessions of the court in the absence of the Judge.

Judge Arnold announced that Thomas J. Boland, 5414 Delmar boulevard, at present a deputy and member of the legal staff of the Probate Court, would be appointed to succeed Morris. The salary of the new chief clerk has not been set.

THE REV. ENDICOTT PEABODY, GROTON SCHOOL HEAD, TO QUIT

Founder's Retirement Effective in June, 1940; He Taught President Roosevelt and Sons.

By the Associated Press.

GROTON, Mass., Feb. 25.—The Rev. Endicott Peabody, founder of Groton School and teacher of President Roosevelt and his sons, announced today his resignation as headmaster of the 54-year-old preparatory school, effective in June, 1940.

An official of the school said Mr. Peabody felt it was time for him to retire, as he had been at the school so long. He is 81 years old.

Members of the board said Mr. Peabody's successor would be considered later. They added that while the educator was in robust health, he desired to retire and see his successor in office.

Groton School was founded by Mr. Peabody on Oct. 15, 1884. Since then he has taught, in addition to the President and his sons, the sons and grandsons of President Theodore Roosevelt and hundreds of boys who later became national and international leaders.

18 IN HOSPITALS AFTER WYOMING RAILWAY WRECK

Broken Rail Sent Five Cars Over Embankment Near Bosler, Friday.

By the Associated Press.

LARAMIE, Wyo., Feb. 25.—Seventeen passengers and a Pullman porter were under treatment today in hospitals here and at Rawlins, for injuries they suffered when a broken rail sent five cars of the Union Pacific's Pony Express down an embankment near Bosler, Wyo., last night.

Oscar Gray of Oakland, Cal., Negro porter, was the most seriously hurt. Doctors said he may have suffered fractured vertebrae, but expected him to recover. Four other passengers were released after emergency treatment in a hospital here.

SALES OF NASH CARS increased by 365 per cent in the St. Louis territory in the last 10 days of January as compared with sales in the same period in 1938, according to L. M. Sprinkle, president of the Nash St. Louis Co. The January gain by Nash all over the country was 55 per cent, Sprinkle said. Because of this, Nash is starting its spring drive a month ahead of the usual time, supporting it with one of the largest newspaper campaigns the company has ever used. The advertising drive is based largely on invitations to motorists to take rides in the new Nash cars equipped with the "weather eye" conditioned air system. The Nash St. Louis Co. is keeping its showrooms open evenings for the demonstrations.

A COUNTRY-WIDE POLL OF Cadillac-LaSalle distributers and dealers on media preferences has placed newspapers at the top of the list, Frank J. Denney, advertising manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Division, announces. Results are based on returns from a questionnaire mailed shortly after the first of the year, Denney said, and show newspapers the first choice for advertising expenditure by 73 per cent of all voters. "This majority is not entirely unexpected," he declared, "since past experience has given newspapers a high ranking. It is, however, the most recent substantiation for our opinion that newspapers must be considered the backbone of any car advertising budget."

PLANS FOR A SPRING SELLING CAMPAIGN were announced at a meeting Friday to 250 Buick dealers and salesmen by Charles McKnolly, zone manager, and O. L. Waller, assistant general sales manager. The meeting was held at the Spinning Wheel, 5711 Delmar boulevard, in a setting depicting an 1849 gold rush mining camp dance hall and saloon. The party assembled at the Buick zone office, 3900 West Pine at 10:30 a. m., and were taken in busses to the Mining Camp.

I. G. McNIECE OF THE OLIVER Cadillac Co., St. Louis, is this district's representative on the list of leading Cadillac and LaSalle salesmen for the country in 1938 which has just been announced by D. E. Ahrens, general sales manager. High sales rank with Cadillac automatically elects a salesman to the organization of Merit Men who are annually the guests of the company on a recreational junket. This year's convention will be held July 31 to Aug. 3 in New York, starting at the Westchester Country Club at Rye and winding up with a two-day program at the World's Fair.

TOM W. MOSS' APPOINTMENT to be director of truck sales for the Dodge division of the Chrysler Corporation is announced by Forest H. Akers, vice-president and director of sales for Dodge. Moss has been general service manager for the Chrysler Corporation for activities in connection with Plymouth, Dodge, De Soto and Chrysler factories.

A NEW STATION WAGON ON the Plymouth de luxe passenger car chassis is announced. Production is under way and shipments are being made to dealers. With all seats in place, the station wagon provides accommodations for eight passengers, with space behind the rear seat and on the lowered tailgate for luggage.

SUBSTANTIAL GAINS IN DELIVERIES of Buick cars are reported by W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager, who says that sales have been the best in the company's history. At the same time, used car stocks of Buick dealers have been reduced. At a meeting at Flint, Mich., zone and assistant zone managers launched the Buick spring drive on the basis of an expected substantial increase of volume in March and April.

J. W. HARTON, GENERAL supervisor; C. E. Newman, truck and bus tire representative; O. E. Hamilton, O. G. Fries, A. J. Appuhn, M. O. Rasberry, H. H. Parrish, R. W. Nichol Jr., and J. R. Tomlinson, wholesale salesmen in the St. Louis district of the B. F. Goodrich Co., have been presented Master Merchandiser plaques by L. L. Sowers, district manager. The plaques were awarded for all-around accomplishments in the sales field in 1938 in competition against all members of the nationwide sales organization of the Goodrich company.

A SALES CAMPAIGN BY OLDSmobile is being carried by 4000 newspapers, according to D. E. Ralston general sales manager. It covers a contest, details of which are supplied by Oldsmobile dealers.

C. E. DEXTER, GENERAL manager of the Southern Motor Co., announces the appointment of William Fisher as sales manager. Fisher has had many years of experience in retailing new and used cars. The Southern Motor Co. has just established a location opposite its showroom at 6336 South Grand avenue for displaying reconditioned cars.

SIXTEEN "ELEPHANT trains" for the San Francisco world's fair are powered by units built around Ford V-8 one-ton trucks and designed to look like elephants. In place of a cab, there is a howdah on each train for the engineer. Behind each elephant, are three low-level carriages seating a total of 60 passengers and a uniformed lecturer.

APARTMENT OF 20 UNITS STARTED IN MAPLEWOOD

Structure of 3, 4, 5 Room Units to Occupy Lot 280 by 200 at Marshall and Moller Avenues.

Contracts have been let and excavation work begun for the erection of a 20-unit apartment building at the southeast corner of Marshall and Moller avenues, Maplewood. The estimated cost of the project, exclusive of the site, is $125,000.

The building, two stories in height, will occupy a lot 280 by 200 feet. It is being erected by A. J. Kollar, a client of the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co., which is financing the project.

The apartments will consist of three, four and five room units, with tile bath. Electric refrigerators, stoves and other modern appliances will be provided.

There will be a garage for 20 cars and complete laundry facilities in the basement.

Moorlands Project.

A syndicate, represented by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Real Estate Co., recently disclosed plans for an apartment group for the west side of Westwood drive, just north of Clayton road, Moorlands addition, Clayton. This project calls for an outlay of $300,000.

A 20-year ammortized loan for $182,000 has been made in this connection by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Co., representing the Investors Syndicate of Minneapolis, Minn.

The group will consist of six buildings of ultra modernistic design—two apartment structures of four units and two of 12 units, and two duplex residences. There will be basement garages, completely equipped, for 44 cars. The site, 218 by 300 feet, was recently acquired by the Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Co. on behalf of the building syndicate, through Shaw & Francis, Inc.

Apartment Acquired.

An apartment building, recently completed at 731 Westwood drive, Moorlands addition, was purchased yesterday by Mildred E. Stupp. The Dimmitt-Rickhoff-Bayer Real Estate Co. made the sale for Russell Nash, builder. No mention of the consideration was made.

There are four six-room apartments in the Westwood building, including studio living room. Living rooms, dining rooms and hall floors are of terrazzo. Each apartment has electric refrigerators, gas stoves and Venetian blinds.

Mostly fireproof materials have been used in its construction, including the entire first and second floors, which are of reinforced concrete. The main entrance to the building is fireproof, with a circular terrazzo stairway. There is a basement garage for eight cars. The equipment includes an oil heating system.

Building Under Way.

Construction was recently started on an 18-unit apartment building at the southeast corner of Brentwood boulevard (former North and South road) and Davis drive, in Davis place, Clayton, by Ben Goldberg, builder. It will consist of four-room units, with all modern conveniences. The site has a frontage of 125 feet on Brentwood, by a depth of 200 feet along the south line of Davis drive. It was acquired through Shaw & Francis, Inc.

ALLEN ELECTRIC CO. LEASES QUARTERS ON NORTH NINTH

The Allen Electric Co. has leased new quarters at 103 North Ninth street, comprising approximately 5400 square feet of floor space. There will be parking space, with service facilities, in the rear of the premises.

The site contains approximately one and three-fourths acres.

The R. F. Anderson Co. announced the sale. The consideration was not disclosed.

NO CHANGE INDICATED IN INTEREST RATES

91 Pct. of Mortgage Group Believe Present Charges Will Continue Through 1939.

Prospective builders of homes and commercial structures will have the advantage of the same low mortgage interest rates the remainder of the year as prevailed during 1938, a poll of members of the Mortgage Bankers' Association of America, just completed, indicates. Ninety-one per cent of the association's members replying to the questionnaire said mortgage rates would remain the same through 1939, 7 per cent expected lower rates and 2 per cent anticipated higher rates. The poll is the first of a series the association is making among its 550 members in 42 states, according to S. M. Waters, president.

The strongest opinion for continued low mortgage rates was found in the Pacific coast and mountain states where 94 per cent of the members expressed this view, with 3 per cent each voting for higher and lower rates. In the Middle Western states 91 per cent forecast continued low rates, 8 per cent believe they will go lower this year, while 1 per cent anticipates a slight rise.

In the Eastern states, 89 per cent foresee continued low rates with 11 per cent anticipating still lower rates. In the Southern states over 87 per cent believe rates will remain stationary, 10 per cent look for higher rates with 3 per cent in doubt.

"Continued low mortgage interest rates can be viewed as both a blessing and a plague," Mr. Waters declared. "Low rates, with the easy financing terms available for building, mean that new construction should have a good year in 1939, with many thousands of people realizing their ambition to build their own homes. Yet, on the other hand, the continued low rates only reflect the low interest rates prevailing for all types of money which, in turn, tells the story of a great deal of idle capital in the country today."

Hannauer in New Quarters.

The Hannauer Real Estate Co. has taken a suite of offices on the third floor of the Wainwright Building. It was formerly at 841 Chestnut street.

The company is headed by Joseph W. Hannauer, a past president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange. Oliver F. Hannauer, secretary of the concern, is a director of the exchange. The concern was established 40 years ago.

60 PER CENT GAIN IN HOME BUILDING

Residential Construction in the St. Louis Area in January Totaled $1,176,000.

C. S. Bennett, St. Louis manager of Dodge, reports, a division of the F. W. Dodge Corporation summarizes January building operations in the St. Louis-East St. Louis Metropolitan area as follows:

"The 1939 building activities of the St. Louis-East St. Louis metropolitan area started with residential work in the brightest spot. January business resulted in work-and-materials contracts worth $400,000 more than in the corresponding months of 1938.

"Residential work moved out in front last month," Bennett said. "The local advance was not equal to the average recorded throughout the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains, but it was very encouraging. The contracts for non-residential building passed the level of January, 1938, by a wide margin."

"Residential building contracts awarded in and around St. Louis during January reached $1,176,000. This included a gain of 60 per cent over $734,000, the valuation of contracts awarded in the corresponding month of last year. The average January gain for residential work in the 37 states east of the Rockies was 121 per cent.

"Local contracts for non-residential building went to $785,000 last month; 1938 opened with awards values at $520,000. In this classification the gain over the same month of 1938 was 51 per cent. The average gain in the 37 states area was 48 per cent.

Bennett concludes the summary of building in the St. Louis-East St. Louis metropolitan area, with a grouping of all types of building and heavy engineering contracts. The January total, $4,041,000 was well ahead of the corresponding $2,960,000 in January, 1938. The gain of 36 per cent compares favorably with the 30 per cent average gain established in the 37 Eastern states.

INVESTORS ACQUIRE BUSINESS BUILDINGS

Buy Building at Easton and Union and One at 3519 Page Boulevard.

Negotiations have been concluded for two business buildings on Easton and Page avenues, on behalf of investment and speculation interests.

The Paulian Building, a three-story structure at the northeast corner of Easton avenue and Union boulevard, has been purchased by Harry Lundoff, represented by the Slonim Realty Co. The Bertha Golland estate, represented by the Lund Realty Co., was the grantor.

Five stores comprise the first floor and offices the second floor. There is a large hall on the third floor.

The building adjoins the Union Theater, which is being remodeled at a large outlay. The purchase was made as an investment.

The four-story fireproof building at 3519 Page boulevard and at 3536 Easton avenue, has been purchased by interests represented by the Vernon Laux Realty Co. from the Page-Easton Investment Co. Extending through the block, the property has a frontage of 71 feet 8 inches on Page and 93 feet on Easton. It is now occupied by Aalco Moving & Storage Co. under a lease.

FOOD CENTER ENLARGING SOUTH ST. LOUIS BUILDING

Approximately 5000 square feet of floor space are being added to the Broadway and Chippewa street store operated by Food Center of St. Louis, Inc.

A one-story brick and concrete structure, with modern porcelain front now being erected to conform with the present structure, will provide the additional space.

The enlarged store will rival the largest super markets on the South Side.

The concern also has super stores at Sixth street and Franklin avenue, Thirteenth and O'Fallon streets, and at Warren and West Florissant avenues. Its general offices and warehouse are at 814 North Fourth street.

$150,000 BUILDING FOR OAK GROVE CEMETERY

Ground Broke for Chapel and Crematory Designed After Old Gothic Cathedrals.

Ground has been broken for the Oak Grove chapel and crematory in Oak Grove Cemetery, at 7800 St. Charles Rock road. The estimated cost is $150,000. The building is designed after the old Gothic cathedrals with their pointed arches and vaulted ceilings.

Built of reinforced concrete, the exterior will be faced with Bedford stone. Huge stone tracery windows of stained glass will be installed in the front and the rear of the building. The east and west elevations will contain eight clerestory windows of stained glass, to catch the rising and setting sun for the columbariums and chapel. Heavy bronze doors, intricately grilled and set between Gothic buttresses and carved finials, will mark the entrance to the chapel. To the right of the entrance is the office and directly ahead the spacious yet intimate chapel of ample seating capacity. On each side of the nave are six columbarium rooms for niches. Handwrought bronze gates will set them off from the chapel. The 12 columbarium rooms will contain 2400 niches.

Beneath the chapel will be two of the most modern retorts designed by special engineers, with facilities for the installations of two additional retorts. An elevator will lower the remains from its position near the altar to a room where the cremation takes place.

Lovell & Lovell of Chicago are the architects.

IN MEMORIAM

WEITRIG, MRS. ANNIE—In memory of my beloved mother, who passed away one year ago, Feb. 22, 1938:
One year of sorrow, lonely and blue,
Life is so empty, dear one, without you;
It was sad, indeed, the way you died,
Without a chance to say good-by;
Your spirit flew before we knew
That you from us had gone;
If you had raised a dying hand and bid us all farewell,
The blow would not have been so hard
For those who loved you, dear, so well.
Sadly missed by
DAUGHTER BERTHA, AND SON-IN-LAW.

YORK, GEORGE N.—In memory of our beloved husband and father, who passed away two years ago, Feb. 24.
Dear God, we thank Thee
For having had such a wonderful husband
And wonderful Dad,
The world is sad
But memory is sweet,
Some day we'll meet at Jesus' feet.
LOVING WIFE, CHILDREN & MOTHER.

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN FOR PERMANENT CONNECTION

My organization has authorized me to contact a man immediately who lives in St. Louis or vicinity, and show him the details of this business, and then, if he feels that, due to lack of experience, he would be better off with it, to give him preliminary practice and guidance personally, without any expense or cost whatsoever to this man and start him in an opportunity that is permanent; liberal participation in the profits; no investment. Possibly several openings will be filled.

Steadiness and good character needed—not ability to talk, or a clientele or any previous experience. We are not advertising for salesmen—because the newest method of putting prospects into the market for it is so unusual that most men have to see it working out in actual practice before they can believe it. Yet it is so simple that no time need be lost in getting started. While getting started, men of average ability must be willing to get along on reasonable weekly earnings. Men interested can learn quickly from practical men earning substantial incomes every week.

We do not require sales experience because this business is so different from sales operations as sized up by most men. Results prove it. Yet, as in anything else, success generally requires hard work and study to qualify for the larger incomes.

Apply to manager, 512 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive Sts, Monday morning, 9:15 to 1:15 only.

BINGO MAD

By INEZ ROBB

INEZ ROBB

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 25.

SCARCELY a man is now alive who can't remember the old days when the heavens rained economic royalists every time Wall street had another sinking spell. But the boys aren't jumping this season.

The devil with the stock market! They've discovered a better racket. They and their representative wives and children, their sisters and their cousins and their aunts, are down here spending every waking hour in an attempt to cover all the numbers on a paste board square with beans, disks or what have you.

Call it keeno, beano, lotto or bingo, it has made Palm Beach self-supporting and given it renewed hope for the future. For years millionaires who've been living off their fat are now living off bingo.

This community literally is bingo mad. It has replaced golf, short selling, bridge, gossip, deep sea-fishing and ogling thy neighbor's spouse as Palm Beach's favorite pastime. Public and private clubs are jammed on bingo nights, and it is now invading the sanctity of the home. Gurnee Munn introduced it at a dinner party at his home last week; what the Munns do today, multitudes do tomorrow.

Haughty customers with blood in their eyes packed the Patio restaurant the other night where the bingo pot stood at $300, a sum once regarded as chicken-feed but now commanding respect in this community. The two Chrysler heiresses, Mrs. Byron Foy and Mrs. Edgar Garbisch, and their respective spouses, were johnny-on-the-spot for the big payoff. So were Lily Damita and Lupe Velez, Franklyn L. Hutton, father of Countess Barbara Hutton Mdivani Haugwitz-Reventlow; Frank Rediker and others of equal social and financial ilk.

During her brief visit here earlier in the season, Mrs. Vincent Astor was a bingo devotee. A. Atwater Kent, the radio magnate, Woolie Donahue, the 5-and-10 heir; Kenneth Smith, the toothpaste magnate; Gilbert Miller, the New York and London impresario; Winston Guest, the 10-goal polo player, who married Woolie Donahue's pretty cousin; Isabel Dodge Sloane and Mrs. Josh Cosden have been among those trying to make ends meet at the bingo board.

The regular weekly backgammon and bingo fiesta at the exclusive Everglades attracts mobs of our betters, come to make an honest penny and help defray the winter's expenses. This is no tin-horn gambler's game, as bingo boards at the Everglades cost 50 cents apiece. The pot for each game usually runs from $50 to $75, nothing to be sneered at in these parlous times.

While bingo goes on in one room at the Everglades, the weekly backgammon tournament, with the pari-mutuel sideline, is giving other colonists a chance to buy shoes for baby. Any person is privileged to buy a $2 pari-mutuel ticket on any player entered in the tournament. Since a dark horse usually wins the tourney, the few people holding tickets on the winner can be certain of paying off the mortgage and have enough left over for a case of Scotch.

When Ethel, Lady Lewis, daughter of Publisher Frank Noyes of Washington, D. C., won the backgammon tourney recently, she made $640 because she had had the foresight to back her skill with a $4 investment in two pari-mutuel tickets. Lady Lewis is now enjoying a further vacation in Nassau on the backgammon winnings.

Fifi Wichfeld, the Widener heiress, is always entered in the backgammon tourney, hopeful of a windfall. So are Mrs. Wesson Seyburn, the motor car heiress from Detroit, and the Fred Algers, who own the race hoss Azucar. Mrs. Warren Pershing, daughter-in-law of Gen. Pershing; Hal Sims, the bridge expert, and Princess Laura Rospigliosi, are others who hope backgammon will eliminate the necessity for a rent party. No one can truthfully say that Palm Beach citizens aren't doing their best to be self-supporting.

The emergence of bingo has made Palm Beach a better and a happier place to live in. In past years, when winter vacationers had only the stock market and slot machines to depend on, the atmosphere was always a trifle gloomy. This year, slot machines have been banned by the new Governor.

There are only a few of the one-armed bandits remaining where thousands did business before. But if one is still determined to play the slot machine in Palm Beach, he literally has to remember his old speakeasy technique when he knocks on the right door and whispers "Remember me? I was here last week with Gus."

Hollywood's Hopper -:- By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 25.

THE Lone Ranger's horse, Silver, failed in a screen test for Gerald O'Hara's horse in "Wind." He was too silvery.

Leslie Howard, after spending a day in the beauty parlor, was too red, and the whole thing had to be bleached over again. And in the same picture, poor little Evelyn Keyes may find herself bald if she's not careful. A natural spun-gold blonde type, she had to dye her hair dark brown. Then was called back to Paramount for re-takes and had to bleach it blond and the same day dye it brown again. Then the picture was postponed two weeks.

I don't believe anyone realizes how dangerous that operation might have been. A friend of mine became infected from a dye job and was in bed two weeks. Doctor told her if she ever repeated it, it would kill her.

Here's a tip for you girls who have to do this. Before starting the bleach, soak your head in hot castor oil. Put on a rubber bathing cap, and let it sweat for 24 hours. Then bleach before shampoo.

A THEATER OWNER in a small town where many of our sneak previews are held, has a son who had acting aspirations which the father wanted canceled. So with Hollywood's co-operation they dressed the boy up as an interne in "Doctor Kildare." For another picture, on our coldest day, he played a beachcomber in a pair of slacks and a hat. In "Jesse James" he was an outlaw with two .45s strapped on his belt which wore holes in his hip pocket. Then he wore a diving costume and a parachute on his back for "Wings of the Navy," after which he returned to his father and said, "They can have the show business. How would you like me to be a barker for you at 35 cents an hour?"

DURING the chariot race in Eddie Cantor's "Roman Scandals," there was an accident. The horses bolted and the chariot knocked down camera and cameraman, who was taken to the hospital. A purse was immediately taken up for him. Then Cantor sent him a radio. A few days later he went down to see him and asked how he liked it. The man went into hysterics when he had turned it on, they were doing "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

SOMETIMES a scrapbook helps. Before Joe Santley, who was known as the boy wonder, started to direct Jackie Cooper and Freddie Bartholomew in "The Spirit of Culver," he invited them to his house for dinner. And they went through his scrapbook from beginning to end. He started his career at 4, too.

ANDY DEVINE'S new son, Tad, is assured of at least $1000 worth of education. Bill Wellman had bet Andy that amount that the stork would arrive at the Wellman menage first. Wellman's still expecting.

I FINALLY DISCOVERED that fans are made, not born. At a preview the other night, the lobby was packed and jammed with fans gazing at the stars. Over in a corner I spied a mother and her child. When the mother's favorite came along she leaned over her offspring and said, "See that lovely lady there? That's Loretta Young." Then, with a shove, "Get her."

AT A WEDDING RECEPTION -:- By Emily Post

DEAR MRS. POST: Will you suggest the kind of entertainment we can provide for the guests at our daughter's wedding reception? My daughter does not care for dancing and the groom and his father are both clergymen and we don't think dancing would be particularly suitable in this case.

Answer: There is never any entertainment provided at a wedding reception. That is, no one sings or plays or gives a performance of any kind that would require the attention of the guests. Usually there is music furnished by an orchestra or perhaps by a phonograph, and if dance music is selected and there is space, the guests dance. The music is never considered as a concert to be "listened to" but serves merely as a festive background for general conversation.

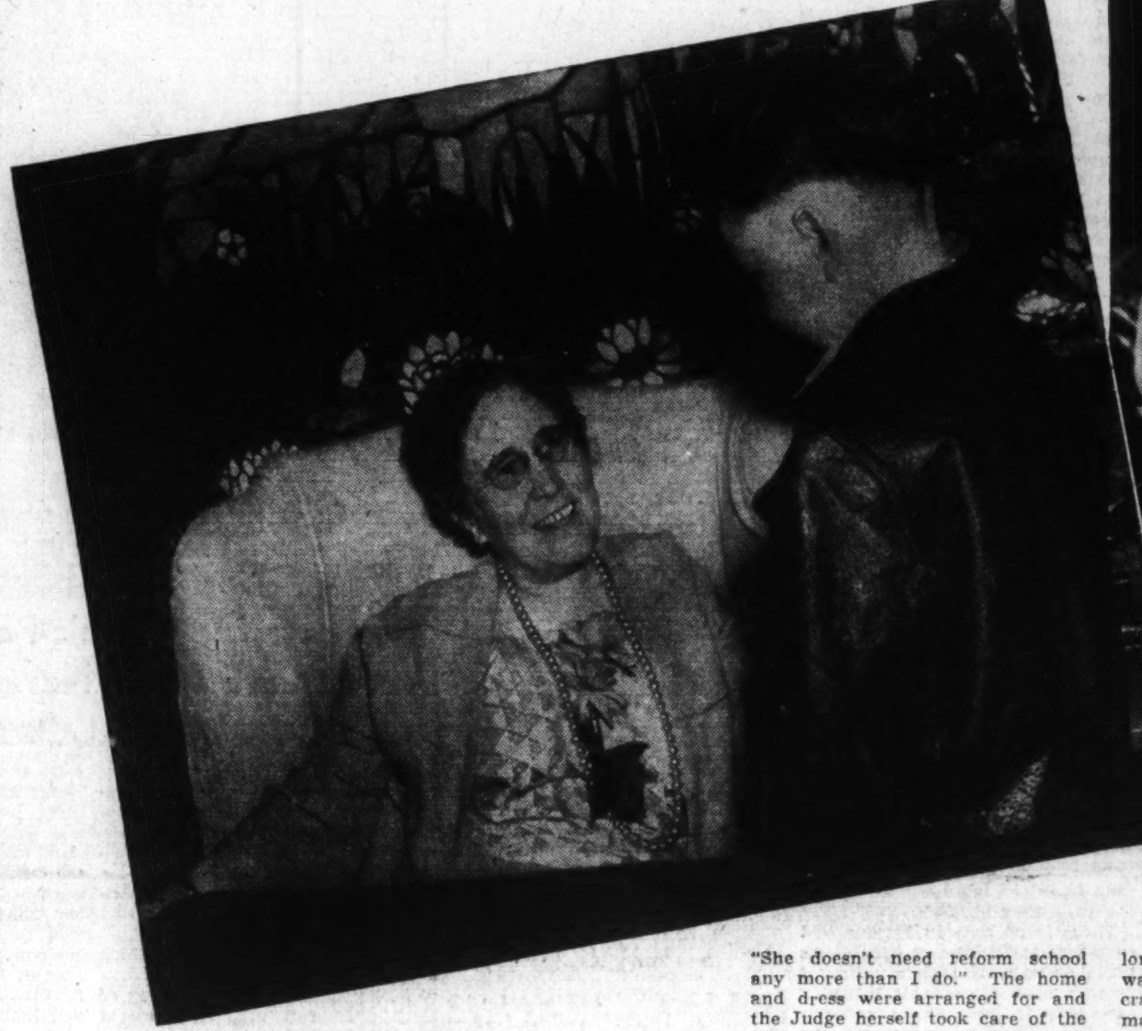
DEAR MRS. POST: Is it displaying sufficient appreciation on the part of a husband if his wife writes thank you notes for gifts sent to him?

Answer: If presents for wife and husband—and possibly for very young children—were all sent to them in the same box, the wife would write thank you for all of them. But if a present was sent to the husband alone—on his birthday, let's say—it would certainly be necessary that he write his own thank you note.

JUSTICE FROM THE HEART

Madam Judge Camille Kelley of the Juvenile Court of Memphis, Tenn., Often Disregards Law Books; Has Handled 40,000 Cases in the Past 18 Years.

MADAM JUDGE KELLEY OF THE JUVENILE COURT OF MEMPHIS, TENN.



SHE HAS AN EASY, SMILING WAY WITH THOSE WHO COME BEFORE HER, LARGE AND—IN THIS CASE—SMALL.

By VIRGINIA IRWIN

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 25.

SHE'S plump and pretty and Irish and proud of it. She's one of the most widely-known women south of the Mason-Dixon line and bears the rather pompous title of Madam Judge Camille Kelley of the Juvenile Court of Memphis, Tenn. But folks down in these parts for the most part just call her "the little Judge." She sits in a big chair at one end of her courtroom before a beautiful stained glass window in which a cherub dabbles its toes in a pond of water lilies, and dispenses justice from the heart instead of from the book. Folks who should know say that if her ideas on such things as poverty and juvenile delinquency and divorce could be put into universal effect the world's misbehavior could soon be whittled in half.

On the day that "the little Judge" filed her report covering her eighteenth year on the juvenile bench and put her forty-thousandth case behind her, she told me with an Irish-imp twinkle in her eye:

"There is no such thing as an intrinsically, hopelessly bad boy or girl. Some day I'll prove that."

The kids who find their way into her court soon understand that she needs a lot of convincing to be made to believe that a boy or girl is really bad, that she will fight the law and policemen and even a kid's own parents, if she believes some young one deserves another chance. And when Judge Kelley says to a youngster of 7, or even 17, in that soft Southern voice of hers, "Look here, sonny man, you're just a little old boy after all and if you make me send you to the reform school it's going to break my heart," that "sonny man" usually goes out of the Judge's court and goes straight.

Painstakingly the Judge explains to each young one who comes before her that she hates "to make people miserable" and by the time she gets through with a boy who has, let's say, swiped another kid's bicycle, she's found out all his good points and painted such a swell picture of the kid for himself that he "just naturally wants to live up to it."

"You know," she explains, "you don't study mistakes in problems to learn mathematics, and you don't hunt faults in humans to understand human nature."

The Judge's formula is punishment only when everything else fails. She sort of puts her reputation as a wise Judge in the hands of the boys and girls who are brought before her. She says to them, "Look, I'm going to give you another chance. Don't let folks say, 'Well, I see the Judge made a mistake.'" So far, 85 per cent of her boys and girls have lived up to her trust.

There are those who criticise "the little Judge" and whisper that she's "a sentimental little idiot and wouldn't know a potential criminal if she saw one." Her champions snort: "Fiddlesticks!" and point to her record—a record so unbeatable that no opponent has had the courage to run against her for office since she was made Judge by special dispensation of the Tennessee Legislature back in 1920. The Legislature subsequently made the office elective, but that makes no difference. "Fat chance," they say down here of anybody ever succeeding her as long as she wants the office. She's got her record and the mothers of Tennessee behind her. She's got the politicians behind her, too.

—o-o—

"CENSURE is the poorest healing lotion in the world," the Judge whispered to me the other day when I sat with her at the big mahogany table she uses instead of the traditional judge's bench. She was up against the case of an overgrown kid who had needed a little cash and got it by forging a check. There was a little sermon about the dangers of forgery and then the Judge started talking about what a shame it would be for a big, good-looking boy to turn out to be something she couldn't be proud of. In a few minutes she had the big bruiser reduced to tears. She passed him her linen handkerchief and started talking baseball. "He'll be all right, now," she whispered again. "When an almost-grown man sheds real tears, there's something to him." Another case dismissed.

"You see it's something like going to a doctor with a broken nose you got in a fight," she explained. "The doctor doesn't lecture you on the evils of fighting. He fixes your nose. That's what I do. I try to fix these kids up so they'll go out into the world and be grand men and women. They don't need punishment—most of them. They need understanding and someone to show them the right road."

The Judge admits that her method may sound fantastic. But it works. She takes wayward girls and makes them over, not by sermons and lectures, but by giving them new hats and permanents. One sad-eyed, delinquent little lady came before the court the day I spent with the Judge and readily confessed her short but anything but pure past. "What she needs is a good clean home, a new dress and somebody to tell her she's pretty," the Judge whispered to me. "She doesn't need reform school any more than I do." The home and dress were arranged for and the Judge herself took care of the telling-her-she's-pretty part.

Besides the 65,000 children over whom she has jurisdiction, Judge Kelley also handles all non-support cases. And where she leans to the lenient side with children, she's pretty tough on men who don't take care of their families. But the same understanding holds in the non-support cases, and she pleads with neglectful fathers not to make her send them to the workhouse in the same way she begs naughty boys not to make her send them to the reform school. When the non-support case involves a couple who are separated and on the verge of divorce, "the little Judge" appoints herself a sort of marriage doctor. Her own marriage she says was so perfect that she can't resist the temptation to make all marriages that way.

Widowed since the death of Thomas Fitzgerald Kelley in 1928, Camille Kelley has lost two children. Her third child, Heiskell B. Kelley, is a successful lawyer here in Memphis and he and his mother are inseparable companions. With years of ideal home life to remember, the Judge now tries to remake less happy homes into something like her own.

"A cracked home is worse than a broken one as far as the children are concerned," Judge Kelley says. "And piecing together cracked and broken homes is just as big a part of my job as looking out for the welfare of the children."

The Judge often goes right into the home to discover to her own satisfaction just what the friction is when she can't get a clear picture out of the couple in court. And she's got her records to prove that her suggestions often have helped patch up a threatened home.

The Judge heard an emergency non-support case the day I sat with her on the bench. The father obviously was suffering from a prolonged whisky diet and the mother was sullen. After a few verbal cracks at each other in court, the man and wife finally settled down to discussing their problem sanely. The father was spending his money on whisky. The children and furniture had that day been set on the street. Slowly the Judge drew from the man his story. Seems as though the fellow once made a good living. Now he had only part time work. And what he made at that he was spending on firewater.

"It's tough, isn't it, sonny man?" the Judge sympathized. "Sort of hurts your pride, doesn't it, not to be able to make a big salary any more?"

The bleary-eyed gent brightened, and soon he was boasting of how he was once "the best concrete worker in Memphis." And for at least 15 minutes the judge gossiped about construction work with him. At the end of the discussion the judge held up her hand and said, "Now, see here, sonny man. I know it's pretty discouraging to try to support five children on your salary. But you're man enough to do it. We'll find a house to move your children into tonight and from then on it's up to you. You won't be back here again with a hangover, will you, and make me send you to the workhouse?" The man promised, thanked the judge, and walked out with an arm around his wife.

"All he needed was a little appreciation," the judge smiled. "You've got to let men know you appreciate them. He'll go to sleep tonight dreaming of the days when he was the best concrete worker in Memphis instead of thinking about whisky."

Sometimes the judge tangles with some of the folks who come before her and then you see the determination that's behind her usually soft, big eyes. "I'm a mammy judge all right, but I'm Irish and I'm not going to take any foolishness," she told one man.

Once upon a time Camille Kelley, who calls herself "a mammy judge," wanted to be a doctor, but on the day that she was appointed to the juvenile bench she put away that dream for a brighter one—that of extending her ideas on juvenile delinquency to a sphere far larger than that covered by her own court.

"There is so much I would like to see done," she told me. "For instance, I believe that mental and physical examinations should be the rule in every court handling problems of behavior. There should be nothing but trained, sympathetic probation officers in charge of investigations and follow-up work. A welfare program should be established with facilities for caring intelligently for dependent and delinquent children where through classification you could find the talents and capacity of individuals and educate and equip them to pull their own load. It is imperative that we recognize personal temperament and human emotions if we would solve human problems. And we must understand that courtesy and human kindness and a sense of humor are as important as food and shelter."

—o-o—

IN the matter of Institutions, Judge Kelley says: "My dream is some daye to see our institutions manned by people who dream dreams and see visions. And not until we man our institutions with the right kind of workers, those with the ability to handle human beings, will we get results from institutional care."

Although she fights to stabilize the delinquent boys and girls who come to her by every possible method before she commits them to an institution, she did last year send 210 to State institutions. "Because," she says sadly, "they had to be taught to carry their own load. They were the ones we would have had to carry the rest of their lives in wheelbarrows."

There are no juvenile gangs in Memphis and of the 65,000 children under the court's jurisdiction, there were only 1912 delinquents last year. And it is to figures such as these that the Judge's supporters point when someone starts finding fault.

The first woman judge south of the Mason-Dixon line, Judge Kelley has never worn the traditional judge's robe. She says: "Why, it would scare those kids to death." Instead, she dresses in pretty little outfits, wears her diamonds and pearls to court, and has fresh flowers on the bench every morning. Her court records show between 300 and 500 adjustments of human problems each month and on top of this work, the Judge is in demand as a speaker on social problems all over the United States.

Not long ago somebody suggested that maybe the Judge ought to have her blood pressure taken. She was just getting ready to drive to Nashville on some important matter, so she popped into a hospital and said "Take my blood pressure."

The hospital people frowned and said, "But you're in such a hurry and all excited. You have to be calm when you have your blood pressure taken."

"Nonsense," said the Judge. "I'm always in a hurry. And I'm always excited. Now's the time to take it."

Her blood pressure was perfectly normal. So to celebrate, the Judge bought herself a new hat, the wide-brimmed kind she always wears, and an armful of red roses, and went to Nashville.

JUDGE KELLEY SPEAKING:

"GOODNESS is more natural than badness unless a person is mentally out of gear."

"Never buy a hat that looks just like you. Buy one that makes you look surprised."

"I don't think I'm smart. I just love people an awful lot."

"A man may get intoxicated on whisky, but lots of women get just as drunk emotionally. An emotional drunk is worse than a whisky drunk."

"What we need to think about in this life instead of catching drips from the faucet is what we could do at the turbines at life's source."

"Deliberate mental cruelty, such as nagging wives practice on their husbands is to me a worse sin that succumbing to an emotional surge that sweeps a girl off her feet."

"Most knock-downs and drag-outs in the homes happen because a man and his wife are starved for beauty and don't know it."

THIS NEW YORK

BY LUCIUS BEEBE

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.

THE season's most notable addition to the ranks of the bright young men about town whose names are paragraphers' fodder and the photographers' delight is Franchot Tone, who, after an absence of six years and in spite of his appearance eight times a week in "The Gentle People," seems to get around the way Brock Pemberton and Conde Nast did only a few years ago. Mr. Tone is very serious about his stage work and won't appear in a production that isn't to some extent, socially or economically, purposeful, but he loves a good time, on the side, dresses the part of an engaging cavalier, is generally believed to be reasonably awash with resources, both from his family and in his own right, and has a nice eye for handsome and well-turned-out women, but stopping approximately a thousand miles short of the Tommy Manville school of taste.

FRANCHOT TONE

Apparently tireless, he thinks nothing of giving two performances of a Saturday, getting out of makeup and into tails and romping through the Stork, Morocco and half a dozen less notable establishments to end up in the lunatic midst of Jack White's or the Onyx and hitting his little bed at the Warwick about the time the first churchgoers are tooling down the Avenue to St. Thomas'. How he does it is a mystery, and not even such dashing lads of the boulevards as Alfred de Liagre, John and Jerrold Krimsky, Jock McLean, Peter Arno or Jerry Zerbe, all of whom are valiants of the first order once they get buckled into their broadcloth armor, can go him better.

Dorothy Kilgallen tried pacing Tone one evening, just for the record, shouting "Follow that car!" to her taxi driver in the most approved manner, but even she, who is a night sleuth to be reckoned with, lost him somewhere between the Kit Kat and Leon and Eddie's. Tone's other major achievement of the season is the provocation of an enormous revival of the autograph hunting nuisance. He himself is the chief victim of his fan popularity and has probably signed more books this winter than any other Broadway and Park avenue celebrity.

● SOMEBODY ought to present the American Wing at the Metropolitan with a specimen of what is fondly known to fim-casting directors and sentimental veterans as "the typical old-time reporter" before he is entirely extinct or has been entombed forever in a telephone booth in the pressroom at Police Headquarters.

Every now and then some quaint oldster gives tongue or pen to the notion that the New York newspaper reporter is that tobacco-chewing, illiterate and profane picture-snatcher, with a copy of "American Mercury" in one pocket and a flagon of mother's ruin in the other, whose principal occupations are climbing fire escapes, hoisting cameramen through transoms and denouncing the city desk in terms at once unmeasured and picaresque. Most recent to this department's desk is a leader from the eminent "Stafford Springs (Conn.) Press," referring with unconscious wistfulness to "the hard-boiled atmosphere that hovers around the reporting craft . . . and the boys with a wad of copy paper stuck in their pockets."

Reporters probably will carry copy paper folded in the left pocket of their jackets as long as gravity obtains and police cards are worn in hatbands at fires, but that "hard-boiled atmosphere" is as much of a collector's item as a genuine bottle of bogus 1923 Gordon's gin and the implied illiteracy, tobacco spitting, ruffianism and foot-in-door "Front Page" atmosphere is one with the livery stable and the mustache cup.

The last such office this department can recall was the city room of Fred Enright's "Boston Telegram," in the early '20s, when Norton Pratt was on the desk and the favorite diversion of the staff was whistling down the speaking tube for the composing-room foreman and then dropping a lighted six-inch salute down it when he answered. And there was the time the office bootlegger dropped an entire case of Hennessy from the bridge into the rollers of the color press. But this was far away and long ago, and if "The Stafford Springs Press" has any such wistful souvenirs around Henry Ford had better get them for his museum. They're as rare as green diamonds or 1804 silver dollars.

● WHAT WITH New York and Hollywood being America's two ranking glamour cities, and with Beverly Hills, in point of fact, a closer suburb to Manhattan than Englewood or Great Neck, it is only logical that the means of transport between these glitter foci should take on a good deal of the swank and chi-chi of its terminals.

More and more, the railroad trains between the Atlantic Seaboard and the Pacific Coast are assuming overtones of the Colony Restaurant and the Ritz Carlton, on one end, and of the Town House and the clubhouse at Santa Anita on the other. In company with a posse of other reporters and feature writers, we journeyed coastwards last week as the guest of the Santa Fe Railroad to view the wonders of the fair at San Francisco, and, incidentally, to experience the hospitality of the Santa Fe's own famed luxury travel.

—o—o—

As a matter of fact, from the time we left Grand Central until we pulled into the Los Angeles terminal there was not a moment aboard either the Century or the Chief when we might not have been in London's Savoy, the Adlon, the Plaza or any of the other celebrated luxury hotels of the world. Only in recent years has it been possible to span the continent in an atmosphere so wholly orchidaceous, so perfumed, private and fastidiously upholstered, and crossing the Raton and Glorieta aboard the Chief is a far cry from the old days on the Central Pacific, when, as the wooden coaches of one of the first trans-continental trains rounded Cape Horn in the Sierras with a 3000-foot drop just under the windows a timid lady traveler asked the fat man just ahead of her, for the love of heaven, please, to "lean a little more toward the center of the car!"

—o—o—

● TRIVIALIA: Now that the police have practically eliminated the old-time gyp cab from the town's hack ranks, about the only racket left for gyp drivers is the overcharge for carrying trunks. . . . The official fare tariff allows them four-bits for a trunk, presumably a box big enough to have to be carried on the rack outside, but racketeering drivers claim every outsize suitcase is a trunk, even when it's carried inside. . . . Rockwell Kent, the stormy petrel of Ausable Forks, has taken a plantation in the British West Indies for the winter and probably will soon be suing his majesty's government for something or other. . . . He dotes on fights the way other men hanker for fame, liquor or love. . . . Nobody is so conscious of his sartorial solecism of wearing no necktie as the now graying Jim Tully, who covertly watches the effect he creates in every restaurant he enters. . . . He was vastly disappointed when he didn't so much as get a raised eye in Jack Bleeck's Artist and Writers.

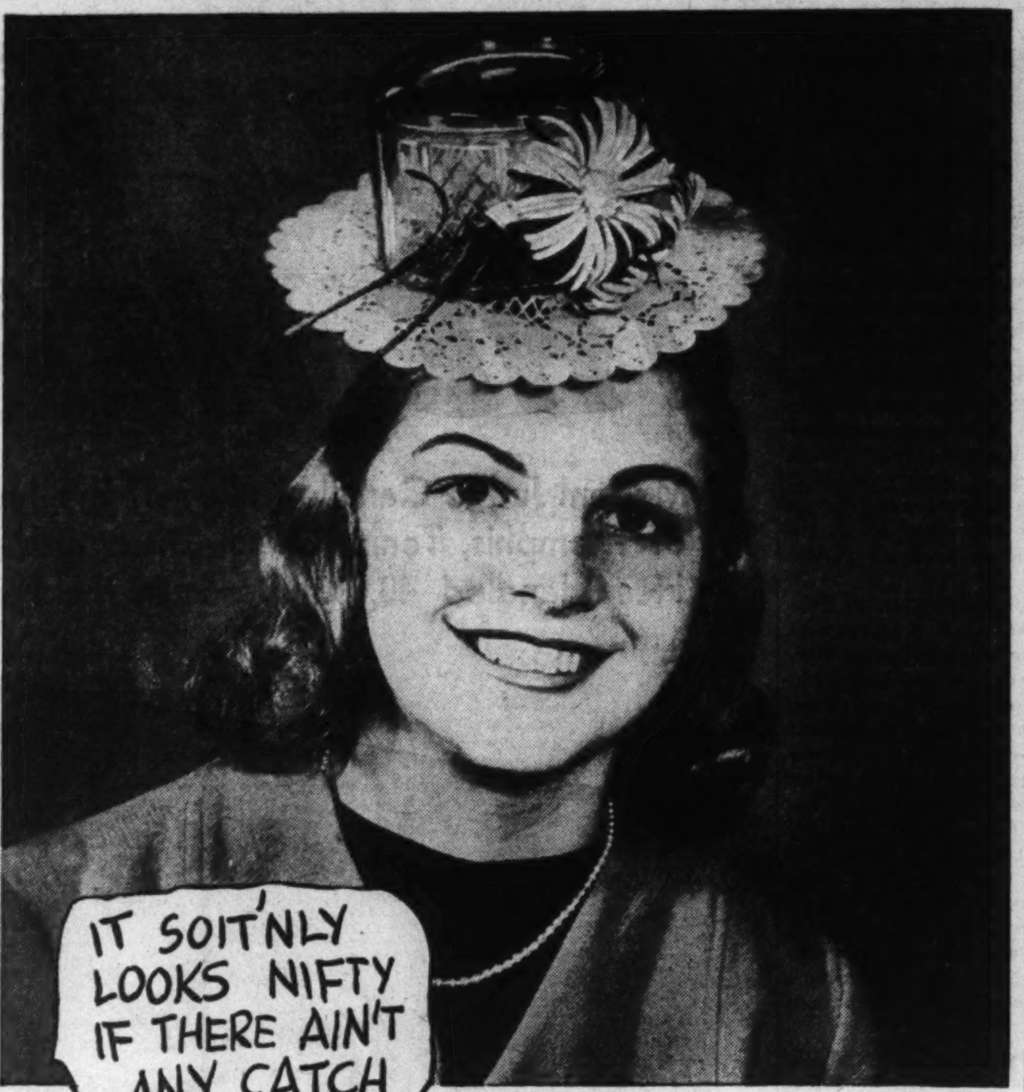
THE SUCCESS of the two authentic eating corporations of the town, the Wine and Food Society and Les Amis d'Escoffier, has attracted the inevitable spurious imitations. One which grabs a lot of newspaper space from gullible city editors is nothing more than a financial racket for its sponsor, who takes a rake-off from the restaurants where he steers his followers.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

HOOLIGAN HATS FOR SPRING

Millinery Designers Have Gone Back To Venerable Comic-Page Character For Inspiration of Newest Headgear.

By PRUNELLA WOOD



SMACK OUT OF THE FUNNY PAPERS COMES THIS VERSION OF THE TIN-CAN MODE.

DAME NATURE is about to stir in her wintry sleep—and boy!—are the dames one jump ahead of her, mad as March hares in the spring millinery department!

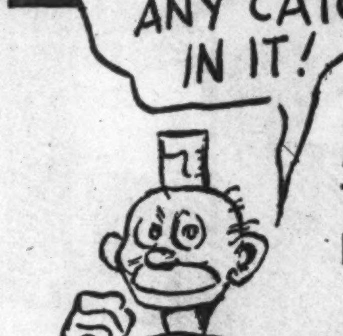
Ah, spring . . . beautiful spring—intoxicating days when a woman can take a couple of corn flakes or anything else similarly artless and turn it into a chapeau! You don't believe it? You didn't believe in dolls' hats last year, either—and now look at the things. They've got the dolls laughing this year.

The new spring bonnet, Mesdames (et Messieurs), is smack out of the funny papers. It was invented with one swipe of the pen some years ago for a character named Happy Hooligan who never heard of Lucius Beebe or Carrie Munn, let alone their lids. Basically, its design is simple to the half-wit point: the bowl of a corncob pipe, inverted and without the stem, atop the noggin. The ladies of today have added a tiny brim (for better balancing acts) and lots of veiling and flowers (for that feminine touch). The whole confection could be packed in a half-grapefruit skin from which the pulp and seeds have been removed. And a clever woman could use the remaining half-fruit skin for another hat, and make a ducky bracelet out of the seeds.

The really lovely color of a corncob pipe is one of the fashion highlights in our new hats. It is a swell complement for the perennial navy blue of the silly season, does well with the flowers, birds, vegetables, insects, hedgehogs and lesser fauna, ribbons, veils, wimples, Venetian blinds, awnings, Paradise plumes, ostrich feathers, hardware, hatpins—gadgets of whatever color, which adorn the mode of the moment.

Controversy rages, whetted by remarks from the gallery seats of such astute thinkers as Dorothy Thompson and Westbrook Pegler as to whether America is here to stay, in the face of such a rush of quaintness to the distaff voters' heads. Lilly Dache, one of our most whimsical and successful hat designers, took a poll on the subject which came out 50-50 and included a very good crack from Elsa Maxwell: "If women have no wit in their heads they have a right to wear somebody else's witty concoctions on their heads." Meanwhile, eager shoppers run unscathed before the barrages to the millinery salons and don't give a whoop that smarties like Brenda Frazier and lots of her Mayfair contemporaries are working hard at a "no hat" vogue. Box factories and feather workers are producing full time, and the psychiatrists are keeping a hopeful eye on the opposition's goading, in case it leads to a mass neurosis. Everybody in his or her peculiar way is as happy as Hooligan.

There is no help in Europe and even less in Hollywood. One Paris model is no more than a bunch of green grapes of medicine ball size, very very indigestible. Another is a rolled ribbon awning which can be pulled down to shade the eyes somewhat in the manner of the "calabash" which your great-grandmother wore so fetchingly.



IT SOIT'NLY LOOKS NIFTY IF THERE AIN'T ANY CATCH IN IT!

STYLE FORECAST FROM AN OLD ORIGINAL HAPPY HOOLIGAN DRAWING BY THE CREATOR OF THAT FAMOUS CHARACTER, THE LATE F. OPPER.

Dali has whipped up some bird's nests in cellophane from which sprout roses that nod on 12-inch stems. Mme. Agnes has contributed doughnuts of veiling, and mostly the hole, at that. A warrior's helmet of aigrettes—now, for goodness' sake!—comes to us from Reboux, and it is a matter of seconds, only, when some Parisian enthusiast about hands-across-the-sea throws together a trylon and perisphere on the name of a hat and presents it to the trade.

As to Hollywood, RKO sent out a proud release recently that Whitney Bourne of the films by way of Park avenue is wearing a smart creation with a crown shaped like an egg cup. And if you wonder whither they are drifting once they get out of the breakfast genre, how do you like this? John-Frederics, the most madly modern of New York's milliners, are out in the cinema city composing hats for "Gone With the Wind"! Bets are being laid as to whether Scarlett will come out in a sheep's wool chechia, complete with wimple, or the Colony Restaurant will suddenly sprout Important Matrons wearing poke bonnets trimmed with wild turkey wings, John-Frederics being a state of mind as well as a pair of individualists.

There is this to be said for the new hats, however; no matter how nutty a model may be, if it's becoming, it's becoming—so what? So wear it . . . and just don't notice the opposition. This is calculated to make them furious and since that is what they adore—go to it. Everybody will be as happy as Hooligan.

Skirt-Blouse Costumes in The Spotlight

Shirtwaist Frocks With Light Tops and Dark Skirts Are Favorites.

IT'S the time of the year for skirt-and-blouse costumes to take the fashion spotlight. Not only can the girls who wear these outfits pick themselves a collection of becoming shirtwaists to ally with suit skirts and look exceedingly springlike, but they can adopt the shirtwaist idea for their dinner engagements.

Shirtwaist frocks that combine a light, frilly top with a dark colored skirt are getting as much attention as any style theme being featured for early spring. Sometimes the designers show their practical qualities by adding bolero jackets so that the costume is complete. The mode appears for the street, for afternoon and for evening so that the follower of fashion trends who wishes an entire wardrobe based around this mode will be certain to be pleased.

—o-o—

NOW THAT so many girls have taken a fancy to this theme and decided they would like to look like a modern version of the Gibson beauty of the late nineties, the makers of separate skirts and blouses are reaping a harvest. Short skirts and long skirts made of navy or black crepe, generously accordion-pleated, are regarded with so much favor that some shops are having difficulty in keeping them in stock.

White lingerie blouses are the most popular to ally with these skirts although some colored models are of increasing importance. Short sleeved types are beginning to replace the long-sleeved ones in demand last month.

BY CHOOSING two skirts, one of daytime length and one of floor length for informal evening, blouses may be worn interchangeably with these two. Such a blouse wardrobe undoubtedly will include a very frilly organdie style, trimmed with lace or embroidery. A dotted blouse which injects a vivid color into the ensemble, another of a flower tone of sheer fabric and a third that is boldly striped will give sufficient variety to suit every occasion.

When more spectacular interpretations of this vogue of skirts and blouses are undertaken, the large block patterns of taffeta or the wide striped satins are used for the skirts. There also is the same striking effect to be attained by using a boldly checked or plaided taffeta blouse with a dark colored skirt of crepe or taffeta. When crepe is used, the pleated version is preferred but the taffeta models are more likely to be circular or gored to give a fan-shaped effect.

Accessory Shades

Taffy and Pan-American tan are two shades that are flattering for spring accessories. They are featured for gloves, hosiery, bags, belts and footwear as well as millinery.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

BY CLARISSA START

INASMUCH as St. Louis has just finished blowing out 175 candles on its birthday cake, it might be apropos to make a curtsey to a local historical item we saw recently, an original of the first city directory to be published in St. Louis, dating back to 1821 and recently brought to light when the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. conducted a contest to unearth interesting items housed in safe deposit boxes.

Douglas Robert, downtown attorney, won out over entrants who cited such imagination-provoking items as a necklace once belonging to the Empress Carlotta, an old surgeon's knife with two blades, one for mixing potions and one for operations; old English deeds bearing the seal of Charles II, and the like, with his report of the directory which has been passed down through members of his wife's family and now resides in the Robert box.

THE VOLUME ITSELF, despite its claim to fame, is not an imposing-looking book, and in fact, being a mere 7½x4½ inches in size and one-half inch in thickness, it looks like a pocket edition of an English novel, alongside the present wide-girthed number. But between its faded blue covers, and printed on its yellowing leaves is a distinct picture of the St. Louis of 1821, a St. Louis described in the preface as "a flourishing incorporated post town," which extended "nearly two miles along the river," and had a population of 9787, although only 725 were listed in the directory.

In the front of the old directory are several quaint advertisements, one of the old Green Tree Inn, located "about two squares below the Roman Catholic church," a plough and harrow manufacturer, and a men's hat concern which, instead of screaming bargains in bold type, commented politely, "prices are at least 20 per cent lower than usual at this place."

—o-o—

THE NAMES in the directory, running from Sarah Abel to Benjamin Young, are liberally sprinkled with those of French descent, Alexandre, Beaugenou, Charleville, Garnier, Laveille, as well as such historic names as Chouteau, Papin and Lindell. Thomas F. Riddick, Thomas H. Benton, Rufus Easton, William C. Carr, John O'Fallon, are among the familiar names listed therein.

One interesting sentence in the preface of the book apologizes for the omission of the ordinances of the city, but says the author, as they proved too voluminous, "the Constitution of the U. States has been substituted in their stead, which, it is hoped, will give general satisfaction."

Other features of the book are the list of Masonic officers, the two fire departments — North and South—and the professional men.

"As usual," the attorney-owner remarked wryly, "there were more attorneys than anything else." Twenty-seven if them are listed, a goodly number, though scarcely comparable to the estimated 2500 today. Other men were listed as having such occupations as cordwainer, victualler, tallow chandler, and well digger, which sounds faintly Shakespearean.

But charming and mellowed with age though this little volume is, there is one note of modernity in it. How the Believe-It-or-Not Ripley of the day, had one existed, would have chortled and pounced on this item—Luke Lawless, who is listed as being a counsellor of law.

—o-o—

A GIRL we saw walking down Olive street the other afternoon has perplexed us no end, and we still haven't figured how or what she was. The uniquely dressed lassie was wearing a short blue knitted dress with no coat, though the day was quite coolish, her dark hair streamed down her back, cafe society fashion, and as additional attractions she displayed a silver fox hat, huge silver fox muff, and a dab of silver fox on her dress. We scurried after her, looking for the furrier's placard, but none was in evidence. IF YOU ASK MY OPINION -:- -:- -:- By Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

DURING the month of May I plan to be on the east coast of Mexico, also in Mexico City. Is it warm enough for white summer clothes, or will spring outfits be appropriate? I wish to travel light, but want to equip myself with suitable sports clothes for one or two deep-sea fishing excursions. Your advice will be appreciated. S. C.

—o-o—

The climate of Mexico is so equable that the choice of wearing apparel for a stay there is comparatively easy. For instance, in the City of Mexico, you will wear much the same clothing as you would in St. Louis or New York. For seacoast places, large or small, take cool washable clothes, sports clothes mostly, even for small cities there. Plan your wardrobe according to your planned activities. And if you expect to go to dances you would of course take evening and dinner dresses of the lighter kind. White in sports clothes with color in accessories you will find useful. Top coats, one light in weight and the other perhaps an allround tweed, will see you through cool evenings and water trips.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I HAD BEEN dating a boy for almost a year. When my folks met him they thought he was "swell"; my mother still does. But my father feels just the opposite; he keeps telling me that he is a no-good. And when this boy comes over for dinner, my father acts like he hasn't any manners; he is so careless, leaves his things lying around the house and does things he never thinks of doing when the boy is not there; I suppose he wants to disgust the boy and make him give up. But we are going to try and stick it out. The boy knows my father does not like him and he keeps asking me why. But he knows mother likes him. What shall I say to him?

The boy comes from a wonderful family, has a job and it would break my heart to have to lose him. What could I do about my father? Mother says he will get over it.

I hope you can help me out. Thank you very much.

WONDERING.

There may be several reasons why your father has become obstreperous and doubtless your mother knows them; but she hopes to keep the happy equilibrium by appearing neutral.

I judge (from several things), that you are in your early teens, with a leaning toward the romantic and the picturesque; and while your father doubtless believes his tactics are the right ones, this opposition is just what you want in order to make the romance a melancholy dream. Age, no doubt, is one of your father's reasons for opposition; another may be this youth's lack of common sense in knowledge of time; and his too frequent appearances. As some parents put it unpicturesquely, "I wouldn't mind the children having boy company if they were older" and were this boy not "eternally under foot."

Do not moan and groan without reason; why not be clever enough to arrange with the boy to call a sudden halt. Tell the boy frankly that you really think your father does not dislike him, but resents your being together so much and perhaps interfering with school work. Say to him that you want to play a joke on your father, pretending that you've had a break up—and see how he takes it. Let your mother in on the secret and all of you act it out. Perhaps this will be a hint to the boy to make his visits after that farther apart; which, likely is what your father wishes.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I ALWAYS READ your column and sometimes find good advice that I can use to great advantage.

Just the other day, I read a letter signed "Bobby." I, too, am a housemaid of her same age and started to work the winter I was 16. I work in the winter in the city and go home for the summer; in this way I've had experience in a number of places and I want to say that women are not all "slave drivers," by any means. And when it comes to housework as an occupation, I cannot think of anything more respectable, if you work for a respectable family; and I have the good fortune now, though with plenty of work, to be with just that kind.

So maybe you aren't so bad off after all, "Bobby." There are some who treat us like human beings. Why others do not, I can't understand either.

ANOTHER HOUSEMAID.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

Can you settle an argument? What is the birthplace and the name of the place where the Weaver Bros. started their career that led them to Hollywood?

ANOTHER HILL BILLY.

The Weaver Brothers and Elviry have a home six miles south of Springfield, Mo., but I do not know where they were born. You can write them in care of Warner Brothers, Burbank, Cal.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM A BRIDE of three months, having been engaged seven years. Shortly before my marriage, I became very friendly with a young married man in my office. He is the father of two children and I think my friendship for him was brought about by feeling sorry for him. He has been financially down and out and I have been lending him money. I am infatuated with him, even though my husband is very good to me. We have our own home and a fine start in life but I cannot cure my infatuation.

PERPLEXED.

Your infatuation sounds to me like a case of pity for someone weaker, which you should take out on a cat or dog or canary instead of a fully grown man. Certainly you can't respect a man who would borrow money from you, deceive his own wife, and be willing to let you deceive your husband. By all means stop seeing him. Start feeling sorry instead for your own husband. Any young man who provides his wife with a nice home deserves better treatment than you're giving him.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I would like to know if there were any Atheistic societies here in the city. If so, where are they located? I'm sure there are other intelligent atheists here in St. Louis beside myself and would appreciate getting in touch with them. If there are no groups, I would like to get in touch with some who are true atheists and perhaps we might be able to start a society.

Very truly yours, C. F.

I do not happen to know of such a society here; but should anyone write in, asking your address, I will send it to them.

—o-o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM to be married soon and would like to have a church wedding, but I will not be able to afford a costly breakfast. What could I have in place of it?

JUST PLAIN DUMB.

My booklet, "Guide for the Bride," which will be sent you on receipt of self-addressed, stamped envelope, has many suggestions for wedding refreshments, wedding dress and wedding forms.

—o-o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

CAN YOU tell me whether or not a driver's license can be secured if the person is under 16 years of age? Thank you. J. I.

YOU'RE TOO YOUNG

The State of Missouri does not permit automobile licenses issued to anyone under 16 years of age.

—o-o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM the country wife who would like to answer "One Who Lights Home Fires." I don't think this writer thought of the country wife, who has children.

My husband has no more to do than I. For instance, I arise at 4:45 a. m., build the fires, get breakfast, make three school lunches, wash the dishes, milk a cow and have the children ready for school by 8 o'clock. Then I feed and water the chickens, wash and iron twice a week and, in summer, take care of most of the garden. Well, I get plenty of exercise!

I think it the country man's place to build the fires and the wife to cook the breakfast. The country wives, in case you wonder what they will do with the rest of the day, have water to carry.

COUNTRY WIFE SPEAKING.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

WOULD YOU please give me the age a girl must be in order to be married in Missouri without the consent of her parents?

DOUBTFUL.

She must be 18 years old.

BY CLARISSA START

INASMUCH as St. Louis has just finished blowing out 175 candles on its birthday cake, it might be apropos to make a curtsey to a local historical item we saw recently, an original of the first city directory to be published in St. Louis, dating back to 1821 and recently brought to light when the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. conducted a contest to unearth interesting items housed in safe deposit boxes.

Douglas Robert, downtown attorney, won out over entrants who cited such imagination-provoking items as a necklace once belonging to the Empress Carlotta, an old surgeon's knife with two blades, one for mixing potions and one for operations; old English deeds bearing the seal of Charles II, and the like, with his report of the directory which has been passed down through members of his wife's family and now resides in the Robert box.

THE VOLUME ITSELF, despite its claim to fame, is not an imposing-looking book, and in fact, being a mere 7½x4½ inches in size and one-half inch in thickness, it looks like a pocket edition of an English novel, alongside the present wide-girthed number. But between its faded blue covers, and printed on its yellowing leaves is a distinct picture of the St. Louis of 1821, a St. Louis described in the preface as "a flourishing incorporated post town," which extended "nearly two miles along the river," and had a population of 9787, although only 725 were listed in the directory.

In the front of the old directory are several quaint advertisements, one of the old Green Tree Inn, located "about two squares below the Roman Catholic church," a plough and harrow manufacturer, and a men's hat concern which, instead of screaming bargains in bold type, commented politely, "prices are at least 20 per cent lower than usual at this place."

—o-o—

THE NAMES in the directory, running from Sarah Abel to Benjamin Young, are liberally sprinkled with those of French descent, Alexandre, Beaugenou, Charleville, Garnier, Laveille, as well as such historic names as Chouteau, Papin and Lindell. Thomas F. Riddick, Thomas H. Benton, Rufus Easton, William C. Carr, John O'Fallon, are among the familiar names listed therein.

One interesting sentence in the preface of the book apologizes for the omission of the ordinances of the city, but says the author, as they proved too voluminous, "the Constitution of the U. States has been substituted in their stead, which, it is hoped, will give general satisfaction."

Other features of the book are the list of Masonic officers, the two fire departments — North and South—and the professional men.

"As usual," the attorney-owner remarked wryly, "there were more attorneys than anything else." Twenty-seven if them are listed, a goodly number, though scarcely comparable to the estimated 2500 today. Other men were listed as having such occupations as cordwainer, victualler, tallow chandler, and well digger, which sounds faintly Shakespearean.

But charming and mellowed with age though this little volume is, there is one note of modernity in it. How the Believe-It-or-Not Ripley of the day, had one existed, would have chortled and pounced on this item—Luke Lawless, who is listed as being a counsellor of law.

FEATURES OF GENERAL INTEREST

RETURN TO RELIGION

CHILDREN AND SUNDAY SCHOOL

"MINDS ARE NOT BORN, THEY ARE ACQUIRED BY TRAINING."

Noted Psychologist Tells Why, in His Opinion, Regular Attendance at Sunday School Enriches Personality of Children.

By HENRY C. LINK
Director of the Psychological Social Service Center, New York City.

CHAPTER SEVEN.

VIVIDLY do I remember a hot September afternoon, returning on the train from Forest Hills where my wife and I had been watching the tennis matches. Somehow, we got to the subject of children attending Sunday school. The question in our minds was whether or not we should send our children, then 4 and 2 years old, to Sunday school. My wife and I had been compelled to attend not only Sunday school but church, regularly, from our very early childhood on. In our occasional revolts we had been met by the stern insistence of deeply religious parents.

Their religious discipline had included our not infrequent accompanying them to week-night prayer meeting, our attendance at classes for the study of the catechism, and our presence in later childhood at many other church functions such as the Young People's Society, and periodic series of revival meetings. At home we had learned to say grace at all meals, and had been required to participate in family devotions at which we all took turns reading from the Bible and then knelt while the head of the family led us in prayer.

Upon entering college, this discipline was automaticaly left behind. Except for the college chapel service, of pleasant variety, no formal religious observance was required. Not only did we receive freedom from religious routine, but the education we received gradually emancipated us from the intellectual routines of religion. We learned, in the light of modern science, how absurd much of the Bible was. The religious doubts which we had expressed before coming to college, and which had been dismissed by our elders with brief explanations, now received major consideration. Indeed, many of the elements of religion which we might never have questioned, were brought under the microscope of scientific or historical research, and there transformed into the squirmings and writhings of little minds.

In the end, we had learned that the concrete details of religion, the church and the churches, the creeds and the doctrines, the rituals, the ministry, the regimentation of people in religious practices—all these were but the superstitious mistakes of uninformed minds trying to express the spiritual core of religion.

There was left then, of religion, that abstract core, a God stripped of any concrete characteristics or any definite connection with the world of our daily behavior or the institutions in which we had been reared. This was called a spiritual conception of God. Actually, it was a scientific abstraction, a purely intellectual concept similar to that reached by the physicist in his analysis of matter. Starting from the tangible and solid facts of matter and substance, the physicist, by way of the elements, the atoms, the molecules, the ether squirts, finally reaches the ultimate abstraction: Matter consists of mass points in motion. Beginning with much that matters, the physicist ends with something that matters little or nothing.

SO WE and many others, beginning with a substantial if not altogether comfortable heritage of religious habits and practices, were aided to arrive at a concept of God as an abstract something, maybe The Mass Point in Motion. Some pupils were so apt in this process of abstracting the anthropomorphic and material elements from religion that, in the end, nothing believable was left. They became, like many of their teachers, complete skeptics or agnostics. Others, however, were so stupid, so impervious to the meaning of the courses they were studying that they went right on believing the untenable doctrines and routines they had acquired in childhood. I should say, with a high probability of accuracy, that the emancipation of students from religious doctrines was in almost direct ratio to their I. Q., or intelligence quotient. The greater their intellectual capacity, the more quickly they saw the absurdities of religion.

My wife in one of the great colleges for women, and I in one of the renowned colleges for men, received the Phi Beta Kappa keys. We both profited by our education to such an extent that we became virtual agnostics. If we believed in God at all, it was the most vague and attenuated kind of belief. Certainly it had nothing to do with the church, the practices and preachings of which had by this time become repugnant to us. We considered ourselves above such antics.

On that hot September afternoon, on the Long Island suburban train, we came to this broad-minded conclusion: We would neither discourage nor encourage our children to go to Sunday school, but would let them make their own free choice. We would not repeat the duress to which we had been subjected by our parents. We would let our children be guided by their own intelligence, and if they wanted to go to Sunday school, they could go. We were both well pleased with this decision, which was so in keeping with our modern and enlightened times and the so-called new psychology of self-expression.

We were only one of many young couples at that time making virtually the same decision. Again and again, our conversations with other parents would lead up to a statement on their part like this:

We are not sending our children to Sunday school or church until they are old enough to know better, or old enough to know what it is all about. But what troubles us is whether they will acquire the strong sense of right and wrong, the definite moral beliefs, which we acquired in our childhood. We were taught that certain things were right and wrong because God or the Bible said so. The method may have been primitive, but the effects were certainly good. At least, we learned a great deal about right and wrong living. Now we can only tell our children that certain acts are good or bad because WE say so, or society says so. Is that as strong? Will it be as effective? Will our children, without the pressure of religious doctrine, acquire the basic moral values of life which we automatically accept, even though we no longer accept their divine origin?

I cannot begin to remember the many times and the many ways in which this question was discussed by parents with a religious heritage and a modern education. I only know that we were beginning to feel the responsibilities of parenthood, and that we were unprepared to answer this question. Whatever the answers we devised, I have since learned that they were wrong, and wrong from every psychological, philosophical and common-sense point of view.

The rearing of children is a task of such magnitude, one so intricate in its complexities and so baffling in its contradictions, that parents usually need every iota of help they can obtain. It was only natural, having dispensed with the aids of religious beliefs and institutions, that enlightened parents should turn to other sources for help, and where more naturally than to the psychology of childhood? The psychology of childhood was not ready for them. The science had progressed only to the point of confidence in theories. Scientific evidence was still very meager, though theories were plentiful.

Parents accepted the theories, among which were such as these: that corporal punishment was psychologically harmful; that a child should be reasoned with rather than dogmatically coerced; that the child should not be repressed—on the contrary, it should be allowed to express itself; that left-handedness was an inherited mechanism; that a child was born with a certain I. Q. or level of intelligence and nothing could change it; that children should be given a regular allowance in order that they might learn the value of money; that some children were naturally nervous or sensitive and should therefore not be compelled to do what other children do.

None of these theories was ever substantiated by scientific psychological evidence, and practically all of them have been proved definitely erroneous. Left-handedness is not inherited but acquired by the accidents of early training. Physical punishment, orthodox child psychologists now agree, is not only permissible but at times the most effective way of dealing with a child and much less injurious than prolonged reasoning and discussion. Arbitrarily enforced commands by the parents and the lessons of unquestioned authority are considered an indispensable element in the rearing of a child. The I. Q. is not an infallible measure of the child's intellectual capacity, but only a rough measure of what the child will do in the field of orthodox education.

MOREOVER, when the I. Q. is measured, the good or bad influences of training and environment have already distorted the result so that the intelligence quotient of young children of intellectual parents may be 1.50, whereas five or 10 years later it may be down to 1.25 or even 1.00. A regular allowance may give children some idea of money's value, but is just as likely to encourage their habits of getting more and more for nothing. The over-emphasis on expression, fostered by the movement for progressive education, we now have learned leads to mental and moral chaos. Self-expression is desirable, but only in its proper place. That place is defined by the discipline and conventional habits which make it possible for people to live together with a degree of harmony.

For the past three years I have been experimenting with the development of a test for children between the ages of 10 and 18, a test calculated to measure certain personality traits or habits somewhat after the order of similar tests devised by psychologists for use with adults. The traits measured by this test are:

Extroversion, or habits of paying attention to other people and their interests, and habits of developing skills and competence in certain activities.

Social ascendancy, or habits of taking the initiative in meeting and dealing with people.

Self-determination, or habits of subordinating impulsive tendencies to a more distant goal.

Economic self-determination, or habits of doing work for the sake of money or some objective that costs money.

Sex adjustment, or habits of meeting and dealing with members of the opposite sex.

This test has now been given to 2000 children and undergone an elaborate process of checking and statistical analysis. Its results show that among the most important habits contributing to an effective personality are the following:

Going to Sunday school and having parents who attend church. The children tested who had these charactertistics were much more likely to rank as extrovert and socially ascendant than the children who did not. The very fact of parents attending church was a factor in the development of desirable personality traits on the part of their children, and the attendance of Sunday school by the children was an even more important factor.

Having served on a committee or committees; belonging to a club, school society, orchestra, boy scouts, dramatic society, etc.; attending school affairs like athletic events, parties, plays and recitals; children who did these things were more likely to be extrovert and socially ascendant than were those children who did not.

Children who often do things they don't like to do simply because they think they should do them; who like to try things even when they can't do them well; who, when they know they are not good at something take special pains to improve; who, when they have two things to do, one they like and one they dislike, generally do first the thing they dislike; who often do things they dislike because it will help them to realize some ambition; children with these habits and tendencies are much more likely to rank high in extroversion and self-determination than those who lack them.

Contrariwise, children who often say: I can't do this or I am no good at this; who often lose patience with themselves and give up trying to do something because they are awkward or embarrassed; who often refuse to play games because they lack skill; are much more likely to be introvert and socially submissive.

Among the habits contributing most heavily toward introversion, social submissiveness, and dependence, are: losing one's temper frequently; getting blue or sulking when things don't go to suit; exaggerating and fussing about ordinary incidents; not being a cheerful loser; having hard luck or brooding over mistakes. All these items represent habit mechanisms which, as they become fixed, prevent the child from acquiring many desirable habits and personality traits. They are among the principal sources of emotional unbalance and inferiority, just as the other habits previously mentioned are the sources of superiority and emotional stability.

The habit of criticising or finding fault with other people; of interrupting conversation; of saying right out what is on one's mind rather than restraining this impulse for fear of hurting people's feelings; these habits are very important factors in producing a socially submissive personality and a personality that is supersensitive to criticisms by other people.

Contrariwise, the child who often pays compliments or says things which he knows will please other pepople; who tries to be friendly with all people whether he likes them or not; who has learned to control his feelings so that people won't know he is boiling inside; this child tends to rate high in personality traits and is not so easily upset by the criticisms of other people.

The child who usually goes to sleep promptly after going to bed is likely to have a better personality than the one who lies awake thinking. The child who is often fagged out during the day so that he doesn't feel like doing anything is more likely to rate as introvert. These findings should be considered together with the following: that children who participate in many games and sports, and especially those who are practicing consistently in a few sports, or who participate in competitive athletics and games, tend to stand much higher in personality traits than those who do not.

Children who like mathematics and the sciences, including the mechanical and household arts, tend to have better personality traits than do the children who prefer English, languages, and history.

—o-o—

THE FACT that children get an allowance from their parents, have a savings account and save money, is found to have no bearing on their personality traits in either direction. Children, however, who sell tickets, do chores, and go out to get jobs doing things they don't like in order to earn money, are far more likely to have desirable personality traits than the children who never do these things.

Finally, there is no relationship between the standing of the children in respect to the personality traits measured by this test and their standing in their studies or in a so-called general intelligence test. Other psychologists have also found that there is no correlation between scholastic success and a good personality.

Tests like these, and the analysis of the habits which contribute to a good personality, represents the attempt of psychologists to do what the field of education has never done—that is, to codify the habits and elements which go to make an effective personality. Education has codified arithmetic, spelling, reading, and all the various subjects which are supposed to develop a good mind. There are hundreds of subjects, and thousands of textbooks, many kinds of courses and curricula, representing the structure and codification of intellectual learning. It is a magnificent structure from the standpoint of size, detail and comprehensiveness. But nothing like it exists in the field of personality and its development.

"AMONG THE MOST IMPORTANT HABITS CONTRIBUTING TO AN EFFECTIVE PERSONALITY IS GOING TO SUNDAY SCHOOL."

—o-o—

MINDS are not born, they are acquired by training. Personality is not born, it is developed by practice. But we have no library of scientific books on the latter. The greatest and most authentic textbook on personality is still the Bible, and the discoveries which psychologists have made tend to confirm rather than to contradict the codification of personality found there. Psychology differs from all other sciences in this important respect. Whereas the other sciences have taught us that our previous ideas and beliefs about nature were wrong, psychology is proving that many of the ancient ideas and precepts about the development of a good character and personality were right.

The keynote which runs through the elements or habits of personality included in this test is this: The child develops a good personality, or at least the foundations of such a personality, by doing many things which he does not do naturally, and many things which he actually dislikes. Eating with a knife and a fork may become natural to him in time, and even enjoyable, but not until his parents have spent four to eight years of laborious effort in getting him to use them properly. Children vary, of course, by nature and heredity; but no matter how good they are, the basic habits must be inculcated by a process of discipline. In view of the inevitable resentment toward discipline which children develop and their inertia in acquiring many desirable habits, every available influence, pressure, or device which will hasten their acquisition of these habits must be utilized. Most parents need every source of help or support available in this process.

FROM a psychological as well as from a common-sense point of view, the greatest source of help is religion. The religious belief in God, the Ten Commandments, and the teachings of Jesus, gives parents a certainty and an authority with their children which they otherwise lack. Those parents who wondered how, in the absence of the religious influences which had moulded them, they could mould the moral habits of their children, were facing an unanswerable problem. There is no rational substitute for the supernatural power which the unquestioned belief in a Divine Being and a Divine moral order confers.

Parents who have been emancipated by education and reason from this belief are uncertain themselves. How then can they be authorities to their children? In the absence of religious authority, each parent must become an intellectual and often an original authority on the many questions of right and wrong, good and bad habits, which he is trying to impress upon his children.

The older the child grows, and the more he comes under the influence of the conflicting authorities of society—the school, the neighbors, the gang, the town—the more difficult the task becomes. Indeed, it is an impossible task, and the confusion in the minds of so many parents these days is eloquent testimony to the truth of this statement.

Religion is the only unifying and ever-present force which can help to solve the inevitable moral and intellectual conflicts of parents, children and society at large. In a world of change and rebellion to authority, God is the only fixed point.

The child upon whom the existence of God, as a supreme arbiter of good and evil, has been impressed early in life, has already acquired the basic motive in developing good habits. The basis for his actions, instead of being one of likes and dislikes, becomes one of right and wrong. He might like to disobey his mother, but he knows that it is wrong. He might not like to return all the change from a purchase, but he knows that it is right. He might not like to be unselfish with his playmates, but he knows that he should. Naturally, the process is not so simple as this; but the habit of differentiating between selfish, personal impulses and a more important good, between pleasure and duty in short, is fostered.

The doctrine of original sin, and the conquest of the natural man, so important in religion, is profoundly true from a psychological point of view. The habits of a good personality are acquired by the conquest of laziness and natural impulse. In so far as religion impresses this upon the child, in terms of the many good habits which he must learn, it hastens his acquisition of good personality traits.

Many parents have told me that their children were just naturally lazy. No doubt some are, and often due to natural causes. But industry and energy are acquired habits no matter what the physique. The more skills and mechanisms the child develops, the more readily such physical energies as he may have translate themselves into action.

Many parents have told me that their children are naturally nervous and given to loss of temper. Again, these natural tendencies are converted into more wholesome directions to the extent that skills in games and work are acquired. The teachings of religion in regard to sin, the conquest of the natural man, the necessity of the continuous rebirth of the individual, have their maximum value in the malleable years of the child's life.

The Sunday school and the church, whatever their shortcomings as institutions, do help to inculcate the basic concepts of right and wrong, selfish and unselfish action, in the growing child. They help to establish the basic belief in God and a divine moral order as the source of these concepts. They are, therefore, of incalculable assistance to parents and society in giving children the necessary foundation for developing good characters and personalities. It is not surprising that the test described earlier in this chapter should show that children who went to Sunday

LET ME SUGGEST

By Josephine Walter

BEFORE I leave the subject of my New York trip finally and forever, I want to mull over all the little items that I gleaned here and there, that didn't seem to fit into any of my other articles on this subject. They are picked out helter skelter from hither and yon and maybe you will each be able to gather one little idea that you can utilize in your own home.

First, Josephine, that old needlewoman, couldn't possibly refrain from telling you about the fascinating exhibit that she attended given by the Amateur Needlework Guild for the New York Association of the Blind. Now, in case I haven't made this clear before, some of our very best people are mad about needlework, and in quite a serious way, too, as this exhibit proved. Such impressive names as Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Suydam Cutting and Mrs. Lydig Hoyt, to say nothing of Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., were attached to some of the pieces on display and very beautifully done they were, too. In fact, Mrs. Roosevelt not only does the needlework, but designs all her own patterns, most of which deliniate wild animals that she sees and studies on hunting trips with her husband.

—o-o—

● NOT LONG AGO I read that the vogue for needlework reached its height in the days of Queen Anne, the reason given being that she was so stupid that she couldn't even read a book, and therefore used her hands to keep from being bored. I'm sure that no such motive actuates these very smart and up-to-the-minute women who are devoting some of their spare time to needlework. As most of these women design their own patterns, it gives them some outlet for creative abilities, and, with the very active lives they lead, I am sure this needlework must often be done as something quiet and relaxing, rather than as a chore.

—o-o—

All different types of needlework were represented, ranging from needlepoint chairs and rugs to silk pictures finely embroidered and book covers with pearls and emeralds worked into the design. Many were original designs and equally as many were copied from old prints or pictures, magazine covers and even family photographs. The entire show was fascinating, and I would like to see some St. Louis woman interest herself in a similar project, for I am sure there are enough fine needlewomen here to provide a most interesting show.

—o-o—

● I WANT TO SAY a word about a very interesting family I met. They live in a grand, rambling, old house and each member of the large family is a collector, with one room devoted to each collection. Never have I seen a family so alive, so interested in everything connected with the hobbies of the other members of the family and with such a spirit of complete accord. I couldn't help but feel that if all people had some type of hobby to occupy spare moments, there would be many more contented, less bored people in the world.

—o-o—

About their various hobbies. One collected a certain type of books, with interesting bookmarks as a side line. Another collected old valentines that were not only quaint but beautiful. Another collected card cases, patch boxes, bouquet holders and other feminine gadgets of bygone generations. Not one of these hobbies represented great outlays of money, but did represent an absorbing interest that had led each member of the family into out-of-the-way places to ferret out hidden treasures for their collections.

● And now a potpourri of notes. Gilded wrought iron is a new and very interesting material that is now being used for furniture. It has been introduced into modern French pieces which yet make a bow to the periods of the Louis', in their exaggerated curves. Fascinating coffee and end tables have glass tops which are painted on the under side of the glass with romantic figures that hark back to the days of the troubadours, the rest of the glass being finished in black lacquer. Another most unusual chest utilized heavy sand-blasted glass in an ice-blue tone, with a design of deep blue and white flowers etched on the under side of the glass.

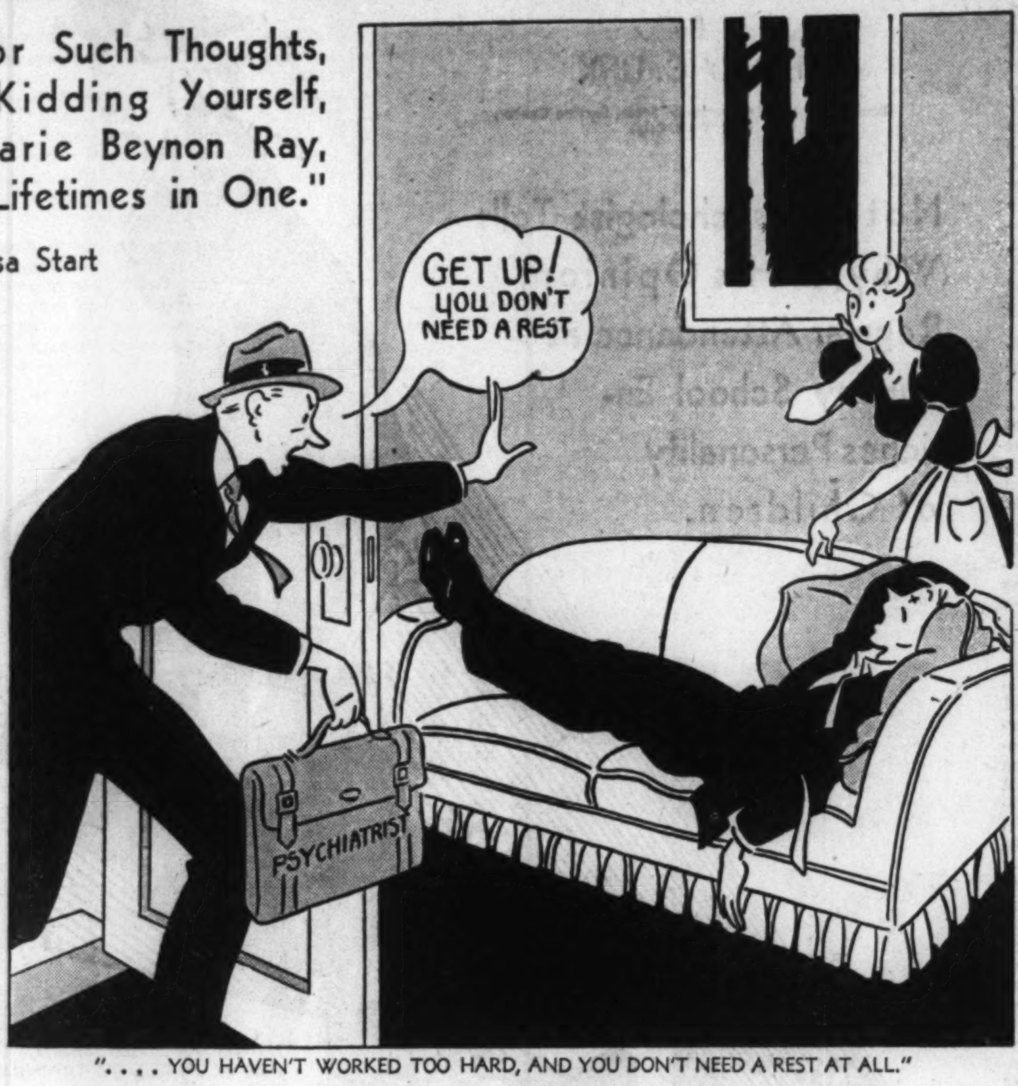
Doors get a great deal of attention in many of the decorative schemes. One pair of flush doors painted to resemble molded panels illustrates one principle that is used over and over again by the New York decorators—that it is frequently more fun to use a simulated material or effect in place of the real thing, even if the "fake" costs more money. For instance, marbleizing is a passion at the moment, as well as simulated animal skins and imitation tortoise shell. But to get back to doors; another amusing one had the various panels painted in different colors, while another had panels filled in with mirror.

As a step farther in this matter of individually designed head-boards—many are now framed and hung on the wall, much like a picture. The frames are frequently Baroque in feeling, of carved wood or plaster, with the center part of some quilted or tufted fabric.

DO YOU THINK YOU'RE OVERWORKED?

If You Do Harbor Such Thoughts, You Are Merely Kidding Yourself, According to Marie Beynon Ray, Author of "Two Lifetimes in One."

By Clarissa Start



GET UP! YOU DON'T NEED A REST
PSYCHIATRIST

". . . . YOU HAVEN'T WORKED TOO HARD, AND YOU DON'T NEED A REST AT ALL."

DO you go home every night feeling dog-tired, sure you're overworked, and badly in need of a rest cure? If so, it might interest you to know that you have no reason whatsoever to be tired, you haven't worked too hard, and you don't need a rest at all. What you do need is a lot more work, so you can use up all your excess energies which, we might add, have been pretty successfully concealed to date.

But before you start looking for the coupon for Dr. Quack's herb tonic, or let go with a vicious bit of cutlery in our direction, let us hasten to add we are merely quoting from that latest literary gem on self improvement, "Two Lifetimes in One," by Marie Beynon Ray, a 306-page pep talk on "How Never to Be Tired, How to Have Energy to Burn," and, in our estimation, "How to Knock Youself Out in Ten Hard Lessons."

We don't know just what the general attitude is on this crucial problem that has Marie in a twit, but we've always been satisfied and in fact a bit glutted, with one lifetime and are rather aghast to think of anyone wanting two, much less writing about it, but since we're broadminded, we'll pass on a few of Mrs. Ray's principles for filling in the back of your mind, way back.

Concerning those precepts, Marie says hopefully, "If you begin to practice the principles outlined, then, in a few weeks, perhaps a few days . . . you will become one of those enviable, almost incredible human beings of whom people say, "He's a Human Dynamo. He doesn't know how to be tired. He's bound to succeed." As Ted Cook would say, Ya wanna bet?

Despite this wholeheartedly unsympathetic attitude, Marie drags out a gent by the name of Joe Day to be your model in your struggle to be tireless. Her description of him should be enough to warn you. Joe, it seems, seldom walks, he runs. He never has an overcoat or an umbrella. Says they weight him down. He never sits if he can stand, never stands if he can walk, never walks if he can dodge taxis in the middle of the street. Since everyone, according to folklore, has a double, they must have an opposite, too, and this kid named Joe is certainly ours. We never run if we can walk, never walk if we can stand, never stand if we can sit, and in fact never sit if we can lie down positively prone.

But save your sympathy because we don't give a whoopsy if no one mistakes us for Joe Day. For he is also, we read further, a back slapper, an eyebrow busher, and a jotter down on slips of paper in the middle of the night. This latter habit is held in great esteem by Mrs. Ray, whereas any city cliff dweller knows if he jotted down his mildest thoughts in the middle of the night, the slips of paper would likely flutter out the window, and there he'd be with a libel suit on his hands, from the neighbors, not to mention a possible run-in with the League of Decency.

However, like him or not, Joe's our model and we've got to learn to imitate him, him and all the other nasty little dynamos you meet. These include the famous men of science who never slept more than three hours—a myth that has been exploded long ago—and a nameless wonder on page 22 who directs a concern of several thousand men, and has energy enough left, according to Mrs. Ray, "to choose his wife's fur coat," or, in other words, to go around looking for trouble.

But by now you're surely panting to know how you, too, can be the life of the party. The answer to that is, "Draw on your potential energies," those untapped resources that are bubbling with umpf while the rest of your feverish frame is exhausted from coping with the comptometer or selling socks. For, deny it vehemently, but your fatigue is not caused by work, but by some psychological factor, a continuous struggle between your conscious and subconscious. What you need is a psychiatrist, chummily called by Mrs. Ray, a "nut doctor."

Statistics are thereupon drug out to prove that you are as efficient at 4 p. m. as you are at 8 a. m., even though you feel like a Legionnaire at the end of the annual parade. You have the capacity for more work—we hope you can keep that hidden from the boss—but you lack the desire due to some "inner conflict," a Mr. Hyde, Marie calls it. Perhaps you have that popular malady, the inferiority complex, or you may sense that you'll never be a success anyway, and want your weary bones to take the rap for your failure. Or again, you may secretly hate your wife and resent supporting her. Perhaps you don't want to work at all and are trying to Judge Puffle your way out. Once you've admitted there's some reason you enjoy being tired, you're on the right track. So ya might as well talk, ya slug—see?

AFTER you've admitted all, you can start about conquering your attitude. Never say, "I'm tired." Say, "I feel swell," and don't snarl when you say it. In case that sounds familiar to you, you might harken back some 15 or 20 years to a Frenchman named Coue who had everyone bleating, "Every day in every way, I'm getting better and better," another rank form of self-deceit.

It is what you do between 5 p. m. and 11 p. m. that spells success or failure, though, in the Ray Revitalizing Regime. What you should do is ride a hobby, "cultivate it, until it becomes a career," like the reporter on the old New York World who made a hobby of snakes and became a world authority. Rather a back handed whack at all those "interesting people" the reporter must have met. Of course, you don't have to dream up a passion for pythons, you can collect stuff, take up gardening, public speaking, and—uh huh, you guessed it—a musical instrument. At that, Marie confesses with a pretty blush that she herself plays the accordion and, she says, with a coy wigwagging of her forefinger at your sullen puss, "though you may never be summoned to a command performance at Buckingham Palace, you may play at your own parties." That depends somewhat on whether you can get anybody to come to your parties and even so, the drinks had better be good.

Along with hobbying, you must Balance Your Life, along the lines of a sample schedule which begins, "One evening a week the entire family plays tennis in summer, goes skating in winter." From there on we have "One evening a week for" —lodge meetings, art exhibits, reading informative works, writing articles for trade magazines, etc. Unfortunately, our own schedule is less perfect.

One evening a week, we find on research, the family collapses by a fan in summer and huddles over the heatless radiator in winter.

One evening a week is spent in glowering at the dinner dishes and mentally estimating the cost of paper plates.

One evening a week we say, "That educational book is due at the library but we haven't started it yet and anyway, what's 2 cents more when we've practically contributed a wing to the library?"

One evening a week we say, "They'll be here in 20 minutes. You run the sweeper while I make the bed and shove this junk in the closet and don't you dare bring out that chair with the dirty cover."

Do you get a falcon's eye view of our evenings "at home"?

Mayhap the trouble with us is we're not in proper fighting trim. Take our exercises, for instance; we don't. And you should do something in the muscle manner, play squash, badminton, ride, bowl, or walk; and a stroll to the refrigerator at bedtime is not a walk. You can enjoy sports at any age, the good book says, so away with all slothful excuses. As we lapse into churlish silence over the thought, Marie ups to us and she says, "Look at Connie Mack. Look at Tim Ten Eyck. Look at Amos Alonzo Stagg." Okay, Marie, you look at 'em. We'll look at Clark Gable.

Moreover, we'll wax just as apathetic over your other physical diatribes: Get more fresh air, eat half as much as usual, get by on a minimum of sleep, cut out alcohol, tea, coffee and tobacco. If you falter, just remind yourself that Joe Day eats crackers and milk and huckleberries for lunch every day. Do ye likewise, says Marie, and you'll live 15 years longer. If you want to.

—o-o—

FOR it is our studied opinion that if you follow half the leads in this little handbook you'll be just as tired as you were before and twice as disgruntled. So, if everything is tootsey with Marie, we'll keep right on at our own deplorable way of living, a way that includes twice as much food and sleep as necessary, and half as much exercise. We'll let Alonzo Stagg take our exercises and Joe Day our diet, and while we're on the subject, we got pretty tired of having Joe Day and all his namby pamby virtues paraded verbally before us, like our mamma used to do the nice little girls who always washed the backs of their necks and never chewed their finger nails.

We're going to let our subconscious hate anybody it wants to, and we don't want to be one of those bouncing babies of 60 who wear their cold showers and setting up exercises like a croix de guerre. No one will ever mistake us for a dynamo, and if you've seen the illustration of a dynamo in any dictionary you'll see why we're happy about it anyway. The most we'll do for the make-your-life-count advocates is hang up a framed copy of "Go to the ant, thou sluggard." Yep, the firm of Ray and Day can keep their two lifetimes in one. We'll take our one in preference to their two any day, because we don't think the extra one would be much fun, according to their rules.

PRESERVED MISSOURI MULE FOR ART -:-

By Otto Fuerbringer

IT has taken a carpenter's son from the industrial Rhineland in Germany to preserve the Missouri mule for art.

Not that Joseph Paul Vorst is the only or the foremost painter of this distinctive animal. Tom Benton has centered many a lithograph around its graceless figure. But Joe Vorst first made his name with some white Missouri mules, they are an integral part of many of his best paintings, and if he ever, in years to come, is made the object of a biography, there will have to be a chapter on the mule period.

And a very important chapter it will be. For before Vorst discovered the Missouri mule, and developed the power and the humor to get it down on canvas, he had done little to be remembered by. In Germany, where he was born 41 years ago, he had studied painting, lithography, art glass work and sculpture. His later tutoring in painting had been under the great impressionist, Max Slevogt, and he had subsequently turned out some colored lithographs strongly reminiscent of his teacher. They were mostly conventional little scenes of German towns.

In 1930 Vorst came to America, settling in St. Louis, because he had a distant relative nearby. It took him a good while to get acclimated and to get the money and the time to paint what he wanted to paint, but he decided to forget Germany and to concentrate on what he saw 'round about him. What he saw was this: rolling countryside, heavy skies in a summer storm, the Mississippi in flood time, cotton farms and Negro cotton pickers, and the mules.

—o-o—

Recognition was slow in coming, but when it came it rolled in on him. One of his first mule paintings, which he did for the CWA, ultimately found its way to a White House corridor. In short succession he picked up prizes at the Chicago and Kansas City Art Institutes and last November, when he had a one-man show in New York, Tom Benton gave him a send-off in the catalogue. He is one of two St. Louis painters to be represented in the American exhibit at the San Francisco Fair which opened last week.

Vorst paints in the mornings in a back room of his flat on Page boulevard. In the afternoons he teaches at the Y. M. C. A.'s Jefferson College. No one would ever take him for anything but a solid, earnest German, and his limitations are those of the German temperament. When he hits it just right, when his idea, his composition, and his execution all come off, then his paintings have depth and power, and sometimes a gentle German humor. When his Teutonic impulses spill over, then the canvases become either sentimental or heavy. But he has been very prolific in the last few years and there are plenty of good ones around.

New York critics, reviewing Vorst's show last November, talked of him as a disciple of Benton's. In point of fact he is unlike Benton in everything but choice of subject matter. In that respect he is like Joe Jones and James Turnbull, too. All four of these Missouri artists paint the Missouri scene. Vorst has gone to Washington County with Jones and Turnbull to paint the tiff miners. The sketch which he submitted in the competition for the Wellston Post-office mural shows the recently evicted sharecroppers camping on the roadside.

Vorst is presently preoccupied with painting Negroes. The oil which he sent to San Francisco shows a Negro sharecropper family rushing to a storm cellar in the face of an oncoming tornado. Some of his other new paintings are of a Negro praying for rain in drouth time and of a Negro playing a calliope on a show boat. Vorst likes the expressive, mystical eyes of the Negroes and the way their tattered clothes drape around their bodies.

—o-o—

Most of Vorst's paintings have a deep perspective: The hills are long and endless, the rivers trail way back. He has a liking, somewhat irritating at times, for baby blue and pea green, redeemed only by the brilliant white of the mules, the cotton bolls, and the Negroes' eyes.

The principal thing about Vorst is that he has managed to see his adopted country-side with a freshness and clarity and that he has chosen to paint the solid, ordinary, and lasting phases of the life about him. He likes America and he is trying to see it straight. No trifles for him. He will always speak with an accent, but his painting is in the American idiom.

The other St. Louisan represented at San Francisco is James Turnbull, who is also the only one included in the Whitney water color show in New York. We'll get to him in due time.

'Smoking for Boys and Girls A Bad Practice'

"Activity of Growth Demands Plenty of Pure Air in Lungs."

By Angelo Patri

SMOKING for boys and girls is a bad practice. They do it only because they see the older ones smoking. The boys think it makes them a whiff closer to manhood, and the girls do it because they see the pictures of fine ladies smoking. No young lady of any public standing is ever pictured nowadays without her cigarette. The girls long to have their pictures before the public, and the nearest they can get to it is to be seen smoking in as many places, in as many attitudes as possible. It is all very childish, and rather sad.

Smoking soothes irritable nerves. It helps those who are in pain to bear it better. It helps those who are troubled in mind to get a little relief. Very good. Youth is not worn with worry, overwork and illness. Youth does not need a sedative for living. Youth needs to feel alive, athrill to its finger tips, to laugh and dance and play and work to the limit. Cigarettes have nothing to offer that youth requires.

—o-o—

THE ACTIVITY of growth demands plenty of rich, clean blood, plenty of pure air in the lungs. No young person of this generation need be told that his healthy growth and his success in life depend upon the kind of blood he has and upon the power of his lungs and heart. Smoking does not help to keep pure air in the lungs, does not help to keep pure blood flowing through the veins. But it does hinder.

One cannot blame the children for thinking that smoking is delightful when every grown person they meet is smoking. The one who is not is the rare one. Young people think that what older folk do is the thing to do. Teachers and parents have to combat their own practice when they teach children that smoking is not for them.

Yet, grown people have the right to choose their own pleasures. Just as we teach children that they cannot eat the same food that is served to their elders, we teach them that they cannot enjoy the same pleasures their elders enjoy. If they begin smoking at an early age they are not going to have the same pleasure in it that they will have later on when they have completed their growth and have taken on grownup responsibilities. They will lessen their chances for healthy growth, healthy thinking and effective work by beginning to smoke before their growth is seasoned.

—o-o—

IT IS IDLE to tell young people that smoking is a sin, or that it is poisonous, or that it will ruin them. They know these tales are not true. And we cannot ask grown people to give up the comfort they find in smoking to set an example for youth. Maturity has rights as well as youth. Teach honesty, that it is better for youth to wait and you may have a chance of success.

The laws against selling cigarettes to minors, school children, should be enforced. The corner store in the school neighorhood should not sell cigarettes to school children, and we should do our best to teach health to all children, with self-control, directed toward health, as an ideal.

COOK'S TOUR
by GEORGE RECTOR

THE other day while strolling I was attracted to a large street window and stood, like many others, watching a cook carve a turkey in one of those sandwich-counter restaurants. With his long, thin knife he was slicing the turkey with razor blade thinness, which reminded me of a certain night in old Madison Square Garden where a sale of thoroughbred horses was going on.

During the spirited bidding on The Abbot, a famous trotter, I strolled over to the sandwich counter. The counter man was busy slicing a cold turkey. The bidding on the Abbot had reached $8000 and was jumping by hundreds. Alongside of me was a chap purchasing a sandwich. He then started looking between the slices of bread for the turkey. He asked the manager, who happened to pass by, the price of the sandwich just as $14,000 was bid for The Abbot. "The sandwiches are a dollar apiece," said the manager. Just then a bidder shouted $15,000 for The Abbot. The customer took a look at the manager, then glanced at the auctioneer, and reaching in his pocket, cried, "I will bet $100 at five to one that the turkey brings more than The Abbot."

—o-o—

Speaking of sandwiches, I thought you might like to know of a new one which has appeared in our midst. It is one that has evolved itself from the French toast idea. I presume that you have all made French toast for breakfast and have found it a pleasant change when served with jelly, preserves or maple syrup. The French toast sandwich idea has many more possibilities, as any number of appetizing mixtures can be used from a simple savory butter to pate de foie gras. Suppose we familiarize ourselves with the making of French toast first and then we will go into the sandwiches.

—o-o—

FRENCH GRIDDLE TOAST

● Three eggs, one cup of milk, two tablespoons of sugar, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, six slices of bread (one day old).

Beat eggs slightly, add sugar and salt; strain through cheesecloth into a shallow dish. Cut bread in one-half inch slices and remove all crusts. Dip each slice of bread in the egg and milk mixture, turning the slices until well absorbed. Brown both sides on a hot, well greased griddle or frying pan. Remove to hot plate and sprinkle lightly with fine powdered sugar. Serve with jelly, preserves, honey or maple syrup.

—o-o—

FRENCH TOAST SAVORY SANDWICH (FOR 2)

Two eggs, one cup milk, one-eighth teaspoon of salt, four slices of bread (one day old), one cup of grated American cheese, currant jelly.

Beat eggs and milk together; add salt and strain into a shallow dish. Cut bread in slices of three-eighths inch. Make sandwiches, using one-half cup of grated cheese for each one. Press sandwich gently together and trim off all crusts. Dip sandwich in egg and milk mixture in shallow dish, taking care to hold it together. Saute in butter over low heat until nicely browned. Serve sandwich on hot plate and garnish center with a spoonful of currant jelly.

—o-o—

FRENCH TOAST SAVORY SANDWICH (FOR 2)

● Two eggs, one cup of milk, one-eighth teaspoon of salt, four slices of bread (one-day old), one-fourth pound of liverwurst, one tablespoon of mayonnaise.

Beat eggs and milk together; add salt and strain into a shallow dish. Cut bread in slices of three-eighths inch and spread with liverwurst and mayonnaise which have been creamed together. Press sandwich gently together and trim off all crusts. Dip in egg and milk mixture, taking care to hold firmly together. Saute in butter over low heat until nicely browned. Serve garnished with a sprig of parsley.

Now from this point on you can use your own ingenuity in making this type of sandwich. The only thing to remember is that the mixture must be chopped and held together with a little mayonnaise or softened butter.

—o-o—

OMELET A LA POULARD

ALLOW TWO EGGS for each service or person. Break the eggs in a wooden bowl and allow one tablespoon of cream for each egg. Beat well with a wooden fork and season with a little salt. Heat the omelet pan and melt a piece of butter that will cover the entire bottom. Tilt the pan as it is important to have sides buttered also. Pour in the beaten eggs and turn the pan over the flame so the omelet browns evenly.

There is a wrist motion in shaking the pan so the liquid part of the omelet will run over to the sides and under the bottom, thereby making a light omelet.

Cook only until omelet is set, then pour a little thick cream in the center and with the rounded part of a tablespoon smooth it out to the rim, taking care not to let the cream reach the edge of the pan. Take a spatula and with a quick turn fold the omelet and transfer to a hot platter.

The omelet may be served plain or garnished with jelly, thickened stewed tomatoes, sliced mushrooms cooked in butter and thickened, asparagus tips in cream sauce, chicken livers in a rich brown sauce, etc.

MISS CORNELL FINDS A NEW LEADING MAN

KATHARINE CORNELL . . . HER NEXT PLAY WILL BE "NO TIME FOR COMEDY."

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.

KATHARINE CORNELL has at last found a leading man to play opposite her in her next play, "No Time for Comedy," which was written by Sam Behrman. The lucky man is the well-known British actor, Laurence Oliver, who was found in Hollywood, and the play itself will be one of the earliest offerings of next season.

A few days ago I heard that Theda Bara, the great film vamp of 20 years ago, was in residence in our city. Finally I caught up with her. I found a dignified matron who studied me carefully through a heavily-jeweled lorgnette and spoke with a heavy English accent acquired during two years of travel abroad with her husband, Charles J. Brabin, the movie director. I must admit that this daughter of the Goodman's of Cincinnati threw me for a 20-yard loss in her 1939 incarnation.

It was 20 years ago that Theda was starring in such red-hot silent flickers as "Salome," "The Blue Flame" and "Carmen," to mention only three of her biggest successes as the wickedest woman in pre-Hays days. Now the Bara hopes to write her memoirs of those highly-colored days of the movies. Remember that it was Theda who put the word "vamp" in the American language. Since her marriage she has been living a quiet and lazy life in their home in Beverly Hills, and now it is beginning to pall.

When I asked Theda about her plans for the future she said, "I don't plan to do anything. I only live 24 hours a day getting such small fragments of happiness from life as I can." But as the finale of this statement, the first great vamp of the films admitted that it was not impossible that she might essay a comeback in pictures. I told her I considered this a ghastly mistake. Old-time movie fans remember Theda Bara as the first and greatest vampire of the movie drama. Another try would be a horrible anti-climax.

TWO OF OUR prettiest visitors this week are Ida and Yvonne Divbos, daughters of the Mayor of Lima, Peru. The girls came with papa just for the trip, as he is here on business as the Peruvian representative of several American automobile companies. While father confers with his business contacts, Ida and Yvonne are having a fine time in the shops on Fifth avenue. I only hope that they do not run papa's expense account too high.

PROBABLY the biggest hit of the New York vocal season has been the appearance here of Richard Tauber, the greatest tenor singer of lieder that our generation has produced. He is a master of style—but what is more wonderful is the fact that his songs as he sings them really touch our hearts.

A NEW YORK JEWELER named Edwin Tompkins has a lady client, a widow, who has $250,000 to lay on the line for a perfect ruby. All this vulgar money has been waiting for two years, and since it appears that only in the Tower of London and in certain Indian treasure houses is such perfection to be found, it looks as though the widow's mite will wait quite a while longer. . . .

—o-o—

THE MISSOURI darling named Martha Scott, who appeared so successfully last season in "Our Town," hopes to appear soon in a dramatic importation called, simply, "Criminals." The play doesn't sound much like the sweet and simple Martha, but I hope it is a good part. I like to see the kids get along. . . .

AUTHORITIES here say that when women visitors arrive from abroad their first four purchases are silk stockings, tomato juice, shoes and costume jewelry. The last of the four is becoming a major industry here, in numbers and beauty.

THE THREE-PIECE SUIT is now in season, and is the most reliable sign of spring on The Avenue. A soft tweed suit with a medium-weight topcoat is the answer to our clothes problems when the first mild days arrive and the heavy winter coat becomes unbearable. This year the three-piece suits come in all sorts of lively color-combinations, such as a navy tweed suit with a yellow and white mixed tweed swagger coat. You can safely go the limit on color-combinations this year. The spectrum seems to be the limit.

I HEAR that the popular fiction writer, Ursula Parrott, is about to take her fourth husband, a member of one of New York's oldest families, whose name is A. Coster Schermerhorn. Kitty has a son named Mark, now 15, by her first marriage, who is attending a classy school.

—o-o—

FOR THE LIFE of me, I cannot see why papers keep publishing photographs of the Duchess of Windsor, after seeing a picture of the beautiful Queen of Egypt, Farida, and her two lovely sisters-in-law. No camera ever caught three prettier girls at one shot, and the whole episode makes New York, the Duchess of Windsor and the rest of us look pretty frumpy.

—o-o—

THIS IS the time of year when the photographs from Palm Beach drive me and my ilk fairly crazy. Such pretty girls as Shirley Belle, of our town, strolling the shopping districts in shorts and a big Mexican sun hat, is definitely of no value to a city-bound New Yorker at this time of year. However, there is nothing we can do about it except bang the keys, stand the weather and fight it through.

—o-o—

SCANNING the current best-seller lists in New York I find that the fiction list is headed by "All This and Heaven, Too," by Rachel Field. As I suspected, the general list is topped by Edna Ferber's memoirs called "A Peculiar Treasure." That is my pet among the current books.

THE METROPOLITAN OPERA began its fourteenth week with a colorful debut—that of handsome Jan Kiepura in the leading tenor role of "La Boheme." This movie star from overseas is a guaranteed house-filler, which means that the Met, as it nears the close of its current season, has hit on something really tremendous from a feminine point of view.

"HONOR YOUNG CITIZENS"
By Elsie Robinson

I'VE been thinking of a phrase Mrs. Roosevelt used recently. She was speaking of our young people and the temptations which surround them . . . and the shameful indifference with which we, their elders, regard their plight.

How can we blame these children if they stray? she asked. Wherever they look, crime is advertised, horror emphasized. But where are truth and beauty publicized? We complain of youthful delinquency. There is only one answer to that problem and the need which lies behind it. Said Mrs. Roosevelt:

"Expose young people to nobility" . . . To courage and honor and the fine and lasting things of life."

"Expose them to nobility"—a splendid phrase, which Mrs. Roosevelt followed with a suggestion equally inspiring, namely—that every city and hamlet in the United States should observe young America's coming-of-age with an annual celebration of great and impressive beauty. Make young America proud of its citizenship . . . make America proud of its young citizens!

A great plan! Think it over. Every year, millions of young people come of voting age in America. Since birth, these boys and girls have seen or read of every imaginable form of ugliness and brutality.

Worse yet, they have heard America's name subtly degraded by shrewd propagandists . . . have seen her traditions and standards twisted and distorted, scorned.

What do we, their elders, do to shape their choice? What do we do to make that symbol forever sacred in their eyes?

We do nothing. Exactly nothing. As far as we are concerned, this most sacred and significant of all civic occasions might simply be another April Fools' Day!

Let every city or town, however small, set this day apart for the most splendid and significant celebration of the year . . . as glorious as Fourth of July . . . as holy as Christmas in its sense of spiritual consecration!

Honor these young citizens! Welcome them! Make them feel that their nation rejoices in them . . . depends upon them!

Printed Fabrics Of This Season Look Different

DESIGNS borrowed from dinnerwear, nail polish, wallpaper and World's Fair buildings offer some good reasons why the printed fabrics of the current season look far different from their predecessors. Conventional flower patterns must be striking in their color schemes if they are to compete with the unique themes on display.

A new type weave of hopsacking that is made of a rayon presents the century-old patterns of china dinnerware. The motifs include colorful medallions, fruit, scroll and floral notes all of which are particularly effective in rich colors.

Developments on fabrics made of synthetic threads include an uneven "thick and thin" surface interest. Fastness to sun and washing is a feature that is a characteristic of this and other materials being used extensively for sports costumes. Striking color combinations are noteworthy including many alliances of pink and green, tones of blue, wine red shading to rose and many coppery hues.

SURGEON'S CASE RECORD
By Dr. George W. Crane

CASE L-146: Kelsey P., aged 35, is a brilliant physician and surgeon. "You know, I think I'll give up my profession," he gloomily announced as we were dining together recently.

"My surgery is slipping and I feel that it is criminal to go on deluding my innocent patients who have utmost confidence in me.

"I just wasn't cut out for medicine, anyway, so I think I'll retire from the field, and leave it to better men than I. What would you advise, Dr. Crane?"

—o-o—

DIAGNOSIS: This case is probably a twin for the one described in the newspapers some months ago where a California surgeon committed suicide because he said he was maiming his innocent patients and practicing an inferior brand of medicine, even though his colleagues denied his statements.

I have had a number of professional men with this same complex. Kelsey is not an inferior surgeon.

Then why should he develop this defeatism complex?

Kelsey is married and has two attractive youngsters. He is very fond of them. But his married life has been rather hectic. At the present time I happen to know that he and his wife are on the verge of divorce.

Being a combination of idealist as well as medical scientist, Kelsey is deeply worried over the injury to his children if a divorce takes place. He feels that he will be guilty of betraying those innocent youngsters who have utmost confidence in him. Kelsey's wife, however, is the one who wants the divorce, for she is interested in another man.

Kelsey finds himself in an emotional muddle. He goes around brooding. First, he decides maybe it is best to let his wife get a divorce. Then he thinks about his children, and says he'll never permit it.

Kelsey suffers from a deep sense of guilt regarding his broken home. This guilty feeling carries over to his professional practice.

He is simply deluding himself, not his patients. I have had such men from all professions who permitted marital failure to carry over to their business fields.

THE SCREEN IN REVIEW

By COLVIN McPHERSON

THAT daring expose of the morals of the rich, "Yes, My Darling Daughter," which the New York censors thought too wicked for public circulation via the screen but now have approved, with revisions, breezes along at the Ambassador. And far from being something to condemn because it is salacious, it is something to praise because it is wholesome.

Mark Reed's sensible but highly frank stage play, which was seen at the American in October, 1937, has been adapted to screen form with a very happy result. The film goes into less detail but it preserves the issue and main structure of the stage play. It is expertly directed and acted, it has greater freedom of movement than on the stage, it affords laughs to the last minute and it is harmless.

"Yes, My Darling Daughter" asks what an ardent feminist would do if she saw her daughter carrying on as she did in her own youth. Fay Bainter, as the mother, was the talk of Greenwich Village in the old days, led suffrage parades, had a flaming affair with a poet and was in jail 19 times. In the present era, she is the wife of a banker and mother of a daughter who has just been graduated from college. Ian Hunter plays the banker, Priscilla Lane the daughter.

The daughter's young man, Jeffrey Lynn in this case, is going to Europe to work for two years, his boat sails on Monday, he can't ask the girl to marry him on his salary. She suggests it is only right that they spend the week-end together without submitting to the legal complications of a marriage ceremony. Mama learns of the projected holiday, becomes frantic; Aunt Connie, Mama's former poet and Grandma learn of it and likewise become excited. These three are represented by Genevieve Tobin, Roland Young and May Robson.

But daughter goes away. Then Papa becomes aware of the situation. There is all kinds of heck to pay. But the young folks have their several days and nights together and, chaperoned by sturdy screen wire, come home quite as unspotted as when they went away. A matrimonial solution is figured out and that's that.

Without any of the more incandescent dialogue of the stage version, "Yes, My Darling Daughter" is bright, witty and so thoroughly respectable that no one ought to complain about it. Miss Lane is a model for exuberant young womanhood, Lynn is an ideal young man of the "clean" type, Miss Bainter does a splendid mother portrayal, Young, Miss Tobin and Hunter contribute much and Miss Robson's role, non-existent on the stage and written especially for the motion picture, is a gem.

The stage version ran for 404 performances in New York, so what could have been wrong with the censors this time? A few crass commentators have ventured to suggest that it was because the State arbiters hadn't been getting enough attention lately, that Will Hays and Joe Breen had done such a careful job on the West Coast that it gave the home boys nothing to do and they had to censor something to keep from getting rusty. The management of the Ambassador says that no "revisions" were made so far as St. Louis is concerned.

For its second feature, the Ambassador has "Secret Service of the Air," melodrama centering around the efforts of the Government to stop the smuggling of aliens from Mexico to Palm Springs, Cal. While several other thrillers on this theme have been made previously, the present one is liberal with fast action in flights over the mountains, in jettison of human cargo, in jailbreak, brawl and battle above the clouds.

Honolulu.

MUSICAL comedy such as the stage provided in the Thriving Twenties finds a re-echo in Loew's main feature, "Honolulu." The new picture has no such spectacles as the New York World's Fair might use, no heiress-reporter plot and nary a bit of Technicolor, but it does confer the boon of much melody, comedy and specialty performance.

It presents Robert Young as a Hollywood star who persuades his double to impersonate him and steals away to Hawaii on a vacation. There he becomes involved in the double's particular problems and nearly fails to pledge Miss Eleanor Powell as his life's partner but does turn the trick eventually.

The rather obvious plot situation is played for all it is worth and Young differentiates dexterously between his two characterizations with the same face. Miss Powell, as a dancer, of all things, taps out a routine for passengers on a Pacific liner, impersonates Bill Robinson at a costume ball and swings a hula or two with the natives of Hawaii.

Comedy is turned over to Gracie Allen, for the most part, and the dizzy comedienne adds some very pleasant singing as a further contribution to the show. She makes a terrible Mae West at the costume ball. In fact, the whole costume ball is pretty terrible.

"The Strange Case of Dr. Meade," which one takes with his pineapple juice from Hawaii, sends Jack Holt, the famous surgeon, into the backwoods on a hunting trip, to hunt deer in May, which is illegal even for the movies. But that's not the point. He discovers what is truly the black spot on the medical map of the United States, a place where witchcraft speaks with a Southern accent, where mob feeling runs a higher temperature than typhoid. You may be sure Dr. Jack Holt Meade, in his big strong way, does something about it.

"The Three Musketeers" and "Persons in Hiding," have been at the Fox Theater since last Wednesday and will be replaced by Shirley Temple's first Technicolor opus, "The Little Princess" on Wednesday of this week. Presuming to be a burlesque of the Alexandre Dumas story, "The Three Musketeers" is pretty tame adventure and not very funny foolishness.

The Week's Shows

On the Stage

LITTLE THEATER — Revival of "The Front Page" by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur. Six public performances, tomorrow night through Saturday.

On the Screen

AMBASSADOR—"Yes, My Darling Daughter," featuring Priscilla Lane and Jeffrey Lynn with Fay Bainter and Roland Young; "Secret Service of the Air" with Ronald Reagan, John Litel and Ila Rhodes.

FOX—"The Three Musketeers," starring the Ritz Brothers and Don Ameche with Binnie Barnes and Gloria Stuart; "Persons in Hiding," featuring Lynne Overman, Patricia Morison and J. Carrol Naish.

LOEW'S — "Honolulu," starring Eleanor Powell, Robert Young, George Burns and Gracie Allen; "The Strange Case of Dr. Meade," starring Jack Holt with Beverly Roberts.

MISSOURI—"Tail Spin," starring Alice Faye, Constance Bennett and Nancy Kelly; "St. Louis Blues," with Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan and Maxine Sullivan.

ST. LOUIS—"If I Had a Million" (revival), with Gary Cooper, Charles Laughton and others; "Inside Story," with Michael Whalen, Chick Chandler and Jean Rogers.

SCREENING ROOM (3143 Olive Street)—"Un Carnet de Bal," French film with superimposed English titles. Four nights, beginning tonight. Performances at 7:30 and 9 o'clock.

"Persons in Hiding," from material supplied by J. Edgar Hoover's book, varies so far from the pattern of G-men movies as to be actually novel. It shows how a pair of small time criminals work up from filling-station robberies to a $200,000 kidnaping. Patricia Morison, a new actress, and J. Carroll Naish supply excellent performances as the pair.

That all-star opus of 1932 release, "If I Had a Million," is back at the St. Louis, and strangely enough has run afoul of censorship. While episodes in which Richard Bennett, as an eccentric millionaire, hands out a million each to Charlie Ruggles, George Raft, Alison Skipworth, Gary Cooper and Charles Laughton, remain, his million to a woman of the streets, played by Wynne Gibson, and a condemned murderer, played by Gene Raymond, are whacked out. The management of the St. Louis says it had nothing to do with the whacking, that the producers and owners of the film did that themselves. The Laughton sequence is worth the price of the show, which is a kind of writers' holiday and thoroughly incredible.

"Inside Story," a new feature at the St. Louis, is the third of the Roving Reporter series, in which Michael Whalen and Chick Chandler are always finding a new corpse and getting in trouble with bad Mr. Douglas Fowley, the racketeer.

"Tail Spin," the powder-puff epic of the air, has gone to the Missouri, there being joined by "St. Louis Blues" for continued run.

'Along Spanish Main' Holmes' Second Topic

"Along the Spanish Main" is the subject of Burton Holmes' travel lecture at the Auditorium Opera House tomorrow night. Holmes, who presented the first of two travelogues on the West Indies last Monday night, will continue the same subject this week with visits to British Guiana, Dutch Curacao, various ports of the northern coast of South America and Cuba.

STAGE PLAYS AND MUSIC

'Carnet de Bal' At Screening Room Tonight

French Film to Start New Series — 'Abused Confidence' Next Week.

THE French film, "Un Carnet de Bal," will begin a four-night run at the S'Renco Screening Room, 3143 Olive street, tonight, as the first of a series of three special films scheduled for the little motion picture theater. It is to be shown at 7:30 and 9 o'clock each night through Wednesday, and is open to the public.

Although its title for American release is "Life Dances On," "Un Carnet de Bal" is better translated as "A Dance Program" and its story centers around just such an article. A wealthy young widow, with no children or friends, sets out to discover what has happened to the men whose names appeared on her program at the first ball she attended some 20 years before.

One has killed himself and grief has driven his mother insane, one is a leader of a criminal gang, one a monk, another an Alpine guide, still another a Mayor in a small town, a sixth is a broken-down physician on the Marseilles waterfront, and so on. Slowly the widow begins to see the pattern of her life and the lives of the others and finds some consolation in the care she can give to the young son of one of the men.

Marie Bell has the leading role, with some of the leading actors and actresses of France in the cast with her. These are Francoise Rosay, Louis Jouvet, Harry Baur, Raimu, Fernandel, Pierre-Richard Willm and Pierre Blanchar.

—o-o—

Julien Duvivier, who has since been placed under Hollywood contract and has "The Great Waltz" to his credit there, wrote the original story for "Un Carnet de Bal" and directed the picture. He is noted also for his "Pepe le Moko," "Poil de Carotte" and other films. "Un Carnet de Bal," which had a successful run in New York last season, won the first international grand prize at the Venice Exposition in 1937. In French, it has the usual superimposed English translation.

The second feature in the Screening Room series, a week from tonight, is "Abused Confidence," starring Danielle Darrieux with Charles Vanel. It also is a French film and tells of a Paris law student, without means, who passes herself off as the daughter of a noted historian in order to get money for her education. The picture won a prize at the Paris Exposition.

On Sunday night, March 12, the Screening Room will show "Dark Rapture," film recorded by the Denis-Roosevelt expedition into the Belgian Congo. A short subject on the same program is "Titans of the Deep," a study of undersea life, featuring Dr. William Beebe and Otis Barton.

Stolz' 'Lost Waltz,' From 1938 Municipal Opera, to Be Repeated

ROBERT STOLZ' musical play, "Lost Waltz," which was introduced at Municipal Opera last summer and might have set an attendance record except for unfavorable weather conditions, will be repeated in the 1939 repertory. Only on rare occasions has the opera presented the same work in two successive years but the popularity of the piece last summer seemed sufficient justification for bringing it back. Attendance was good all week and an audience of 10,000 persons for the Sunday night performance last summer was assured when a heavy downpour of rain forced cancellation.

Only one musical show for next summer remains to be selected. The 10 already named are "Victoria and Her Hussar," "On Your Toes," "Queen High," "Babette," "Firefly," "Katinka," "Rose Marie," "The Bartered Bride," "Song of the Flame" and "Mary." The season opens Friday night, June 2.

A DOZEN HITS FOR THE FAIR

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.

THERE has been gossip around the Broadway cracker barrels that business in the theater has been ailing considerably in the last fortnight or two and that the Rialto shows are perishing from famine. Such a report is not candidly correct, even though some such melancholy announcements may have come from stage managers who attempt to adopt the technique that Gloomy Gil Dobie once used in discounting the chances of his usually excellent football teams at Cornell.

This is the customary end of the theatrical season, and at this time of the year business at the box office annually drops drastically and there are ordinarily only a dozen or so plays and musicals able to survive the oncoming vacation period. Instead, there are 35 shows on the Broadway scene at the moment although it is admitted that some of them are marking time until they can gather in the expected harvests of World Fair audiences.

But even at this long stage before the fair it is difficult to buy tickets immediately for "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," "Hellzapoppin," "Kiss the Boys Good-bye," "Leave It to Me," "Mamba's Daughters," "Oscar Wilde," "Outward Bound," "Set to Music," "Stars in Your Eyes," "The American Way," "The Boys From Syracuse," "The Little Foxes" and "The Primrose Path."

That presents really 13 hits on Broadway at the moment and that doesn't count the other shows which are doing just medium business.

"Hellzapoppin" is accounted the major money hit on Broadway. It wasn't an expensive show to produce, the stars are working on percentage and the theater has been selling to standing room only for months. The profits of "Hellzapoppin," should they ever be known, should be almost as unbelievable as "Abie's Irish Rose."

In contrast is the hit "Stars in Your Eyes." Aside from the routine expenses, it was an extravagant show to produce with gilded sets and costumes. It has two high-salaried stars in Jimmy Durante and Ethel Merman with a costly cast supporting them.

A similar situation is that of "The American Way," which is undoubtedly attracting more money than any show in town, but which costs an extraordinary expense above the routine charges. It has many huge settings which require an extra stagehand crew to change. It has a cast of more than 200, which has a group of stars including high-salaried Fredric March. It is housed in the largest legitimate theater, in Rockefeller Center. It is a tremendous show and a tremendous success, but it can never for one minute be less than that for its overhead is too terrific.

Probably the prime economic success in theatrical production in recent years has been "Tobacco Road." The cast is small and stars are not needed for the leading roles. And, as Producer Sam H. Grisman said, "All we need to put on the show is a curtain, a simple set and a bucket or two of sand." The play has made a fortune, is playing its sixth year both on Broadway and the road and apparently will be here forever.

Show business is financially happy at the moment, so pay no attention to the weepers for Broadway has always been suffused with crocodile tears.

Vinton Freedley, sailing for a sunbath in the Bahamas the other night, bemoaned the fact that there weren't more seats in the theater where he is presenting the hit "Leave It to Me" and he will probably be moaning when he returns sunburned in a few weeks. He has a hit show and only now moans because he can't get all the overflow audiences in for a single performance.

—o-o—

THE fate of a Broadway playwright is a nebulous item, nevertheless, and good evidence are Bella and Samuel Spewack who have just arrived with their newest and doubtful comedy, "Miss Swan Expects."

The Spewack writing team first bounded in a few seasons ago with that enduring hit, "Boy Meets Girl." It also had a play called "Clear All Wires," which didn't so so well, but which revived itself this season as the aforesaid musical comedy, "Leave It to Me."

In "Miss Swan Expects" they have an inclination to "expose" book publishers as impresarios who will sponsor a book only if the author is a man of means who will pay what is practically blackmail.

Their story is the effort of Judge Thompson to write his memoirs. He wants to do it as a novel so that he can cover in fictionized form the many misadventures of his real life experiences that he doesn't dare to tell as the truth.

He has no talent for writing so he has a youthful ghost writer to do that task for him—at no salary. In addition, the ghost writer is forced to leave for some months his lovely young wife who is also—guess what?—about to become a mother. His wife also is—guess what?—principal editor for the publishing firm that is about to go bankrupt, but thinks it can forestall that if only it can publish the Judge's book. The Spewacks, evidently, have been seeing too many movies.

The Judge is a man who has a pipe organ in his home and who telephones the organist anytime he wants a big special swing number. He also has a toy railroad set. He also has a "veddy, veddy," British secretary who is so valuable to him that he practically creates chaos when he wants to resign.

The book publisher finds that he can't persuade the Judge to sell him the book that will rescue his firm from poverty, but he finds an unexpected source of income from the fact that a taxi driver is bootlegging copies of other books that have been banned by censors.

There are a dozen more plots cluttered up in this confusion including that of an amateur adventurer who writes a book of the Richard Harding Davis type and then confesses that all the exciting episodes didn't happen to him at all, that they just happened to a fellow he knew. In fact, he isn't quite sure that they did happen, but that he wrote the book anyway.

There are enough plots here for a dozen movies, but the Spewacks apparently became over-enthusiastic and said "Let's go bang, bang, bang!"

They did just that and it ends with something of an atmospher of a wet firecracker. Spewack has directed his own play and there is much lacking in what could have been done by a good footlights editor. A good director—like William Harris Jr., who produced this play—might have smoothed out the rough spots to make this play a hit.

—o-o—

THERE are certain institutions in the theater, including George M. Cohan, Times Square, ticket brokers and other such imperishables, which certainly will be around as long as Joe Cook is extolling the beauties of his native Evansville, Ind. The glib and comically wide-mouthed Mr. Cook is back on Broadway again, this time as the straight comic in "Off to Buffalo."

It is an hilarious picture by Max Liebman and Allen Boretz which takes the smooth and optimistic-talking Cook out of musical comedy and offers him for the first time in a straight part. And it is a part that presents Cook in a role that he really has been enacting in his private life for the past 10 years on his estate on the shores of Lake Hopatcong, New Jersey.

There, since before the days when he was starring in such musical comedies as "Rain or Shine" and "Fine and Dandy," Cook has lived in a mansion overrun by acrobats, comedians, musicians and other vaudeville performers who trouped with him on the big time when there was a big time.

In "Off to Buffalo" he is an optimistic man who believes that vaudeville is coming back. A flock of these small-time variety performers troop into a flat in a suburb of New York City, awaiting the great Gus Delaney who is to headline their bill. The man who owns the flat isn't in the business; he is just an amateur, suburban promoter who has gotten into this show business because he has been appointed to arrange a program for the show that his lodge is to give.

His wife definitely disapproves, for the shenanigans of the vaudeville actors disrupt the peace and quiet of her out-of-the-way neighborhood home. If she tries to arrange her furniture and dishes she is immediately thrown into confusion by tumbling acrobatic acts hurling themselves through the parlors or by Joe Cook strolling in and tossing ten pins, balls and other objects that can be juggled through the air with the greatest of ease. Cook does everything—plays, sings, dances, whistles, tumbles, juggles. He does them all with the aplomb of a technician and magician, and with a sense of comedy thrown in, besides.

CARLOS CHAVEZ, MEXICAN GUEST CONDUCTOR OF THE ST. LOUIS SYMPHONY THIS WEEK.

Carlos Chavez Symphony's Guest Leader

Mexican Conductor In St. Louis This Week As Golschmann Goes East.

CARLOS CHAVEZ, eminent Mexican composer and conductor, will replace Conductor Vladimir Golschmann of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in the week's regular concerts on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening at the Auditorium Opera House.

Golschmann will be directing the Philadelphia Orchestra in Philadelphia on Friday and Saturday and in New York on Tuesday, March 7. His brother, Boris Golschmann, the pianist, will be soloist on each occasion.

Appearing for the first time in St. Louis, Chavez will conduct a program made up entirely of works new to the city. These are the Haydn "Bear" Symphony; Chavez' own "Sinfonia India" and his arrangement of Dietrich Buxtehude's Chaconne in E Minor, and the Symphony No. 1 of the Soviet composer-laureate, Dmitri Shostakovich.

Chavez last season celebrated his tenth anniversary as conductor of the Symphony Orchestra of Mexico, the nation's leading musical organization. Leopold Stokowski was the first to introduce Chavez in this country when he invited the Mexican conductor to conduct the Philadelphia Orchestra in March, 1935. Guest appearances followed in subsequent seasons with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Philadelphia Orchestra, the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra, the Pittsburgh Symphony, Los Angeles Philharmonic and the N. B. C. Symphony.

Haydn is reported to have written some of his 104 known symphonies to little stories. The "Bear" symphony is one of a dozen written in C Major by the composer. It is believed the name "Bear" was given the work because Haydn's humor growled in imitative fancy in the music, which is witty, warm and ingratiating.

Buxtehude's Chaconne was written originally for the organ. Chavez has arranged his orchestration without making any changes in the original form of the piece. He has retained the instrumental sense as much as possible by bringing into the symphony orchestra the nearest equivalents to organ "stops" and "mixtures."

Shostakovich's Symphony No. 1 belongs to his twentieth year and was completed shortly before 1927. The symphony is not like the young composer's Third Symphony, which is avowedly an utterance of political and economic faith. It is primarily an aesthetic expression.

Chavez wrote his "Sinfonia India" in the winter of 1935-36. It was heard for the first time in a broadcast performance on Jan. 23, 1936. First concert performance was given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in April of the same year, under the composer's direction. There are three Indian folk melodies used in the work.

The program in detail:

Amos 'n' Andy In Preview of New York Fair

Their First Half-Hour Program Set for 6:00 O'Clock Tomorrow Evening on KSD.

FLYING from the Pacific Coast to give a preview, in character, of the New York World's Fair, Amos 'n' Andy will have their first half-hour program on KSD at 6 o'clock tomorrow evening. The broadcast, coming at the close of their eleventh year on the air in the same radio series, will be the first they have ever made before an audience. To make it possible, the Edwin C. Hill program, usually scheduled from 6:15 to 6:30, will be cancelled for the one evening.

Guided through the fair by its president, Grover C. Whalen, Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll, made up as Amos 'n' Andy, will describe in their familiar dialect what they see from the viewpoint of two wide-eyed guests from Harlem.

Gosden and Correll first spoke into a microphone in New Orleans in 1920. Six years later, they broadcast a series over a Chicago station. In 1928, they began their Amos 'n' Andy series, and a year and a half later went on an NBC network.

BEGINNING tomorrow, KSD will add a Sportlights period Eschen will be back on the Sportslight series, which will be broadcast at 5:30 p. m. Monday through Friday.

Jan Peerce, the tenor, and the Merry Macs swing quartet will take part in Al Pearce's program tomorrow night.

Dick Powell, of the movies, will guest it with Bob Hope Tuesday night, and John Barrymore with Fred Uttal in the For Men Only period.

Fred Allen will feature David Kline, an umbrella man of many and varied experiences in his Town Hall Tonight Wednesday, and Hoagy Carmichael, the song writer, and his mother will be Tommy Dorsey's guests.

Billings for Thursday night on KSD include Joan Bennett with Bing Crosby and Bob Burns.

Martha Raye is set for Tommy Riggs' program Saturday evening.

To make it possible for KSD to broadcast President Roosevelt's address and the ceremonies at the joint session of the Senate and House to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the first Congress of the United States, KFUO has relinquished the time from 12:15 to 12:30 noon next Saturday. KSD will begin the broadcast at 11 a. m. KFUO will use the time from 12:30 to 12:55 o'clock.

Takes Off Ugly Fat
IF you want to take off ugly fat easily and pleasantly all you have to do is—First, eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating. Second, mix ¾ of a glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ of a glass of water and drink before meals and at bedtime. Thus you reduce caloric intake considerably. But you do not suffer a hungry moment. There are no strenuous exercises or taking harmful drugs. Yet!—in a test conducted by Dr. Damrau with this method among a group of intelligent and cooperative people who followed directions implicitly, an average weight loss of seven pounds was registered per month. This remarkable method is just as beneficial and effective for overweight men as it is for overweight women. There is only one thing to watch. Eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating; and be sure to use Welch's Grape Juice—always made from the pick of the grape crop; always full strength; always pure.
Irene Rich, lovely star of the screen and radio, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16.

If you think all Tomato Juice is alike, try Welch's new, vitamin-rich Tomato Juice. It is so rich and thick you can add ⅓ water or ice and still have a most delicious Tomato Juice.

Chin Straps

It is difficult to distinguish between chin straps and belts now that the milliners are using novel cords to hold hats to the heads and the dress manufacturers are creating such tricky waistline ornaments. Necklaces likewise add to the confusions by being made of suede to match belts and adding multicolored tassels. The chin straps on hats may be of leather or of braided cord and usually end with a bow under the chin after circling the back of the hair and crossing at the back of the neck.

GIVES STOKER OWNERS FIVE FUEL ADVANTAGES

CLINKERS REDUCED ONE THIRD. S-P stoker coal is refined of ash forming foreign matter—in addition to dust and stray metal—by precise, 7-step S-P method of reducing and controlling the ash content.

LESS FREQUENT HOPPER FILLING. S-P coal has added heating hours per ton! Foreign matter, normal in raw coal, has been replaced with choice, low ash coal which increases heating element per ton.

EXCELLENT CLINKERING with proper air and coal feed, is another asset of S-P coal. Its clinkers are nonsticking—easy to remove—and do not form in 'popcorn' size which requires shoveling.

HIGH BURNING EFFICIENCY. Sizing of S-P coal is engineered for free air flow through fuel bed. Practically no dust formed during passage of coal from hopper to retort. Coke formation is soft, fragile and avoids breaking of shearing pins from furnace overfill or by glutting of fire with excess coke.

REMARKABLY RESPONSIVE to draft control. S-P coal has fast pickup for cold mornings—plus ample heat for midwinter days. In addition, it has the lasting quality needed to hold a slow fire on mild days without dying out.

The Return To Religion

school had better personality traits than those who did not, and that children of parents who went to church had better personalities than the children of parents who did not go to church.

In the study of 10,000 adults already referred to, it was found that those who belonged or went to a church had significantly better personality traits than those who did not.

The theme of personality development outlined here is not one of self-suppression but one of self-expression. The mere suppression of the natural impulses, of an explosive temper, for instance, is psychologically inadequate. The over-emphasis on "Thou shalt not" is undoubtedly harmful. Even so, there must be in the training of a child a certain amount of direct and uncompromising repression. However, the positive side of personality consists of expression, of learning to do an increasing number of desirable things well.

Expression, as I define it, consists of substituting for the less desirable acts and habits others which are more desirable.

The fallacy underlying the progressive education movement is that it has not codified the forms of expression which are desirable and those which are not. It has assumed, too uncritically, that what a child wanted to express was worth encouraging. It has made a god of the principle of expression at the expense of the manner of self-expression. Consequently it has often confused self-expression with self-indulgence, dawdling, and a set of adult notions about the framework — art, dramatics, pageants, etc.—in which children should self-express themselves. It has failed to recognize sufficiently that mature self-expression and creativeness rest on the acquisition of the basic techniques of self-expression, just as the mastery of a piece of music rests on the mastery of the scales.

The child compelled to practice the piano and certain exercises against his will is acquiring the a, b, cs of musical expression. The child allowed to practice as he pleases, to draw pictures as he pleases, and to follow other pursuits with a wide latitude of action, is usually wasting the time in which he might be mastering the basic routines. The enforced practice of many desirable habits of expression, such as those suggested in the test described, automatically widens the range of worth-while self-expression later on.

The strategic time to teach children to subordinate their impulses to higher values is when they are too young to understand, but not too young to accept. When parents decide not to send their children to Sunday school until they are old enough to know what it is all about, they are adopting a principle which, if generally applied, is ruinous. For by the time children have learned what it is all about it is often too late for them to do much about it. Many valuable years have been lost.

Glistening Hats

Not content with bright colors to focus attention to women's heads this spring, the millinery designers have presented glistening surfaces. Black patent leather is a striking example of the trend and is being used for entire hats as well as for millinery trimming. The patent leather sailor with its high little crown is typical. Also novel are the sailors and other high-crowned brimmed models made of a thin plastic fabric that has a pearlized effect.

Cone-Shaped Crown

The crown of one typical new sailor sticks up in imitation of an ice cream cone and since it is made of natural colored straw the illusion is even more pronounced. Draping this pointed crown is a wide sash of navy blue crepe dotted with beige. The scarf skirts the brim at the back, crosses over and winds around the neck to form a very high collar.

Novel Veil Decoration

Novelty bumble bees so realistic in size and appearance that they startle the observers are pinned to the flowing veils of the new straw hats. Some of them are equipped with pins so that they hold the veil in place while others merely are sewed to the filmy surface. Another bee may be selected for the shoulder of a suit.

Informal Parties By St. Louisans In New York

Betsy Mahaffey Visits Sister in the East — Count de Noue to Go to St. Louis Next Month.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.

SINGING debutantes are as much a part of the present day New York scene as Wall Street, and Fifth avenue shop windows. Most of the alert cafes and night spots are going in for something like Eve Symington, Cobina Wright Jr., or Adelaide Moffett, since each of these warblers proved a drawing card for the carriage trade. Now it is Miss Mimi Francis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Francis—with relatives in St. Louis, who sings during the cocktail hour at the Hotel White, on Lexington avenue at Thirty-seventh street. The turnout last week was impressive. Former St. Louisans seen in the crowd were Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Richards of Stamford, Conn., Mr. and Mrs. Robert Marvin Nelson and their debutante daughter, Miss Daphne; Webster Tilton Jr., son of Mrs. Dozier Tilton, who escorted debutante Sophie Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Brown. Mrs. Skinker Matthews entertained there last Tuesday. Among the guests were Prince and Princess Vladimir Koudacheff, Prince and Princess Irbain Khan Kaplanoff and Mr. and Mrs. Rudkin Vanderbilt.

Miss Betsy Mahaffey, daughter of Birch O. Mahaffey, has been here this week for a short visit on her way to Simsbury, Conn., to see her sister, Miss Dorothy Jane Mahaffey, who is at the Ethel Walker School there. Miss Betsy Mahaffey will return to St. Louis early in the week, to leave next Friday for Sun Valley, Ida. Miss Mary Elizabeth and Miss Nancy Bascom, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bascom, will accompany Miss Mahaffey to Sun Valley, where they will take part in the winter sports.

Count Jehan de Noue is as colorful as the slides with which he illustrates what he has to say on French gardens and chateaux, and is quite unlike what one might expect of someone who is in this country as a representative of the Safeguard of French Art. He speaks English fluently, for his mother was English, he is young and has red hair. Count Jehan de Noue is a great-grandson of a St. Louisan, Gen. William S. Harney of Mexican and Indian war fame, and related to many St. Louis families through the Mullanphys, Lindseys, Cates, La Mottes and Thatchers. Last summer he entertained Mrs. Robert A. B. Walsh and her daughter, Miss Polly Walsh; Mrs. Nettie Beauregard and Mr. and Mrs. C. Oscar Lamy at his estate L'Abbaye Royale du Lys, at Melun, on the edge of the Fontainebleau Forest, just outside of Paris. The house itself dates back to the thirteenth century and is an extensive white stone mansion, mostly rebuilt in the eighteenth century, with gothic ruins of a Cistertian monastery in the formal gardens. It is a coincidence that the adjoining estate belongs to the Marquis de Mun who is related to the Cabanne, Walsh, Maffitt and Ellsworth Smith families in St. Louis.

Count de Noue is at present at Lake Placid for the winter sports, but will leave soon for Chicago to visit friends. Then he will go on to St. Louis to visit relatives and lecture. While in New York, Count de Noue visited Mrs. Frederick T. Haskell at Hampshire House.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hylan Heminway are now in their apartment in Hampshire House after a six weeks' honeymoon at Montego Bay, Jamaica, and at Palm Beach, where they visited Mr. Heminway's mother, Mrs. Jay O'Brien. Mrs. Heminway is the former Miss Jane Alva Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew W. Johnson.

Other former St. Louisans who make Hampshire House their address here are Mr. and Mrs. George Herbert Walker of Old Westbury, L. I. The Walkers are in town this week, before leaving for their place at Barnwell, S. C. Mrs. Walker is the daughter of Mrs. James H. Wear, and sister of Mrs. Max Kotany, both of St. Louis.

Macklin Marrow, whose wife is the former Violet Orthwein of St. Louis, conducts the Philharmonic Symphony Ensemble in the Empire room at the Waldorf. During the concert, waiters walk around noiselessly on heavily carpeted floors, taking orders from guests who are enjoying Mozart and Ravel. Mr. and Mrs. Marrow live along the Palisades of the Hudson, out at Sneeden's Landing, N. Y.

Former St. Louisans who frequent these concerts are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hall Knight, who were there on Sunday night, at a large Dutch treat table arranged by Mr.

Florida Colonists To Attend Ball

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 25.

THE outstanding social and charity event of the season will be the second annual Hospital Ball March 9 at the Indian Creek Club. Four Miami Beach clubs—Bath, Surf and Indian Creek and the Committee of One Hundred—will combine efforts to raise funds for hospitals. Patronesses will comprise wives of Governors of the participating clubs, including Mrs. Frank O. Watts and Mrs. John S. Swift of St. Louis and Mrs. Allan P. Green of Mexico, Mo.

Th Can-Can Gala and the Junior League Head-dress Ball were the two high lights among recent events. Spectacular and gay, the Can-Can Gala was reminiscent of Paris and the gay nineties. The patio of the Surf Club was transformed into a bar of the Moulin Rouge, and the lounge became a representation of one of the famous music halls of the day. The sensation of the evening was the Can-Can chorus, in long black silk tights, ruffled skirts and tiny, beflowered hats.

The Junior League Bal de Tete, also at the Surf Club, combined head-dresses used in decoration with those worn by the guests. Painted heads of beautiful young women wearing headgear of fantastic design such as an airplane, comet or huge butterfly, adorned the walls of both patio and lounge. Some of the guests appeared in amusing head adornment made of kitchen utensils or old shoes, but most of the woman guests favored more flattering decorations, such as flower-trimmed hats and Valentines. Several of the men selected head-dress of tropical material, old ice bags or delapidated hats.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Peters, formerly of St. Louis, were among those attending the Can-Can Gala, and Mrs. Peters was one of the guests of honor who assisted Mrs. Irving Reuter of Detroit at her Surf Club fashion show, wearing a beige gown with a bonnet-type fuchsia hat and matching accessories. The guests watched a showing of spring styles ranging from beach attire to formal evening clothes, including tailored and spectator frocks. Among the other hostesses entertaining at the fashion show luncheon was Mrs. Swift,

Martha Nicolaus To Be Wed to T. M. Simmons

Engagement Announced Informally at Cocktail Party—Wedding to Take Place Early in June.

THE betrothal of Miss Martha Nicolaus, daughter of Louis J. Nicolaus, and the late Mrs. Nicolaus, and Theodore Middleton Simmons of New Orleans, was announced at a cocktail party given late yesterday afternoon at the Nicolaus home, 4499 Lindell boulevard, for a small group of Miss Nicolaus' friends. Mr. Simmons, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward Guernsey Simmons of New Orleans, came to St. Louis for the party.

Guests were received in the living room, where clusters of spring flowers, in delicate pastel tints, were used in decoration. White blossoms adorned the buffet table in the dining room. Miss Nicolaus wore a becoming afternoon gown of periwinkle blue crepe trimmed with chartreuse crepe. At her shoulder she wore an orchid corsage.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mrs. William Perry Biddle of Washington, who is a guest of Miss Nicolaus and her father; and of Mrs. Henry Nicolaus, 4540 Lindell boulevard, and the late Mr. Nicolaus. Her mother was the former Miss Jane Adger. Miss Nicolaus received her education at John Burroughs School, St. Louis; Westover School, Middlebury, Conn., and Mlle. Boissier's School, Neuilly, France. She was presented to society several seasons ago at an elaborate ball at the Bridlespur Hunt Club, at which time the club was transformed into the "Land of the Midnight Sun." She was a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball in her debut year and later became a member of the Junior League. At present she is chairman of the art committee of the St. Louis Junior League. Miss Nicolaus, since childhood, has ridden in local and national horse shows and is a member of the Bridlespur Hunt.

Mr. Simmons attended Tulane University, where he became a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity, and later was graduated from Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va. He is a member of the Louisiana, Boston and New Orleans Country Clubs, all in New Orleans. His mother, the former Miss Estelle Fisher, attended school at Elmwood Seminary, Farmington, Mo. His aunt is Mrs. Genevieve Fisher Logan of the Gatesworth Hotel.

The wedding will take place in June, and Mr. Simmons will take his bride to New Orleans to live.

Dorothy Leggett Becomes Bride of S. C. McCluney Jr.

THE altar of Haarstick Memorial Chapel of the Church of St. Michael and St. George was simply decorated with clusters of white snapdragon and lighted by ivory tapers for the wedding of Miss Dorothy Jane Leggett, daughter of Mrs. James Alexander McVoy, 17 North Taylor avenue, and Samuel Copp McCluney Jr., yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The Rev. J. Francis Sant officiated in the presence of the immediate families. Mr. McCluney is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. McCluney, 37 Kingsbury place.

Mr. McVoy gave the bride in marriage. She wore an afternoon gown of gold toned crepe made with a high neckline, short sleeves and a street-length skirt. Her hat, of the new burnt straw shade, was trimmed with a fishnet veil. She wore dark brown accessories and a spray of brown orchids. She was unattended.

After the ceremony there was an informal reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McVoy. Vases of spring flowers decorated the living room and white spring flowers adorned the buffet table in the dining room. Mrs. McVoy was gowned in pale green crepe with which she wore a black straw hat and purple orchids.

Mr. McCluney and his bride will spend the honeymoon in New York and on their return will live at the home of his parents until they select an apartment. The bride was graduated from Mary Institute and attended Bellevue School at Tours, France. She made an informal debut in the season of 1933-34, when she served as a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball. Her father, Raymond Fletcher Leggett of Carthage, Mo., died many years ago. Mr. and Mrs. George R. Summers of Columbia, Mo., are her maternal grandparents. Mr. McCluney was graduated from Country Day School and attended Princeton University. whose guests represented a smart social group.

One of the elaborate parties of the season was that given by Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Deering at their spacious home on Pine Tree drive. The house was decorated with red and white gladioli and red roses. Twenty-four guests were invited to buffet supper in honor of Mr. Deering's sister, Mrs. Louis W. Goessling of St. Louis, who arrived recently to spend the rest of the winter with Mr. and Mrs. Deering.

Mrs. Denvir gave a luncheon at the Indian Creek Club, at which Mrs. Rolla Wells and Mrs. James Brookmire were guests. Another social event was the dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Denvir, at which Mr. and Mrs. Keller, Mr. and Mrs. Strauch, Mr. and Mrs. Watts, Mrs. Florence Parker Busch, Mr. and Mrs. Otto L. Mersman and Arthur Stickney were guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Watts motored to Hobe Sound for the weekend to be guests of Mrs. George Welch Simmons of St. Louis for the celebration of her birthday.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. Denvir, Mr. and Mrs. Brookmire, Mr. and Mrs. Strauch and Mr. and Mrs. Keller.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest Tralles of St. Louis, who are spending the season in Coral Gables, entertained at luncheon at the clubhouse terrace at Hialeah Park, their guests inclduing Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Robinson of St. Louis, Miss Louise Tralles of St. Louis, Mrs. Horace Bourgon of Detroit, and Mrs. Clarence Bitting of Watch Hill, R. I.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 25.

THE Everglades Club housed one of the largest balls of the current season—a circus party—Wednesday night. Decorations represented a circus tent interior. The St. Louisans attending included Miss Jane Price of the debutante group, Mrs. Robert Lee Morton Jr. and her sister, Miss Susan Meston.

Children of Everglades Club members had an opportunity to see the circus in the afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Orange Gardens, where acrobats, trapeze artists, animals and clowns gave an entire performance. At 5 o'clock there was a circus parade down Worth avenue, the center of the shopping center.

Sports-loving St. Louisans here for the season are to be found Wednesdays and Sundays at the international polo matches at Delray. Last Sunday, the Gulf Stream polo team, which includes such well-known players as Winston Guest and Laddy Sanford, played a Cuban team. A party which drove from here for the game included Edwin Sweet, James St. George Tucker and I. Dickinson Tate, with Miss Virginia Shook of Birmingham, Ala., and Miss Virginia Bohne of Fort Wayne, Ind. The young men left for St. Louis Monday so Mr. Sweet could complete plans for moving to New York, where he will be associated with the Guaranty Trust Co.

Virtually the whole of Palm Beach society turned out last Saturday night for a party in honor of the cast for the Romanies concert, headed by Helen Jepson. The party was given at Club Fifty-second Street, where Peggy Fears heads the floor show. Among the tables arranged for private parties was one at which Mrs. Tom Meston entertained close friends. Of special interest was the appearance of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, wearing the famous Hope diamond, which she permitted guests to examine closely, with a warning to handle the chain, rather than the jewel itself, for fear of calling down the legendary curse.

Miss Laura Hale Rand, the Veiled Prophet Queen, and Miss Lida Lee Christy, who attended a house party given last week by Mrs. Oscar Johnson at her home in Holly Springs, Miss., arrived at Twin Palms Wednesday to be the guests of Miss Christy's grandmother, Mrs. George Wiegand of the Park Plaza in St. Louis. Miss Frances Howell Lewis, another member of the house party, is also here, visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Robert D. Lewis, at the Breakers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.

LENT makes the Washington social calendar less formal but by no means less crowded. The gaiety, if subdued, exists for those who know where to find it. With an early Easter this year the little season afterwards is certain to be unusually brilliant, especially as Washington will be entertaining royalties from overseas in the late spring, notably the King and Queen of Great Britain.

Bits of news about the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to America filter in from various sources. In Canada it is proposed that the King should be initiated into the Six Nations tribe. The King's older brother, the Duke of Windsor, during one of his American visits was inducted into an Indian tribe in Canada and given the name of Chief Morning Star.

When in Washington in November, 1919, the Prince of Wales called on the late Col. Clarence Crittenden Calhoun and Mrs. Calhoun. Mrs. Calhoun related that she had urged Col. Calhoun to don an Indian costume made for him by the Sioux Indians for whom he was counsel, and by whom he was given the name of Chief High Eagle. "I told the Prince," continued Mrs. Calhoun, "that as real Americans, the head of our family was an Indian chief, which he seemed in this particular instance, to take as a matter of course. Just before the trays of refreshment were brought in, Col. Calhoun glided into the room from behind the portieres of the main entrance then, bowing low, offered with the grace and dignity of the tribe he represents, a welcome to our wigwam and to the hospitalities of our village.

"The Prince was evidently completely taken in for a time," she concluded, "and then very much amused. He tremendously admired Col. Calhoun's costume, saying he wished he had one just like it and that one of his greatest desires was to visit the Sioux tribe."

Interstate Commerce Commissioner Clyde B. Aitchison and Superintendent of Schools Frank B. Ballou were born on Washington's birthday. Commissioner Aitchison is devoted to dogs as pets and likes fox terriers. They have full run of his study where his desk converted out of an old rosewood square piano provides plenty of desk space and shelves and pigeonholes for his papers. Commissioner and Mrs. Aitchison have a farm camp in Virginia just across the Potomac.

Service Group Formed By the Wednesday Club

MRS. FRED C. LAKE JR., president of the Wednesday Club, has announced the formation of the Wednesday Club group for volunteer service, co-operating with the Social Planning Council of St. Louis and St. Louis County. The group will be under the supervision of a subcommittee of the civics committee. Miss Elizabeth Moere is chairman of the civics committee, and the members of the subcommittee are: Mrs. George A. Hope, chairman; Mrs. Ralph F. Piper and Mrs. Earl J. Rickman. A meeting and tea for the group will be held in the club rooms tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Burnet Outten, a member of the Wednesday Club and chairman of the Department of Volunteer Service of the Social Planning Council, will address the meeting on "The Place of the Volunteer in Social Work." Mrs. Frances Goodall, placement secretary of the Department of Volunteer Service of the Social Planning Council, will discuss, "Opportunities for Volunteer Service in Social Agencies."

Mrs. Piper, chairman of the hospitality committee for the tea, will be assisted by the following club members: Miss Suzanne Cable Mackay, Mrs. John Brownrigg, Mrs. Stephen S. St. Louisans Attend Yale Junior Prom

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 25.

TOMORROW concludes the annual Yale University Junior Promenade week-end.

The prom itself was given last night at Payne Whitney gymnasium, dancing starting at 10:15 o'clock. Harold Howe II of Hampton, Va., prom chairman, and his guest, Miss Priscilla Lamb of New York, Vassar student, led the grand march.

The blue and white bunting of Eli covered all four walls of the large auditorium. The dance floor proper was surrounded by 10 fraternity boxes, set off by white trellis work and green palms. A modern theme was used in decorations on the bandstand, where a nationally-known orchestra played. Paintings of girls by famous artists, including Peter Arno, a former Yale man, and McClelland Barclay, represented the artists' conception of Yale promgirls, adorned the walls. The balcony was given over to various college boxes, canopied with blue and white satin.

In the absence of President and Mrs. Charles Seymour, H. Emerson Tuttle, master of Davenport College, and Mrs. Tuttle served as host and hostess in the faculty receiving line. The grand march was followed at 11:55 o'clock by the wooden spoon ceremony, in which Albert S. Wilson Jr. of Sharples, W. Va., last year's chairman, surrendered the spoon, emblematic of his former position, to Mr. Howe. During intermission the Yale Whiffenpoofs sang, and various floor shows and a buffet supper were given during the evening.

The prom lasted until 3 o'clock, after which the Sheffield Scientific School fraternities opened their doors for several hours of dancing, followed by breakfasts at fraternity houses and at the nine colleges.

Before the ball, the combined Harvard-Yale Glee Clubs gave a concert in Sprague Memorial Hall. Undergraduates and their guests then proceded to the Mory Eating Club, where the Whiffenpoofs entertained with informal singing.

Most of the collegiate body was out this afternoon for the academic fraternity tea dances; while this evening offered a choice of entertainment in the Yale Dramat's musical comedy, "Here We Go Again," the Yale-Dartmouth hockey game, or the Yale-Georgetown basketball game. The Dramat's show, written by Douglas Allen of Cincinnati, and William Stucky of Lexington, Ky., has as its theme "The Evolution of a Yale Man," with Philip F. Peck of Lake Forest, Ill., playing the lead.

Tomorrow morning most of the visitors will attend worship services in ivy-covered Batell Chapel. Tomorrow afternoon the 1200 girls will be guests of honor at farewell parties given by upperclassmen.

A 'Free Union' of Democracies Proposed as Answer to Rising Threat of Dictator Aggression

Clarence K. Streit Daringly Outlines Super-Government Projection of U. S. Constitution to Include North Atlantic States.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.

IN "Union Now," Clarence K. Streit, for 10 years the New York Times' correspondent at Geneva, has written the possible answer of the democracies to Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf." Just as for many years Hitler's predictions of 1924 and 1927 were dismissed as "fantastic" and "ridiculous," it may be a long time, perhaps not until after the next world war, before Streit's proposals to meet dictatorship aggression will be adequately studied. At the present time, it is a thought-provoking document, one to be read and debated by all concerned with maintaining Western civilization.

The scope and daring of Streit's 300-page book are breath-taking. Combining cold logic with an intense emotional fervor, he projects the United States Constitution to cover 15 democracies: the United States, the United Kingdom, Ireland, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Finland.

'Free Union' Program.

These North Atlantic, or "founder democracies," should coalesce, he proposes, not into a league, confederation or alliance, but into a "free union," with its own parliament, courts and executive departments for the isolation of the 279,000,000 peace-loving inhabitants against the Fascist and Nazi aggressions of Germany, Italy and Japan.

Soviet Russia, India and all of South America are left in an undefined, intermediate, neutral zone, with promises, held out that each might join the union after it has achieved western democratic standards.

This union, Streit declares, would have a common citizenship, defense force, customs-free economy, money and postal and communications system.

He submits an illustrative constitution, taken almost word for word from the American charter, as an example of how this "great republic" could be brought into being.

Article 1 is a concise paraphrase of the United States Bill of Rights. The other provisions follow the terms of the United States Constitution as nearly as possible. In the legislative field the Union constitution sets up a Congress, composed of House of Deputies of 287 members and a Senate of 42 members. Executive power would be vested in a board of five Union citizens, to be at least 35 years old, three of whom to be directly elected by the citizens, one by the House and one by the Senate. In addition, there would be a Premier, aided by a Cabinet, whose members might also be members of the Congress. Judicial power would be vested in a high court and such lower courts as the Union might from time to time establish. The final article provides that ratification by 10 states, or by France, the United Kingdom and the United States, shall suffice to establish union among them.

Beyond Previous Concepts.

Streit's daring has carried him far beyond the now moribund League of Nations, the late Aristide Briand's proposal for a "United States of Europe," or Cecil Rhodes' vision of a close federation of the English-speaking people. It is curious that Streit, a Rhodes scholar at University College, Oxford, does not mention Rhodes' ideal of better government based on home rule, free trade and federation.

In his closely written and somewhat ponderous book, however, Streit gives complete though tentative implementation to the ideal of world perfection of justice and liberty and the maintenance of world peace.

Few persons are more adequately equipped than Streit to state the issues which confront the international world today and to offer a bold and far-reaching solution.

He was born in California, Mo. As a child he was taken to Montana, where he worked his way through the university. In 1917 he volunteered for the army, selecting the Eighteenth Railway Engineers because they were scheduled for almost immediate service in France. Later he was assigned to intelligence service and was attached in a confidential position to the American Peace Commission in Paris, where he served six months. After the war he was chosen as a Rhodes scholar from Montana, but after a little more than a year at Oxford he resigned to cover the Turko-Greek war for the Philadelphia Public Ledger. He was later the Ledger's Rome correspondent, where he saw the beginning of Mussolini's triumphs. He covered various capitals in Europe before becoming the New York Times' correspondent in Geneva in 1929. From this vantage point he became personally acquainted with the various delegates and officials in the League of Nations.

Why the League Failed.

Once a stout defender of the League, he writes a devastating critique of why the League failed to meet the post-war problems, especially the aggressions of the personal dictatorship governments in Germany, Italy, Japan, and now Spain.

He denies that the primary purpose of the Union would be to conquer the autocracies or even to arm the democracies so heavily that the autocracies would be afraid to attack.

"The dictators," he says, "are right when they blame the democracies for the world's condition, but they are wrong when they blame it on democracy. The anarchy comes from the refusal of the democracies to renounce enough of their national sovereignty to let effective world law and order be set up. But their refusal to do this, their maintenance of the state for its own sake, their readiness to sacrifice the lives and liberties of citizens rather than the independence of the state—this we know is not democracy. It is the core of absolutism. Democracy has been waning and autocracy waxing, the rights of men lessening and the rights of the state growing everywhere because the leading democracies themselves led in practicing beyond their frontiers autocracy instead of democracy.

"It is true that the rising power of autocracy increases the need for union, just as the spread of a contagious disease increases the need for quarantine and for organizing the healthy. But it is essential to remember that though the victims carry the disease, they did not cause it, and that quarantine of the victims and organization of the healthy are aimed not against the victims but against the epidemic, the purpose being to end it both by restricting its spread and by curing its victims. Union does not seek to put the autocracies even in quarantine in any material sense; it seeks primarily to organize the healthy so as to overcome the disease.

Question of Motives.

"It is wrong, all wrong, to conceive of the Union as aimed against the nations of the triangle (Germany, Italy and Japan). There is a world of difference between the motives behind the Union and those behind either the present policy in each democracy of arming itself or the proposals for alliance among the democracies. For such armament and such alliances are meant to maintain the one thing Union does attack, the autocratic principle of absolute nation-

'BEST GOVERNED CITY IN U. S.'

No Election Scandals, Rackets, Gambling or Major Crime

Municipality Operating on Cash Basis With Unexpended Balance at End of Year and Good Prospect of Retiring Its Bonded Debt by 1943.

By ERNEST KIRSCHTEN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 25.

MILWAUKEE'S civic reputation has become an American legend. Even European administrators cross an ocean and half a continent to visit its towering brownstone city hall and study its accomplishments.

Norman Thomas, writing in the Sixtieth Anniversary Edition of the Post-Dispatch, described it as the best governed city in the country.

Impelled by that comment, this reporter was sent to get the facts behind the legend. Just what made Milwaukee famous?

1. First of all, the city is on a cash basis. It has a balanced budget and unexpended balances at the year's end while many municipalities, St. Louis among them, are reporting deficits.

2. Milwaukee has an Amortization Fund that is expected to retire what remains of the city's bonded debt four years from now—at no cost to the taxpayers.

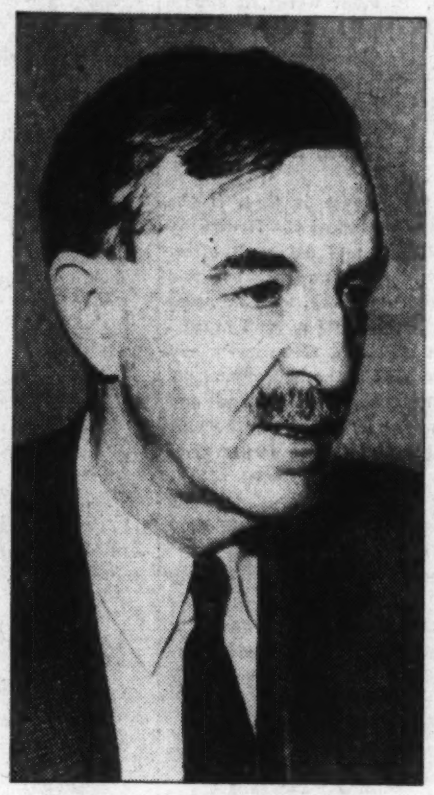
3. The city displayed further fiscal ingenuity by issuing "baby bonds" during the depression to thaw frozen assets and relieve its shortage of cash. This emergency operation was made to yield a handsome profit.

4. Milwaukee's tax rate is not low, but the taxpayers get their money's worth in efficient municipal services — advanced schools, speedy courts, honest police, a prize-winning fire department.

5. Election frauds and graft are unheard of. Selection and promotion of city workers, from laborers to experts, are governed by a real merit system.

6. Milwaukee has Daniel Webster Hoan, the Socialist, who has been its mayor for 22 years, managing its affairs in a way that has been the envy of many a business man. His long tenure is not unusual. When Milwaukee finds a good man, it keeps him on the job. This is demonstrated by the long service of many of its department heads.

Tall, gaunt and iron gray, with a touch of Abraham Lincoln in his manner and speech, Hoan is the dominating figure in Milwaukee's story of two decades of public righteousness, but he is by no means the whole story; as consistently as the voters have elected him, they have also refused him the support of a majority of the aldermen in the Common Council.



DANIEL WEBSTER HOAN

Analysis of the System That Makes Milwaukee Famous.

"Always elect Hoan, but never support him" seems to be the formula to which they have reduced the American theory of government by checks and balances. The non-Socialist Council majority, however, has rarely descended to mere obstructionism. Within limits, it has generally supported the mayor.

Although without benefit of ballyhoo, this Milwaukee system has worked so amazingly well that it has not gone unnoticed in the storm and the fury raised by Chicago's machine bosses on the right and Madison's experimenting Progressives on the left.

But let us take apart this kaleidoscope of civic virtue. Let us take these things one at a time, and, because he is most interesting, save the mayor for the last.

"If we found a $50 graft case over in the city hall, it would be the biggest story of the year," the editor of one Milwaukee newspaper told this reporter. "We would have it all over Page One for weeks. It is something that just doesn't happen here."

With politicians living up to such high standards, it is no surprise to find more than 95 per cent of the city's employes under a scrupulously respected civil service system. Salaries for most jobs are higher than they are in St. Louis, for example, but so are the qualifications of the job-holders. Milwaukee city employes are workers, not the beneficiaries of political patronage. As a result, the municipal payroll is not overloaded. These are things conceded even by the severest critics of the administration.

Election scandals are something that Milwaukeeans read about in the newspapers like earthquakes in the Andes. In this respect the city is so far in advance of other American communities that it now selects its polling place officials by a civil service examination. Naturally, it has a fool-proof permanent registration system. The police make a house-to-house canvass to be sure that all voters actually live at the addresses on the poll lists. These also are published so that the citizens may check them.

Commercialized gambling, racketeering and gangsterism cannot flourish without political protection—something that can neither be begged nor bought in Milwaukee. Gamblers do try to open up from time to time, but they are raided promptly.

For years Milwaukee has been virtually free of serious crime. There is splendid co-operation between police, prosecutor and courts, all of whom have demonstrated that they have a stomach for their job. More than once offenders have been started for the penitentiary less than 24 hours after their arrest.

Crooks Never Get Real Chance to Work in Milwaukee.

Crooks never get a real chance to operate in Milwaukee. The city attracts many large conventions, usually magnets for pickpockets and hotel burglars. For weeks before such an event, the police meet every train, passenger and freight; busses and planes are watched, too. As many as 200 suspicious arrivals have been rounded up at one time. Many of them are sent to other cities where they are wanted. Some are jailed for carrying weapons or on other charges. It is easy to persuade the others to move on. Such methods saved Milwaukee from becoming an asylum for gangsters seeking to escape "the heat" in Chicago, especially during the Capone era.

Needless to say, Milwaukee has a modernly equipped police force. Its morale is high. A school, conducted by an F. B. I.-trained man, keeps the men and guest students from other cities ready for any emergency. Milwaukee police, however, stress crime prevention rather than detection. Incidentally, Joseph T. Kluchesgy, who was named chief a year and a half ago on the death of the widely-known Jacob Laubenheimer, is only the third head of the department in half a century.

More prosaic than the suppression of crime and corruption, but probably more important to the citizenry, are a well-trained fire department that has brought Milwaukee the lowest fire insurance rates of any large city; schools adequate in number and advanced in method, among them the famed Milwaukee Vocational School with an enrollment of more than 20,000; beautiful parks and well-equipped playgrounds; a Health Department that has won first place for Milwaukee in the National Health Contest so often that the city is now barred from competing for this honor; a Safety Commission that for the fifth time has brought the city first place in the National Safety Council competition; an excellent water supply which also means a modern sewage disposal plant to prevent contamination of this supply in Lake Michigan; one of the most intensively used public libraries in the country; a famous museum; wide, well paved streets and more than 100 bridges across the city's three busy rivers, and all the other appurtenances of a modern municipality. Sound pension funds for police, firemen, teachers and other city workers probably should also be listed here.

A thrifty habit of trying to make municipal services pay at least part of their cost is characteristic of Milwaukee. An excellent fertilizer is produced at the Jones Island sewage disposal plant. Called Milogranite, it is sold widely and brings in about two-thirds of the money needed for the operation of the plant.

Public Services Made to Help Pay for Themselves; Tax Rate One of Highest in the Country but People Get Value for Their Money.

Another source of income has been found in the dump outside the city incinerator. An experimental sifter was placed in operation there in November, 1937. The content of 5000 cubic yards of ash and rubbish was analyzed and it was determined that the city could have realized $18,000 from the sale of tin cans and other iron, $12,500 from glass and $6000 from paper if this material had been salvaged during the year. As a result, plans were prepared for a $52,000 sifting plant. It was also found that enough combustible cinders, containing about half the heating units of new coal, can be salvaged to heat several municipal buildings. After this second burning, the clinkers can be used as filling for roadbeds and playgrounds.

Milwaukee on Cash Basis; How Amortization Fund Works.

Still another money-maker is the municipal terminal that handles much of Milwaukee's water-borne freight. Its earnings run well above $100,000 a year and return about $30,000 above its budget allocation to the general fund.

The Milwaukee Auditorium, unlike its more modern counterpart in St. Louis, also produces revenue. In 1937, the last year for which complete figures are available, it earned a profit of $51,296.

Centralized purchasing also represents a substantial economy. Milwaukee's $3,250,000 annual bill for supplies would be at least 15 per cent greater, it is estimated, if the city did not take advantage of discounts for prompt cash payments and for quantity buying.

The outstanding thing about Milwaukee is that it is on a cash basis. This means that the city does not have to pay $1.50 for every $1 it uses as is the case when money is raised through bond issues. Milwaukee, furthermore, is reasonably certain of retiring its dwindling bonded debt by 1943, after which it will have available upwards of $4,000,000 a year for permanent improvements. St. Louis, on the other hand, must make provision for interest payments and debt retirement at least until 1956, and it is not unlikely that the voters will have to approve new bond issues before then.

Milwaukee's prospect for a debtless future is based on its Amortization Fund. Early in his first term Mayor Hoan found that millions of dollars were deposited in banks whenever taxes were collected or the proceeds of a bond issue reached the city treasurer. Much of this money could not be spent for months and even years, yet the banks paid only 1 or 2 per cent interest on it. On the other hand, they asked 6 and even 7 per cent when the city wished to borrow. He decided to do something about this.

Prospect of Debtless City Safeguarded by State Law.

During the war it became the acme of patriotism to buy Liberty Bonds, and the city was able to persuade the Legislature to grant it the right to invest cash on hand in good government and municipal bonds. Interest of 4 and 5 per cent on Liberty Bonds at once replaced the low bank payments.

Instead of using this windfall for current needs, the city reinvested its earnings, permitting them to compound for the purpose of debt retirement. In 1923 State legislation safeguarded the rapidly increasing fund against any future city administration that might be tempted to the short-sighted course of using the money for immediate purposes, thus making a record for tax-saving.

At that time it was estimated that in 40 years the fund would be large enough to retire the city's remaining bonded debt, which now stands at about $20,000,000 compared with a bonded indebtedness of more than $80,000,000 in St. Louis.

Several factors have halved the original estimate. For one thing, Milwaukee has rigorously tightened up its bond policy. It has refused to borrow for improvements that would not outlast the 20-year span of the bonds. It has secured legislative enactments forbidding bond issues for certain purposes such as street paving. Even when borrowing, it has financed only about 40 per cent of the cost of improvements through bonds. Since 1923 the city also has reduced its debt burden by about $20,000,000. Further reductions are being made annually by the allocation of a

Savings Bank Life Insurance Gaining Ground; Adopted in New York, Up Again in Missouri

Plan Pioneered by Brandeis in Massachusetts Designed to Protect Wage-Earner at Lowest Possible Rate.

By SAM J. SHELTON
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

SAVINGS bank insurance, pioneered in Massachusetts by retired Justice Louis D. Brandeis before he began his distinguished career on the bench of the United States Supreme Court, made a notable gain this year when New York became the second State to put the system in operation.

A bill to authorize this type of insurance in Missouri has been introduced in the House by Representative Roscoe C. Summers of Cass County. A similar bill has received little support in previous sessions of the Legislature.

Savings bank insurance is intended especially to provide protection for wage earners and their families, in comparatively small amounts, at the lowest possible rates. Its field generally is that now served by the "industrial" or "burial" types of policies sold by house-to-house canvassers who collect premiums weekly in amounts of 5 or 10 cents, and up, according to the number of policies or units sold.

Some light on the magnitude of this "industrial" insurance business was given by Frederick N. Ecker, chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., in recent testimony before the temporary National Economic Committee at Washington which has undertaken a comprehensive investigation of all phases of the insurance business as a national institution.

Industrial Policies.

Said Mr. Ecker: "Every other man, woman and child whom you meet on the streets of St. Louis is insured by the Metropolitan." This was to emphasize his statement that one-half the population of St. Louis carried policies in his company.

What this really means was made clear by his further testimony that the company has outstanding in the United States a total of 28,000,000 policies and that they are divided into these two classes—23,000,000 industrial policies and 5,000,000 ordinary life or group policies.

If this ratio holds good it means that four-fifths of the 400,000 policies the company has on the lives of St. Louisans are of the "industrial" type.

There are other large companies and several smaller ones selling industrial insurance in St. Louis, which has a large wage-earning population. Metropolitan has 14 district offices out of which solicitors work, one company has six district offices and several others have three or more.

High Cost to the Needy.

The poor, subsisting on small wages, with incomes often stretched to the breaking point in trying to rear large families of children, are the principal customers of the industrial policy salesman, and the most potent argument of these salesmen is that the policy of a few hundred dollars will provide a decent burial for the person covered.

For hard-pressed families the buying of this type of insurance is like buying coal by the basket—it costs much more than the same product in larger quantities. They must bear the burden of the higher cost of selling and collecting in these small units.

When he proposed savings bank life insurance, Brandeis was trying to find a way to reduce the cost of protection for families least able to pay the high rates that prevailed for the industrial type of insurance.

In a published analysis of the operation of Savings Bank Insurance in Massachusetts, from the time it was established 30 years ago, Clyde S. Casady, supervisor of agencies in that State for the savings bank system, says:

"Over a period of years, the cost of savings bank life insurance has averaged about one-fourth less than the average cost of ordinary insurance sold by the old-line companies, and about one-half the cost of weekly premium industrial insurance."

Under the savings bank system house-to-house solicitors and collectors are not employed; in fact, the law provides that the policies may be sold only over the counter at the savings banks which have qualified to issue policies or at other savings banks or institutions which may be authorized to act as agents of the issuing banks.

This method of selling was adopted because it had been found that to a large extent the cost of industrial policies was due to the method of selling and collecting. The agents dealt in nickels and dimes and had to produce a large volume of daily sales and collections in order to earn a living from their commissions. This led to overselling and a large proportion of purchasers dropped their policies in less than a year and got nothing back.

The theory of savings bank insurance was that much of the high cost of selling and collecting would be eliminated if persons desiring insurance would apply for it at the savings banks and pay premiums there.

It is not state insurance. There is state supervision, but savings banks which qualify issue policies in their own names and are required by law to maintain reserves just as are any other insurance companies.

Limit of $3000.

This insurance is issued in relatively small amounts and under the New York law a policyholder is limited to $3000 insurance with not more than $1000 in any one bank. Policies limited to $400 are available for children who have not yet reached their tenth birthday.

For persons from the ages of 10 to 65 the various standard forms of policies are available in amounts of $250 to $1000. Premiums may be paid annually or in monthly, quarterly or semi-annual installments.

One of the criticisms of the usual industrial policies has been that they had no cash surrender, loan or paid up value until after premiums had been paid for five years or longer. The savings bank policies have cash value after premiums have been paid for six months and loan value after they have been paid for one year.

Under the Massachusetts savings bank plan a straight life policy for $1000 at age 35 costs $22.19 a year. An analysis prepared by the Savings Bank Life Insurance League of New York shows that after 10 annual premiums have been paid on such a policy there will have been returned to the policy holder in dividends $53.58 and the policy will have a cash value of $146.01, making a net cost of $22.31 for the 10 years, or an average of $2.23 a year.

Premium Charges.

The rate card issued for New York savings bank insurance gives the following annual premium charges for various types of $1000 policy issued at age 35:

Straight life	$23.96
Paid up at 65	27.4
Endowment maturing at age 65	31.52
20 payment life	33.78
20-year endowment	47.36

These policies participate in dividends, according to the earnings of the reserves held by the issuing banks. Term insurance also is issued in amounts of not less than $1000 for five-year periods, renewable up to the age of 65.

Within the first month after the New York law became effective four banks qualified to issue insurance policies. The law permits these banks to have as agencies other savings banks, credit unions and the like. Within the first 23 days 1844 persons applied for policies aggregating $1,643,200.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

As to the University of Illinois Pictures.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN your pictorial section of Sunday, Jan. 29, you published two pages of pictures under the caption, "Gloom Week on the Illinois Campus—How Final Exams Affect Student Life." These pictures and the accompanying text are erroneous, if not fictitious, in so many respects that I feel sure you will welcome a statement of the facts to correct the mistaken impression which the portrayal has doubtless given to many of your readers.

These pictures purport to be scenes of student life and activities at the university during the final examination period—at least this is implied in the text where it is not specifically stated. While some of them are not objectionable in themselves, they are not true final examination scenes. Your paper states that they were taken at the university by a student in the School of Journalism. This young man has admitted that most of the pictures were taken several weeks ago and several of them were posed, including the three which we consider objectionable and a reflection upon the student body. One of them (No. 16 in the series), that of a student posing in a supposedly drunken stupor, was taken at Waukegan, Ill., during the holidays at the university. Another (No. 12) of a girl cribbing was not a classroom scene but was also posed. Picture No. 15, showing a student celebration after examinations, was taken on homecoming day, Oct. 22. Obviously, the pictures are not an authentic portrayal of final examination scenes and activities, although this is not the chief objection to them.

There are several misstatements of facts, or exaggerations of facts, in the text. One statement is that 2000 students out of 13,000 students will fail and be dismissed from the university at the end of the examination period. This is an exaggeration; the number of students dropped for scholastic deficiencies at the end of any semester runs from 750 to 900, at the most. Another statement refers to frequent expulsions for cheating in examinations or other written work. No one would deny that some students crib, not only at the University of Illinois but at other educational institutions. The penalty for this, especially when it occurs in final examinations, is expulsion from the university. However, such expulsions do not occur frequently. These examples are illustrative of the misleading copy prepared by the student who took the pictures. Incidentally, he was not a senior in the School of Journalism at the time the pictures were taken, but had sophomore standing in the College of Agriculture.

I am sure that many alumni and parents among your readers have been much concerned about this misleading pictorial account. Unfortunately, thousands of other readers are not in a position to know the facts and will believe that the scenes are truly illustrative of student conduct. Doubtless, the pictures and other material submitted were accepted in good faith, but it is unfortunate that in this instance no check was made on the authenticity and accuracy of material submitted by an undergraduate student who was not officially representing the university.

I dislike to write this sort of a letter, especially in view of the many fine things your paper has done for educational institutions in general and particularly for the University of Illinois, but in this instance I feel you will want to know and publish the facts.

In Defense of Herbert Hoover.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THIS country would be much better off if it had more men as safe, sane and honest as Herbert Hoover. He is sincerely interested in the permanent welfare of the country, and I cannot see why you don't say something pleasant about him occasionally.

What can you gain by taking a personal or political slap at an American citizen who went from the bottom to the top—a man who went through the four worst years of the depression without having a single thing disreputable pinned on him? OREL T. DAVIS.

Would Deport Foreign-Born Nazis.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WHEN are our American philanthropists going to initiate a fund for the immediate transportation to "Das Vaterland" of all those foreign-born members of the German-American Bund?

R. E. K. JR.

On the Air Reserve Plan.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

HOW many young men out of college, after four years of specialized training, would enlist in the air reserve? These young men have been trained to go into professional work when they graduate, and I question that 20,000 of them would discard a possibly lucrative future for the meager rewards offered in civilian air training.

However, this number could easily be recruited from among young men with mechanical training who are physically able, but do not have the benefit of a college education. I fully agree with Maj. Robertson that all young men who have the necessary requirements should be given this training, even if they haven't college educations. STEVE HOWE.

The Neutrality Act—A Strait Jacket

By the terms of the Neutrality Act, the United States has provided itself with what will prove to be a veritable strait jacket in a time of national emergency. It becomes the urgent duty of Congress to re-examine this law in the light of changed world conditions and to amend or even repeal it to safeguard the interests of the United States.

The Neutrality Act was originally passed in 1935, with the over-optimistic notion that a set of rules could be drafted in advance to keep the country out of another war. At that time, the world situation was comparatively tranquil. That was before Ethiopia, China, Spain, Austria and Czecho-Slovakia—even before Hitler's occupation of the Rhineland.

Our rosy dreams of comfortable isolation, on which the Neutrality Act was based, have been rudely dispelled. In the cold dawn of today, we know there are forces abroad in the world, hostile to everything our civilization holds dear, whose aggressions are hemming in France and Great Britain and are, therefore, coming closer to us, both from the East and from the West. And, though the oceans are still wide—but not so wide as they were before the submarine and the long-range bomber—it becomes essential for us to take such prudent measures as are necessary to meet the challenge of the Fascist Powers. This was partially recognized the other day by the House of Representatives when it passed the emergency defense bill with only 15 dissenting votes.

Unless the Neutrality Act is changed, we lack the freedom of action which may be essential to serve our best interests. Once a state of war between two or more nations is proclaimed by the President, the law prohibits the shipment of arms, munitions or implements of war, directly or indirectly, to any of the belligerents.

Another provision gives the President power to prohibit American ships from carrying articles and materials, as vital to war as arms, to belligerents, though they may buy such articles and materials here and take them away in their own ships. This is the so-called cash-and-carry provision. Parenthetically, it may be said that, in any alteration of the Neutrality Act, the excellent cash-and-carry idea should be preserved as a preventive of such controversies, both with Great Britain and Germany, as preceded our entrance into the World War. Other provisions of the Neutrality Act forbid the extension of loans and credits to warring nations and prohibit the arming of American merchant vessels engaged in commerce with belligerents.

It is not difficult to imagine a situation in which these provisions would rise to plague us. If France and Great Britain were to be attacked by the Fascist Powers, we could not sell them arms to defend themselves, though their defeat might mean the end of democracy in Western Europe and bring the menace of Fascism close to our own shores. If the French Army were conquered and the British Navy no longer sailed the Atlantic, even our most earnest isolationists might express fears for this country's future.

Already we have seen that the Neutrality Act is a misnomer. In the war between Italy and Ethiopia, it was invoked against both, yet Italy was free to come to our ports and buy oil and other products, while Ethiopia, having neither navy nor merchant ships, could not avail herself of this privilege. In the Spanish war, there has been no way of preventing Italy and Germany from purchasing arms and other materials here and bootlegging them into Spain. When the undeclared war between Japan and China broke out, Mr. Roosevelt failed to proclaim that a state of war existed and the Neutrality Act never went into effect. Thus, its impracticability was demonstrated in an international conflict of major proportions.

The Neutrality Act should be amended so that, in cases of emergency, the United States can aid those nations with which she has spiritual kinship or which are the victims of aggression, and can withhold aid from our potential enemies, or nations which engage in unjustified aggression. In other words, it should be changed to permit us to adopt a position of frank unneutrality when conditions demand it. Moreover, let us make the necessary changes with all promptness. If we should wait until a war breaks out, a change in the rules to favor one side or the other might be deemed an unfriendly act, if not an outright act of war.

The brighter side of the picture is that, if the United States should amend or repeal the Neutrality Act, it would have a sobering and deterrent effect on the aggressor nations. Such an action would serve notice on them that this country, with its great wealth and resources, might throw its support against them. It has often been said that Germany would never have gone to war in 1914 if the Kaiser and his advisers had been certain that first England and then the United States would be found on the side of France. Only the other day, State Department officials were quoted as saying that repeal of the arms embargo clauses of the Neutrality Act would reduce the chances of war in Europe by at least 60 per cent, and perhaps to zero.

In any event, the time has come for this country, the strongest of the world's democracies, to assert itself. It has been said that the next war, if it comes, will destroy democracy and, if we become involved, that it will destroy our democracy. We must, therefore, do our utmost to prevent it by helping to restrain the aggressor nations. If democracy is worth saving, and if it is agreed that war will destroy it, let us act to save it by making the aggressors realize they cannot possibly gain anything by war and that they are defeated before they start.

The first order of business is for Congress to remove the self-imposed shackles of the Neutrality Act.

MISSOURI'S POETRY DAY.

A bill has been introduced in the House at Jefferson City to fix in the calendar what shall be known as "Missouri Poetry day," to be observed annually on the third Friday of October. Let us hope and believe the committee recommends that "it do pass."

It might be said, perhaps, that every day is poetry day in Missouri. It might even be said that Missouri is herself a poem. All Missourians know that. Our good neighbor to the North, Iowa, with little if any poetry in her corn-fed soul, rejoices in her shoulder-touching association with Missouri. Mammon-mad Illinois suspects it. Jealous Kansas reluctantly concedes it. Oklahoma and Arkansas say it's okay by them. But the unfortunately remote states do not know Missouri and her constant muse, and their darkened spirits would be illumined by our legalized Poetry day, and who knows but they might be inspired to reach for the finer things, the better life?

The authors of this glorious measure are Representative Grafton of Jasper County and Representative Skaggs of Howell. They are both poets. Mr. Grafton's flair is lyrical. He is the laureate of the zinc mines. He has seen in the miner's smoky lamp a blazing oriflamme. In the magic of his song he has, like Horace, transmuted the tailing piles into monuments "more lasting than bronze." When the Legislature adjourns, Joplin will welcome him as Athens did another. You know how it was—

Enriched by the tears of a thousand years
Aeschylus wanders home.

Mr. Skaggs, we are informed, translates into words the pastoral charms of glad green tillage, the lovely litanies of the leaves, the matins of friendly hills, the mystery of the companionable country road—"the smiling road, beguiling road that leads to God knows where." Wasn't that the road Theocritus walked before he was betrayed by the brazen lights of the first Broadway?

It has historically and prophetically been written: "They had no poets and they died." Never shall that be Missouri's epitaph. Pass that bill.

A SELF-IMPOSED DEATH WARRANT.

The City Plan Commission has signed its own death warrant by requesting an appropriation for only six months and by saying that, except for zoning plans now being prepared, there is no other "clearly indicated work" for the commission to do. There is, of course, as Mr. Bartholomew pointed out, much work for the commission to do. The Dickmann administration, from which the proposal to kill the commission emanated, is, in our opinion, taking a position which it or its successor will have to abandon. No modern city can afford to dispense with a plan commission's services.

A THEME FOR GILBERT AND SULLIVAN.

The British Fascist mob howled threateningly the other night when Sir Kingsley Wood, the Air Minister, attempted to speak at a political meeting in the Limehouse town hall. Fists were flying; hair was being pulled; determined plug-uglies swarmed toward the platform. It was a moment for quick thinking, and Sir Kingsley was equal to the occasion. He raised the solemn strains of "God Save the King," and the fighting stopped at once. As he finished the last stanza, the bobbies arrived.

It was an episode that could well have been used by Gilbert and Sullivan for one of their political satires. Indeed, it was so used, or at least its identical twin, in "The Pirates of Penzance." The pirates, after a furious tussle, have just vanquished the police, and stand over them with drawn swords. Like Sir Kingsley Wood, the recumbent officers find a magic formula: "We charge you yield, in Queen Victoria's name." The buccaneers are taken aback, but how can they resist? So the Pirate King sings:

We yield at once with humbled mien,
Because, with all our faults, we love our Queen.

The British faith in institutions and shibboleths is marvelous to behold. So long as pirates and Fascists respect the ancient watchwords, Britain is safe.

FINE BOOST FOR A MARRIAGE HEALTH LAW.

The strongest conceivable testimonial for passage of a marriage health law by the Missouri Legislature has just gone into the record. It is the announced opposition of George R. Hart, Justice of the Peace and proprietor of the notorious marriage mill in St. Louis County.

Evasions of the Illinois marriage health law have provided a gold mine for Squire Hart. Thousands of misguided couples cross the river to Hart's marriage parlors, foolishly seeking to circumvent a law passed for their own benefit, for the prevention of venereal contagion and diseased children. By his own statement, the marrying business pays Hart a return of $20,000 a year. If Missouri had a progressive law of the kind now being urged, his scandalous traffic obviously would dwindle to small proportions, and the heartaches incident to his operations would be averted.

Even the Missouri legislators who consider such a law "too advanced" ought to be impressed by the fact that it would end the abuses incident to the marriage mill's operation.

A host of medical, civic and social service organizations indorse legislation of this kind. Marrying Justice Hart opposes it. Need more be said?

PRETTY SOFT FOR JUNIOR.

The whole college world is figuratively at the feet of the high school boy who can do things with a football. Anyhow, that's what a lot of people have been saying. To those of us who can only stand and listen, this practice of proselyting football material is the reigning campus scandal. Fancy the shock, then, to be told we haven't been anywhere and haven't heard anything.

The story exploded at a meeting of the American College Personnel Association at Cleveland, O. It was a Wisconsin professor who threw the bomb. Such scurrilous idioms as "cutthroat competition" and "scholarship racket" rolled over the assembly. The colleges, he said, are out for everybody they can persuade, cajole or bribe to come to "Dear Old Rutgers."

The juvenile doesn't have to be a football promise. A deft putting touch, a flair for badminton, a nimble tap dancer, a bearcat with the harmonica, a lackadaisical looker-on, like Ferdinand—if a youngster has any budding talent at all that may bloom into distinction, he is courted like a scion of the purple, ways and means are provided if the paternal purse is flat, and he is met at the registrar's office by the snappiest reception committee the faculty can muster.

Students are what our colleges are after. Enrollment is the lodestar, the touchstone, the sine qua non. And scruples wither in the hot blasts of rivalry.

The Wisconsin prof says it's all wrong. He may be right.

CAUGHT IN HIS OWN TRAP.

Preparedness as a Road to Peace

Isolation and appeasement policies have failed to avert war abroad, so Senate Foreign Relations chairman urges this country adopt plan of being ready to defend itself, and letting possible aggressors know it; would help arm friendly Powers, but make no alliances; warns of effort by the Fascist dictatorships to dominate Latin America.

From a Radio Address by Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, on the Washington Evening Star's National Radio Forum.

THE people of a country, through their government, can isolate themselves for a time by refraining from taking any part in world affairs. They cannot, however, by this action, prevent any other country from violating their isolation. We have so many recent examples of peoples and their governments attempting to protect their territory and their peace through the doctrine of isolation that the impracticability of the policy is self-evident.

Austria, since the World War, adopted and practiced a policy of isolation. Behold Austria! Ethiopia practiced the policy of isolation. Czecho-Slovakia, under the rules of the League of Nations, practiced the policy of isolation. Witness China; no people and no government ever practiced more sincerely the doctrine of isolation.

The policy of appeasement has accomplished nothing for ultimate peace, nothing for justice and liberty. The policy of appeasement has been but a process of surrender and retreat before military force, with the abandonment of every treaty and every promise of protection to the independence of small countries and the liberty of peoples.

Any student of history knows the fixed policy of Japan. It is the domination of Eastern Asia, including the islands of the Pacific. It is a domination based upon military power. Every statement and every act of the militaristic clique of Japan justifies these conclusions.

They are today challenging not only their sacred agreement with us, with China and other Powers to respect the political integrity of China, but they are violating their solemn agreement with us for equal opportunities in China of our citizens with the subjects of Japan. They are now taking possession of and fortifying the island of Hainan, only 700 miles from the Philippine Islands. These fortifications will control the commerce of the Far Western Pacific.

The dictator Powers' intent to dominate the world is evident to any unbiased person. The broad areas of Latin America with its vast resources of natural wealth cannot be overlooked by ambitious dictators. Germany, Italy and Japan, are increasing their populations and influence in Latin America. We know that these dictatorial Powers are through every means—monetary, financial and political—preparing for the domination of Latin America.

This penetration into Latin America will not become pertinent until and unless these totalitarian Powers have obtained sufficient domination in Europe and Asia to permit them to move in force against Latin America. Any reasonable man will say that that is possible. Any reasonable man would say we should protect against such possibility.

We hear pacifists say, "We will defend our own shores, but we will fight nowhere else." Where does the threat start? Are we to wait until a fleet lands its marines on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and its airplanes bomb our cities? Are we to wait until military forces are established on our borders and airplane bases established that may freely bomb the Panama Canal, before we act? Are we to pursue the policy of appeasement and surrender and retreat before the threat of war, until our own country has been made the battleground of a foreign invader, and our aged and our women and children are bombed from the air?

I assert that no patriotic American citizen will agree to such a cowardly, unpatriotic and disastrous policy.

And what is our foreign policy in the circumstances? The President, in his message to Congress, clearly stated our policy. We will enter into no entangling alliances. We will be prepared, singly and alone, successfully to defend our country, its institutions and our citizens. We will not aid a government whose policy is based upon conquest and military domination. We will not refuse oppressed governments any aid that we may legally give them, short of war.

We will, unafraid, resist any encroachments upon the rights of our citizens under any treaties by every legal means at our command short of war, relying upon this power which in my opinion is sufficient and will avert war. We are not frightened, however, by the circumstances that this resistance may cause some other country to declare war upon us.

In the first place, that declaration would be both absurd and futile. No country can successfully attack our shores. In the second place, our people are not cowardly. While they hate war, they are not afraid to die for Christianity, morality, justice and liberty. Many a mistake has been made in past history by not letting dictator governments know this at the start. They probably would never have moved. That we will die, however, for these things we consider worth more than life, we know. And possibly we will preserve peace by telling people who do not understand these things what we intend to do and will do.

There is a propaganda going through this country today that would be despicable except that it is pitiful—preaching the doctrine of fear; fear that if we assert our right to enjoy religion, morality and justice and our right to liberty, that we will be forced into war.

We are told that the legal things that the President has done to date are leading us into war.

President Roosevelt, under the approved policy of our Government and the Neutrality Act, has no intention to lead us into war and cannot lead us into war. Every member of Congress is an elected representative of American citizens. Never in the history of the United States were such representatives more responsive to the will of their constituents. Congress, under the accepted policy of our Government, will not lead us into war.

Why further impose upon the credulity and the fear of our citizens? Why join in the policies of appeasement or isolation that have not made for peace but for war throughout the world? Why not wholeheartedly support the honorable, peaceful and practicable policy of our administration? Every patriotic citizen will!

A Summons to Action

Books in the News

FEW books are being written today which are honest presentations of foreign policies and their relationships to our own Government while still steering a sane course between jingoism and pacifism. "Men Must Act" (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York), by Lewis Mumford, is a courageous affirmation of faith in the principles of democracy as opposed to dictatorial governments. It summarizes clearly and briefly the need for action, not necessarily war, against external and internal assaults upon our liberties.

It has been generally agreed that there are two possible means of preserving peace for America: isolationism and interventionism. Neither, however, remains possible. Technological advances broke down the former as far back as 1920; the latter fails because of our futile Neutrality Act. Nor is collective security, based on averting war by standing firmly with other nations on behalf of treaties, laws and arbitrations, possible. The unsoundness of this policy was demonstrated in 1931, when England refused to co-operate with the United States in resisting the invasion of Manchuria, and again in 1935, when France refused to aid England in clamping down on the Italian adventure in Ethiopia.

As a means of preserving peace and strengthening democracy, Mr. Mumford presents briefly a non-intercourse policy with seven soundly reasoned courses of action. A policy of this kind has historical precedent. It would enable us, he says, to clean up our internal affairs, take steps to solve unemployment and attendant depressions and lead to sound social security and continued labor legislation.

In the event that these measures fail, democracy must be refortified with a reorganized army and navy with powers of autonomous action kept high in every branch of the service. There must be no effort to conceal our preparedness, since this knowledge is our greatest safeguard against Fascism.

While there is small danger that this book will send idealistic young men thronging to recruiting offices to help save democracy, it achieves its purpose. Most Americans are still inclined to take democracy for granted. Some so-called intellectuals, on the other hand, have been supinely accepting the advent of Fascism in America as an unavoidable future event without recognizing that government of this type is utterly foreign to the American way of thinking. Little has been done to set these mistaken individuals right.

It is true that Mumford occasionally exaggerates for the sake of emphasis and resorts to calling names. He does not, however, deal in smooth talk and glib labels, but sets forth his ideals honestly. If his adherence to the principles that made America a nation and his fervent desire to see it maintained as such are propaganda, then we should have more of it. F. D.

BECAUSE of its pertinence to the world's refugee problem, the American Geographical Society's new book, "White Settlers in the Tropics," is a most timely one. Science has overcome many health problems and made it possible for whites to live in the tropics, says the writer, A. Grenfell Price, University of Adelaide, Australia. But until much greater progress is made, the white man will be only a sojourner there, he adds. Under present conditions, the writer can see only ultimate absorption or expulsion of such colonists. COCHRAN OBTAINS SAFEGUARD FOR INTELLIGENCE UNIT

Forces Assurance in Debate That Appropriation Bill Clause Is Not Intended to Cripple It.

LIMIT ON FUND FOR USE IN WASHINGTON

St. Louisan Points Out Field Men Sometimes Are Called in for Extraordinary Inquiries.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — As champion of the special intelligence unit of the Treasury Department, Congressman John J. Cochran of St. Louis succeeded yesterday in having placed on record an assurance that the current appropriations bill for the Treasury and Post Office Departments has no intention of crippling the unit. This was despite a clause in the measure restricting the amount it may spend in the District of Columbia to $50,500 out of a total allotment of $942,000.

Cochran pointed out that the unit's Washington office is not only its national headquarters, but its regional branch for the District of Columbia, Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia and North Carolina. He argued during the debate that if the limitation were permitted to remain, perilous consequences might follow.

Gigantic frauds may develop in the next fiscal year, the St. Louisan declared, in which case he doubted whether, under the bill's language, the unit would be able to call on its field agents for service in Washington, or even ask the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to assign his men to assist, though they were being paid through some other payroll.

Reassured by Taber.

"My understanding," replied Congressman John Taber of New York, ranking Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee, "is that this $50,500 is the expense required for the strictly departmental activities of this unit. The amount required for the field force, whether the members operate in the District of Columbia or not, is not within this limitation."

"I want the record to show," retorted Cochran, "that the cost of operating this regional office is not included in the limitation of $50,500. Am I correct?"

"That is correct," answered Taber.

"The wording of the limitation is what I object to," Cochran persisted. "Frankly, I think it was a mistake to put it in the bill."

Taber explained that "the same language is carried all through the bill, with reference to every unit of the Government."

Cochran had previously urged that in future the allotment for the intelligence unit should figure as a separate item in appropriation bills.

The principal work of the unit, headed by Elmer L. Irey, is the investigation of tax frauds. Cochran pointed out that the Government recovers $30 for every $1 spent by the Intelligence Unit.

"During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1938," he related, "the unit, with a force of 230 agents, investigated numerous cases of alleged tax evasion and recommended the prosecution of 309 individuals. Of these, 109 were indicted, and 50 of those so far brought to trial were convicted. That these activities were profitable is shown by the recommendation of additional taxes and penalties aggregating $26,106,014."

Cites Capone Case.

According to Cochran, it was this unit which intervened when local and state courts had failed, and obtained convictions of income tax invasion against gangsters and racketeers, including Al Capone and his associates.

An outstanding case during the last fiscal year, he continued, was one in which the unit discovered the Government had been defrauded of $3,500,000 by a partnership prominent in the amusement field through concealment of income and false claims for losses on abandoned property and fictitious purchases of assets. The attorney for the partnership and several employes of the Internal Revenue Department, said Cochran, were convicted and sentenced to prison. Also during the year, he stated, the unit's investigation resulted in the discharge of 89 dishonest Government employes, of whom 20 were prosecuted and 18 convicted for violations of criminal statutes.

FILEWORTHINESS

Not all items in the average newspaper are fileworthy. But there are, on the average, about six items in each issue of a newspaper that I find necessary to clip and put into properly identified folders in my Newsclip Filing System. The average good magazine gives me about twice as many fileworthy clippings. It's important to be able to call such clippings back into use at one time or another, and it's here that an efficient, handy, simple, filing kit is essential. The H-J Newsclip Filing System is right down your alley. It solves the problem of how best to file clippings so they may be available in a few seconds when wanted for reference purposes. Send me only $1 (plus 25c for packing, handling and carriage) and I'll send you the H-J Newsclip Filing System, containing 100 folders, gummed labels, and full instructions on how to put away 5,000 fileworthy clippings. Milwaukee 'Best Governed City in the U. S.'

part of the tax levy for this purpose.

Earnings of the amortization fund, which now stands at about $8,000,000, were increased through the purchase of tax warrants yielding from 8 to 10 per cent, and its growth probably will be further hastened by contributions from the First Civic Foundation.

This is a trust fund that solicits gifts from citizens, first for debt reduction, then for educational, park expansion and other municipal purposes. As yet it is a tiny thing, but Milwaukeeans are hoping that it may be another acorn like the $5000 with which Benjamin Franklin established the famed Franklin Fund of Boston, half of which was used 100 years after its establishment for the foundation and endowment of a trade school, while the other half was allowed to continue earning compound interest against another division on its 200th anniversary.

There are two broad standards by which a city government may be measured: How much does it cost? And what does the taxpayer get for his money?

While Milwaukee offers much for a tax dollar, its municipal housekeeping is not cheap. Its present tax rate is $36.58 per $1000 of assessed valuation. St. Louis has a tax rate of only $27.70.

Among the 13 American cities with populations of more than 500,000, five—Chicago, Los Angeles, Boston, San Francisco and Buffalo—have an actual tax rate higher than that of Milwaukee. Weighted figures, based on real instead of assessed valuations, show that only Boston's is really higher. The same figures show only the Cleveland and San Francisco rate to be lower than that of St. Louis.

All comparisons, of course, should be interpreted broadly. Milwaukee and St. Louis differ in population, area and in the problems with which they must deal. The 1930 census, incidentally, puts Milwaukee's population at 578,249 against 821,960 for St. Louis. Although Milwaukee has almost doubled its area since the war, it is only 44 square miles, compared with St. Louis' 69.

$14.90 for Municipal Purposes.

Only $14.90 of the Milwaukee tax rate is set aside for municipal purposes. The School Board gets $11.64; the county, $9.68, and the State, 36 cents. St. Louis allocated $17.50 for city purposes; $8.70 for schools and $1.50 for the State. There is, of course, no separate county government in St. Louis. The tax figures indicate that Milwaukee might well imitate the St. Louis model. As a matter of fact, city and county consolidation plans were twice rejected by the Wisconsin Legislature in recent years.

Milwaukee's budget for the current year is roughly $34,000,000, a reduction of more than half a million from last year's figure. All of this money, with the exception of $3,320,000 for bond retirement and $1,135,125 for interest, will be devoted to city uses, including payments of more than $10,000,000 to the School Board, $1,239,806 to the Board of Industrial Education in charge of the Vocational School, and $504,220 to the Sewerage Commissioners in charge of the disposal plant. These are independent boards, but the city comptroller has the power to see to it that their expenditures do not exceed their share of the revenue.

Theoretically, Milwaukee collects its taxes before the money is spent. Therefore Comptroller William Wendt can keep the budget in balance simply by keeping departmental expenditures within budgetary allocations. Tax delinquencies, which pyramided during the depression, were a severe strain on this system. At one time Milwaukee's cash drawer was empty and it was unable to meet payrolls although it had plenty of frozen assets in the form of unpaid taxes.

Credit Good; "Baby Bonds."

In the end, this embarrassment was just another opportunity for resourcefulness. First of all, Milwaukee borrowed money. So good was its credit that the Mayor was able to get $1,000,000 from a New York bank, after a misunderstanding with local bankers, by simply putting in a telephone call. But it might not be so easy the next time, he thought. Besides, why pay interest?

In a message to the Council in December, 1932, he proposed that the city print its own "money" to meet the emergency. What he actually outlined was the issuance of "baby bonds" in denominations of $1, $5, $10 and $100. The two lighter denominations were to bear interest at 5 per cent. All were to be secured by choice improved real estate on which taxes were not more than one year in arrears. As these back taxes were paid, together with penalties ranging from 8 to 10 per cent, the money was to go into a special fund for the redemption of the bonds.

There was consternation when the plan was adopted. The bonds would be just so much printing press money, it was feared. Few persons wanted them. City employes, of course, had to accept them on pay day, first for all of their wages, later for part. Small merchants began to honor them. However, when the city announced that it was ready to redeem the first $100,000 worth, a double line formed all around the city hall. The paper at first was discounted as much as 20 per cent.

Treasurer's Opportunity.

The city treasurer saw an opportunity here, and soon Milwaukee was buying back its own obligations below par. In addition to its 5 per cent profit, represented by the difference between the interest on the bonds and that on the delinquent tax bills that were their collateral, the city was making the difference between their market and face values and saving interest, too.

However, this did not last long. By the beginning of 1935 the city treasurer was offering 99.9 and accrued interest for the four-year bonds but could find few sellers. In the end it became necessary to stop interest payments on several series before their holders would redeem them.

In all, Milwaukee issued about $14,000,000 worth of these "baby bonds." Some of these, however, were reissued, secured by new collateral, so that Mayor Hoan estimates that about $35,000,000 of city business was transacted with them. One can only guess in what volume they figured in private transactions. This reporter had no trouble in spending several of them at their face value. At the beginning of last December only $1,395,877 of the bonds were outstanding, mostly being held as gilt edge securities rather than used as currency.

Issuance of these bonds was a piece of financial wizardry. They solved the problem of payless paydays and they thawed out $14,000,000 and more of frozen municipal assets. On top of that, they earned a profit in excess of $3,000,000—not to mention the interest charges that would have piled up had Milwaukee borrowed money for all the transactions in which they were used.

However, they would have been little better than shin-plasters but for the city's scrupulous caution about their collateral and the vigorous drive of the Division of Tax Enforcement which has reduced delinquent taxes from a high of $26,000,000 to $10,000,000 at the present time. It is estimated that the city will not have to write off more than $2,000,000 in the end, and that no home will be lost in this collection campaign.

Problem of Relief.

One thing that is now keeping Milwaukee's tax rate up is relief. Technically, Milwaukee, like St. Louis, has no relief bill to pay except insofar as it elects to participate in the WPA and PWA program. However, the City of Milwaukee contributes a good share of each of its tax dollars to Milwaukee county, and while the city has reduced its budget by some $7,000,000 since the start of the depression, the county budget has been soaring because of relief.

Last year the county tax levy was $14,000,000, about twice as much as it was in 1928. Milwaukee pays about 75 per cent of the bill and gets about 87 per cent of the relief expenditures, said County Manager William L. Coffey. The county budget, he added, is millions of dollars more than the tax levy, but the difference is made up by Federal and State grants and a limited amount of short term borrowing. One of every five county residents is dependent on relief in some form and this costs the county upwards of $9,500,000 a year.

Undoubtedly, Milwaukee will have to pay its share of this bill for years, but otherwise it faces the future with a justified complacency. It has set its house in order. But how did Milwaukee do it?

'Twas Not Ever Thus.

It just is not true, although Milwaukeeans have come to believe it, that the city was always that way. It is not true that its solid German burghers, the old families that came out of New England and the later arriving Poles and Italians always insisted on good government. They may not tolerate corruption now, but once they shrugged it off as lightly as Big Bill Thompson's Chicagoans or Boss Tweed's New Yorkers.

In Dave Rose Milwaukee had a political overlord who could have given Tom Pendergast aces and spades. And Rose held sway as Milwaukee's mayor almost as long as Pendergast has been running things in Kansas City. Milwaukee's reputation was a stench throughout the land.

Between 1904 and 1906 the grand jury indicted more than 200 city and county officials. In Mayor Hoan's own words, Milwaukee "was in the grasp of the sinister and slimy hand of special interests, dive-keepers, crooked contractors, petty racketeers and political bosses. Public services were neglected and public buildings were falling to pieces. Every one of the city's funds was in the red."

Hoan and the Sawdust Trail.

The story of how Milwaukee "hit the sawdust trail" is the biography of Daniel Hoan, an offspring of Irish and pre-Revolutionary New England stock. He infected even opposition Aldermen with his enthusiasm for reform. His story has a political overtone almost from the beginning. Hoan was only a little boy in Waukesha, Wis., when his father, "Old Dan," the town radical, sheltered Albert R. Parsons, a fugitive after Chicago's Haymarket riot. Over the protest of "Old Dan," Parsons surrendered. He did not want to make trouble for the Hoans. He went to Chicago and was hanged. "Young Dan" never forgot Parsons, the labor editor.

His memory was in the back of Hoan's mind one blustery November night a score of years later when he listened to a political stump speaker in front of the Milwaukee City Hall. The speaker was a Populist. Hoan was impressed, but he joined the Socialists.

Meanwhile, he had not had an easy time of it. At 14, with his father dead, he found himself the head of a little family. He worked as a waiter and a cook, but he managed at the same time to squeeze two years of school into one.

He was 21 and already a party member when he went to Madison and the University of Wisconsin. There he completed the entire high school and college courses in four years and was graduated as president of his class. He was "a bluff old brother of the bowl," who could tell a good story and had distinguished himself as a debater, the university year book reported, but it failed to mention that he was lost to the Badger football team because its manager did not want to lose so good a cook in his fraternity house.

From Madison to Chicago.

From Madison Hoan went to Chicago to accept a $6-a-week job in a law office and to enroll in a night law school. On finishing his course, he passed both the Illinois and the Wisconsin bar examinations. He had begun to build up a practice in Chicago, taking special interest in labor cases, when Victor Berger, the grand old man of Wisconsin Socialism, persuaded him to return to Milwaukee in 1908 as an active party worker.

Then, in 1910, the Socialists asked him to run for City Attorney. Hoan did not like the idea of being abused in a political campaign. He wanted to stick to his law practice. But 1910 was a year that Milwaukeeans were to remember. It was the year that the worm turned. The Democratic machine had a new mayoral candidate, but the voters had made up their minds to "throw the rascals out." And instead of a Republican, they sent Socialist Emil Seidel to the Mayor's office. His ticket won all along the line.

The old-line bosses rushed to Madison with a non-partisan election measure that forced the Socialist party to buck the combined strength of the Republicans and the Democrats. The system is still being followed in Milwaukee. Long since it has had the effect of breaking up the old party machines, but in 1912 it was enough to defeat Seidel, even though he polled more votes than in 1910. Hoan, however, escaped Seidel's fate, since, as City Attorney, he had been elected for four years.

The Cleanup Begins.

He took to his new job with the same gusto that Tom Dewey later displayed in New York. He began at once to clean up the mess that was Milwaukee. He started with the electric company, which operated both the street car and the power and light systems. It had been ignoring franchise clauses that obliged it to pave part of the streets, to sprinkle them and to remove snow. Hoan had to go to court, but he won his case and saved the city between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000.

He won reductions in telephone and light rates and in the streetcar fare, and compelled the railroads to pay 80 per cent of the cost of eliminating dangerous grade crossings. At the same time, he spurred an investigation of city hall affairs until "Have you been indicted yet?" replaced "How do you do?" as a greeting in the building.

In 1914 the Fusionists again won the mayoralty, electing Gerhard A. Bading, later Minister to Ecuador. However, Hoan escaped the general Socialist defeat, being re-elected by 354 votes. That was enough to cause his party to draft him for Mayor two years later.

"The fang of the viper is ready to suck Milwaukee's life blood. Socialism with all its heresies and un-American ideas is knocking at the door," Bading proclaimed, but, gallant paladin that he was, he promised "never again to allow the Red flag to replace the Stars and Stripes on the flagpole of the City Hall."

"The main issue of this campaign is whether the flag of the streetcar company will float over the City Hall instead of the Stars and Stripes," countered Hoan.

Increasingly Successful.

He was not often oratorical. Mostly he talked in his earthy way about sidewalks and sewers, garbage collection and paving. He did not quote from Marx and Engels. Indeed, prominent Socialists have wondered whether he ever read their sacred two. The late Morris Hillquit with sophisticated irony once described him as a "sewer Socialist."

That was the manner of man Milwaukee wanted. Hoan was elected by only 1477 votes, but in every election since then, with the exception of 1936, his margin has increased almost by geometric proportion.

Mayor Hoan often has been honored in the United States and in Europe, too, but he still lives very simply on the unfashionable West Side with his wife, who was Agnes Magner of Chicago. Their two children, a boy and a girl, are in college.

Hoan's office as much as anything explains the man. It is big and simple. It is wide open and has no back door through which the Mayor may escape unwelcome callers. There are none of the ankle-deep rugs, leather chairs and rich mahogany desks that make the office of Chicago's Mayor Kelly, for example, look like a Hollywood set.

Hoan has a big varnished yellow table in his office and behind it a yellow rolltop desk of the Gen. Grant period. On the desk is a bad model of the liner Milwaukee. On the walls are a portrait of the Mayor, an oil of a Hungarian peasant looking dolefully at the few coins received for his corn crop, and there are two or three photographs and a map of the city.

"If you mean by Socialism that we have a right by the use of the ballot to change bad conditions, then I am a Socialist. Then I am a radical, and glory in it," he said, sitting between desk and table.

Believer in Good Government.

What Hoan really believes in is good city government. He has placed all his hopes for the future of the country in the cities. He would rather be Mayor of Milwaukee than Governor of Wisconsin. He has refused to run for the United States Senate. He believes his present job is more important. Milwaukee's budget is larger than those of 36 states, he points out.

"It is through their city officials that people come most intimately in touch with the law," he said. "If they can't respect authority on that plane, they will not do so on a higher one. If they believe the Mayor and the Aldermen are crooks, they are likely to believe that the President and the Senators are crooks on a bigger scale.

"And if the Mayors really are crooks, the people are likely to be right in their belief. More and more our national parties depend for success on local organizations. If that local support comes from rotten city machines, then the rot sooner or later will spread to the top."

Hoan is convinced that honest city government can never be established by a reformer who seeks to win control of an old-line machine to reform it. The idea that this could be done he blames for the tragic failure of Tom Johnson in Cleveland. Johnson worked wonders, but as soon as he died public affairs fell back into the old hands.

Johnson failed because he did not build an organization to carry on. You need a machine for good government as well as for bad, Hoan believes, but it must be a different machine, with different support. Milwaukee and Cincinnati, he feels, have built such machines. Cincinnati has the Charter League and Milwaukee has the Farm-Labor Progressive Federation.

"We Need Campaign Funds."

"We need campaign funds," Hoan explained. "It cost us only $12,000 to run a complete ticket, including 27 aldermanic candidates, two years ago. We got that money largely through the regular dues of 35 cents a month paid by the federation members. I contribute $90 a month out of my salary of $12,300, and, incidentally, the city allows me nothing extra for expenses. Other elected officials make proportionate contributions, but we accept nothing from city employes.

"More important than dues is the work done by our members. They organize meetings, distribute circulars and do all the chores of a campaign without pay. That's why we don't need contributions from the utilities and the banks.

"We have organized the common people, the ordinary citizens who want good government. Because of that organization we have accomplished more in the way of genuine governmental improvement than has any other city in the world in so short a time. Because of that organization we can hope, in spite of an antiquated charter, in the years to come to keep our government good."

$90,000 GIVEN SO FAR TO SYMPHONY FUND

Total Sought Is $151,000—Mrs. Becker Urges More Widespread Support.

Contributions aggregating $5000 in the last four days have brought the total to $90,000 in the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's sixtieth anniversary maintenance fund campaign for $151,000.

More than $3000 has been received from contributors in the new classification, "Friends of the Orchestra," which is for donations up to $10. Most of these contributions have been received unsolicited at the campaign headquarters in Hotel Mayfair.

Mrs. William Dee Becker, head of the Women's Division, made an appeal yesterday for more widespread participation in support of the orchestra.

"To maintain this great orchestra in the future," she declared, "it is necessary to increase the number of contributors to the maintenance fund. The day of depending upon a few givers has passed. The orchestra is a possession of all the people. It is no longer for the enjoyment of a handful of individuals."

The cost of maintaining the orchestra next season has been set at $265,000, of which it has been estimated about $150,000 will be obtained in season ticket sales and box office receipts. The difference, plus an accumulated deficit of $36,000, is the goal in the current campaign.

The sixtieth anniversary season will include, popular, student, high school and tour concerts and the annual Ballet Russe engagements.

DETROIT ATTORNEY TO TALK HERE ON JUDICIAL SELECTION

Former President of Michigan Bar to Address St. Louis Association on Program in His State.

George E. Brand of Detroit, former president of the Detroit Bar Association and of the Michigan Bar Association, will discuss judicial selection and tenure at a meeting of the St. Louis Bar Association March 6 at 8:15 p. m. at Hotel Chase.

Brand is author of an article in the current issue of the American Judicature Society Journal, discussing work of the Michigan State Bar for judicial appointment. The St. Louis Bar Association, with other Missouri Bar groups, is sponsoring a proposal for an amendment to the State Constitution, designed to remove political influence in selection of Judges. The plan is for initial appointment of Judges by the Governor from lists of nominees submitted by non-partisan judicial commissions.

Ingham D. Hook of Kansas City, president of the Missouri Bar Association, is expected to speak also at the meeting.

10,000 AZALEA BLOOMS FOR ARENA FLOWER SHOW

Garden, Surrounding Grecian Temple, Will Be Central Display March 18-26.

A garden of 10,000 azalea blooms, surrounding a Grecian temple, will be the central display in this year's Greater St. Louis Flower and Garden Show, to be held in the Arena March 18-26, it was announced yesterday.

About 200 of the shrubs, each of which will bear about 100 flowers, are being forced in greenhouses to provide the display. The plants normally bloom in May in this climate.

The flowers will be arranged in a natural garden scene before the temple, with a lawn and rhododendrons for contrasting effects. The display will occupy about 2000 square feet.

CIVIC MUSIC LEAGUE DRIVE

Membership Campaign to Last From March 13 to 27.

The annual campaign for members by the Civic Music League will start on March 13 and continue until March 27, it was announced yesterday. Chairmen of the campaign are Louis F. Bunte and Martha Shutt.

Next year will be the league's sixteenth season. It is a non-profit organization. The top price is $5 for the season's five concerts, if tickets are bought in advance.

THOMAS MANN TO SPEAK HERE

Will Address Liberal Forum of Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A. March 19.

Thomas Mann, noted German author now in exile, will speak before the Liberal Forum of the Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A., March 19, on "The Coming Victory of Democracy."

F. A. Middlebush, president of the University of Missouri, will introduce the speaker.

Career of Jesse and Frank James Described by Ex-Senator Hawes as They Were, Not as Shown in Movie

'Young Gangsters,' He Calls Them, Declaring It Undesirable for Youth 'to Accept Myth for Actuality.'

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25. — The careers of Jesse James and Frank James, Missouri bandits of the 70s, were reviewed for the Missouri Society tonight by former United States Senator Harry B. Hawes.

Hawes referred to the current "Jesse James" film as "intense and interesting, but historically inaccurate." It would be undesirable, he said, to permit the youth of today "to accept the myth for the actuality."

He said the James brothers had some attractive traits, that there was an atmosphere of romance about some of their exploits, and that their careers were a continuation of the lawlessness of border and guerrilla warfare. Yet it must be remembered, he said, that "they did murder ruthlessly, rob and steal, burn and destroy property, run off horses and cattle." As to the defense of their wartime origin, Hawes recalled that tens of thousands of the soldiers of the Confederacy returned to surroundings equally chaotic, but settled down to work as law-abiding citizens. "So while we may sympathize," he said, "we should not exceedingly glorify their actions."

Of three books in the Congressional Library, telling the story of the Jameses, Hawes found the latest, that written by the late Robertus Love in 1926, to be the least partisan and the best balanced. He told of the border warfare of the '50s, furnishing the atmosphere in which the James brothers were reared, and of the "scourge of the border," William Charles Quantrell, under whom both the brothers served in fighting where no prisoners were taken, because there were no prisons to put them in.

Hanged by "Regulators."

Following Love's narrative in the main, Hawes told of the early days of Jesse and Frank James, sons of a Baptist preacher. Their father died, and their mother married Dr. Reuben Samuel, who was hanged from a tree by local "regulators," but was cut down by his wife in time to save his life.

Regulators whipped Jesse James with a rope-end, but failed to curb his lawless propensities. After the war, the James boys and their associates, termed by Hawes "young gangsters," turned to bank robbery. In February, 1866, they took $60,000 from a bank at Liberty, Mo. Bank robberies at Lexington, Savannah and Richmond, Mo., followed, eight deaths resulting from the Richmond robbery. Bank robberies in Kentucky and Iowa followed.

Where Fact and Fiction Clash.

This is contrary to the fictionized film story, which has the James boys beginning their career of crime by a train robbery, which is pictured as resulting from the brutal tactics of railroad land agents. Their first train robbery, as related by Hawes, took place in 1873, after they had been robbing banks for seven years. The long pursuit of the outlaws by the Pinkerton Detective Agency was described.

Seventeen major crimes were listed by the speaker as the authenticated work of the James brothers and their comrades, the Youngers. The list ended with the disastrous raid on Northfield, Minn., in 1876, resulting in the capture and imprisonment of the Youngers. The speaker continued:

"At long intervals, the James boys visited their mother. The Pinkerton operatives found this out, and finally there came a scene that the film carried with some accuracy. Surrounding the home of Mrs. Samuel, the Pinkertons first threw lighted balls of cotton; and then a bomb which blew off the right forearm of Mrs. Samuel. One of the small boys had his side pierced; little Archie died before dawn; Mrs. Samuel's arm was amputated; the little Negro servant was wounded.

"Inflamed, the people of Clay County called the bombing of the Samuel home 'the crime of the century'; they were indignant; public sympathy began to favor the James boys."

Killing of Jesse James.

In a believe-it-or-not strain, Hawes repeated stories of Jesse James' generosity, his "honesty" in paying debts that he could have avoided, and the apparent marital fidelity of both James brothers. Of the killing of Jesse in St. Joseph, April 3, 1822, he related:

"Jesse James was killed in his own home by Bob and Charley Ford. These two men had been members of the gang. They were welcome in the household. The motive was the $10,000 reward, alive or dead. The Fords, as a matter of fact, received only a small portion of the big reward; the rest was divided between officials who had connived at the killing.

"Jesse unbuckled his belt, laid two revolvers—one a Colt, the other a Smith & Wesson—on the bed, mounted a chair, with a dusting brush in hand; with his back to the Ford boys, he was dusting and rehanging a picture. Mrs. James had left the room.

"Both Ford boys drew their guns. Bob, quicker than Charley, fired one shot from the Colt, which struck near the base of Jesse's skull and came out through the forehead.

Some Press Comment.

"After Jesse James' death, some of the headlines of the papers of the day are interesting: The St. Joseph Gazette: 'Jesse, By Jehovah!'; St. Joseph Evening News: 'Judgment for Jesse'; Kansas City Journal: 'Good-bye Jesse!'

"The Kansas City Times stated: 'Frank James might find a safe asylum in either the Herald office of St. Joseph or the Post-Dispatch office at St. Louis. These papers mourn the loss of his brother Jesse as they have never mourned the loss of any of Missouri's great men.'

"The Post-Dispatch replied: 'It becomes our solemn duty to inform you (Times) that you utter a malicious and vicious and utterly indefensible lie when you say this paper has mourned the loss of Jesse James,' etc.

"The Post-Dispatch later commented: 'We have never ceased to believe that (Gov.) Crittenden inflicted more disgrace on the State by the manner in which he brought about the murder of James than the bandit could if he had been left to continue his career. His death was a blessing, but the manner of his taking-off was a reproach upon our civilization.'

"And then the Post-Dispatch pointed to the support of its position by the New York Sun, World, Telegraph, Graphic and Tribune, the Chicago Inter-Ocean and News, the Cincinnati Enquirer, the Louisville Courier-Journal and other great national dailies. Even Carl Schurz wrote in similar vein in the New York Evening Post."

Violent Death of Fords.

The speaker recounted the violent deaths of the Fords and repeated the ballad denouncing "the dirty little coward that shot Mr. Howard," the alias under which Jesse lived in St. Joseph. He then told of the surrender, trial and acquittal of Frank James in 1882-'83.

Frank R. O'Neil, reporter of the Missouri Republican, later the St. Louis Republic, was instrumental in bringing about the surrender of James at Gov. Crittenden's office, Oct. 5, 1882. Maj. John Edwards of Sedalia, with O'Neil, accompanied the fugitive and introduced him to the Governor, whereupon James handed over his weapons.

A long interview with James, given to O'Neil, was printed by the Republican under the heading, "He Came In." O'Neil, the speaker related, was later a news and business executive of the Post-Dispatch. In 1902 O'Neil went to Mexico and induced a fugitive key man of the House of Delegates boodle combine to return to St. Louis and give evidence on which others were convicted of bribery.

Trial of Frank James.

Frank James was tried at Gallatin, Mo., on a murder charge incident to a train robbery. The trial was a contest of lawyers rather than of testimony. William H. Wallace, later Kansas City judge and prohibition advocate, was the eloquent prosecutor; defense lawyers were John F. Philips, later Federal Judge; Congressmen John M. Glover and Joshua W. Alexander, and Charles P. Johnson, noted criminal lawyer.

The chief issue of fact was Frank James' presence in the vicinity before and after the robbery. A witness who "nearly ruined the defense," Hawes said, was a clergyman who told of talking with Frank James and remembered particularly his quoting passages from Shakespeare. It was shown that Frank was fond of reading and quoting the bard.

Hawes quoted passages from the speeches of Wallace for the prosecution and Johnson for the defense. Wallace, bringing in the name of the dead Jesse James, pronounced a "glad farewell" to the "foulest blot on the State's bright escutcheon." In discussing the Shakespeare incident, Wallace said: "To say that it is nothing uncommon for a train robber to go through the land spouting Shakespeare is preposterous." Johnson praised the defendant for "unwavering adherence to a great revolutionary cause."

After the Acquittal.

Frank James was acquitted and moved to St. Louis, where he was employed as doorkeeper in the Standard Theater, Ed Butler's burlesque house, and as a starter at the Fairgrounds racetrack. Hawes told of knowing James at the track and found him "pleasant, though taciturn"—he would never talk at length of the old days.

The recital ended with an account of the pardon and later lives of the Youngers. Hawes told of his own possession of two revolvers which he believes to have been owned and carried by Jesse James. The Chief of Police of Excelsior Springs, Mo., obtained them from Jesse James Jr., who said his father had carried them. They are a Colt .45 and a Smith & Wesson.

Business Appeasement Drive of Government Is Followed by Improvement in Stock Prices

Market Has Best Rise Since Nov. 9 on Eve of Secretary Hopkins' Speech—Average up Only .56 of a Point for Week.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Heavy overnight buying orders in the stock market, apparently inspired by another Government-business peace gesture by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins in his Des Moines speech, brought an upward sprint in today's early prices of 1 to more than 2 points.

Profit taking quickly stemmed the rising tide, however, and, despite late support for steels and motors, closing quotations were well under their best for the day.

In the opening purchasing burst blocks of 1000 to 5000 shares changed hands with the ticker tape, for the first time in a month, falling a minute behind floor transactions. The pace slowed subsequently, but transfers of 783,600 shares compared with 409,110 a week ago and were the largest for any Saturday of the year to date.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .4 of a point at 51.2, with the utility composite again edging into new high territory since September, 1937. On the week the average for 60 issues was ahead .5 of a point.

The Dow-Jones average of 65 stocks at 49.63 was .46 of a point higher for the day and .56 of a point higher for the week.

More Evidence Awaited.

The fact the market lost some of its rising stamina before the finish of the short session was thought to have reflected partly the probability the Hopkins address last night may have been discounted to some extent in Friday's upswing which, on average, amounted to 1.2 points, the widest advance since Nov. 9, last.

In addition, Wall street seemingly inclined to keep its buying powder dry pending more concrete evidence the administration would follow through on the announced Hopkins program for greater Government co-operation with industry.

Word of the President's letters to AFL and CIO chieftains, asking for a labor truce as an aid to recovery, did not come until after the close.

Among leading stocks ahead in the two-hour proceedings were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, North American, Detroit Edison, U. S Rubber, Anaconda, American Can, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Allied Chemical, Philip Morris and U. S. Gypsum.

Recently buoyant aircrafts took a rest on the declining side. Off as much as a point or so were Douglas, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Sperry and Boeing.

Bonds Emulate Stocks.

Bonds emulated stocks, with secondary rails favored. Commodities were narrow. Wheat at Chicago was up ¼ to ⅝ of a cent a bushel and corn unchanged to ⅛ higher. Cotton gained 5 to 40 cents a bale. Sterling and the French franc were a shade improved in terms of the dollar.

The day's news quota was fairly encouraging. Steel operations next week are expected to at least hold the present rate and gradual expansion was looked for in coming months. President Knudsen of General Motors sounded a hopeful note in his comments on prospects for mounting motor sales. Propping the rails were figures of the first 18 reporting roads disclosing January net operating income was up 92.3 per cent over the same 1938 month.

The stock market experienced its worst day of the week on Monday, with light selling attributed mainly to a renewal of foreign worries, dropping leaders substantially. There was a general price stalemate Tuesday and Thursday after the Washington's birthday holiday, but tension over European affairs appeared to have lessened appreciably.

Friday's brisk run-up was credited to optimistic anticipation of what Secretary Hopkins would say on top of Secretary Morgenthau's disclosure no heavier taxes were contemplated this year and the President's previous friendly nod to business.

Copper Cartel Action.

Reduction by the foreign copper cartel of production allowables to 95 per cent of standard tonnages from 100 per cent failed to stimulate very much stocks in this division. Traders, it was said, had hoped for a larger cut in view of the January statistics which showed a falling off in foreign consumption, and the weakness of the foreign price structure.

Strikes which cut automobile production at midweek made the motor shares a bit shaky at one time.

A drop in the steel operations rate to 53.7 per cent of capacity from 54.8 per cent and continued absence of heavy orders from the automotive industry were responsible for early indifference among the steels which participated, however, in the later rally.

Additional tire companies joined in the price increase announced last week and rubber stocks were bid up a bit. A sharp increase in gasoline supplies upset the oils a little.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY SLACKENS FURTHER

Declines in Steel Mill Operations, Auto Output and Car Loadings.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Industrial operations slackened further this week.

The persistent downtrend in business activity that started last December was extended by declines in steel mill operations, automobile production, residential building and freight carloadings. The last three dropped into new low ground for the year after seasonal adjustment.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index of industrial activity dipped to 87.7 from 88.4 the week before and compared with 69.3 in the like period last year. The latest figure was 7 per cent under the peak three months ago, and a new 1939 bottom.

Consumer goods lines showed a moderate recovery, both cotton manufacturing and electric power output bettering the normal seasonal trend.

What Index Shows.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components based on latest available data and with 1929-30 as 100, compared as follows:

	Latest Wk.	Prev. Wk.	Yr. Ago
Composite Index (L)	87.7	88.4	69.3
Automobile Prod. (L)	76.4	80.1	54.9
Steel Mill Act.	72.0	73.5	39.3
Cotton Mfg. Act.	106.2	104.1	82.7
Electric Pw. Prod.	116.4	115.5	108.0
Residential Bldg. (L.)	89.1	91.0	44.5
Total Carloadings	63.0	63.7	58.2

(L) New 1939 low.

Although the drop in total freight shipments resulted largely from a sharp contraction in coal movement, analysts pointed out miscellaneous freight—the principal industrial classification—has been on the toboggan for weeks. From its peak last December, this barometer has tumbled 15 per cent after seasonal allowances.

Heavy industry received several important setbacks. Lead stocks advanced unexpectedly during January. Copper inventories also increased, the foreign picture becoming sufficiently cloudy to cause the European cartel to cut export allowables 5 per cent to 95 per cent of quotas.

Steel Scrap Prices Rise.

On the more favorable side, steel scrap prices in leading centers moved up to the highest levels in a year and a half, the Iron Age composite hitting $15.08. The steel trade hailed this as an indication there might soon be pressure for higher prices. Barbed wire was marked up slightly during the week and a short time ago pipes were advanced.

Another bright augury was the announcement that a large oil company was contracting for $40,000,000 in "new" money for expansion purposes. This amount of new funds has not been raised in many months.

Many official assurances to business confidence were launched during the week. The President said no new taxes were likely. Federal Reserve Chairman Eccles urged the removal of deterrents to private investment. Treasury Secretary Morgenthau echoed the same sentiments.

Chicago Stocks Active, Higher.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25. — Stocks climbed major fractions to a point in a strong session today. Transactions totaled 23,000 in the short two-hour market compared with 31,000 in yesterday's full session. Trades were made in 90 issues, 53 closing higher than yesterday's finish, 11 fractions lower and 26 unchanged.

Odd-Lot Stock Trade.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The Securities Commission reported today these transactions by customers with odd-lot dealers or specialists on the New York Stock Exchange for Feb. 24: 4044 purchases involving 112,761 shares, 5885 sales involving 151,467 shares.

COMMODITY PRICES HIGHER FOR WEEK

Demand for Both Industrial and Farm Staples Sharper.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Commodity prices edged forward this week as demand for both industrial and farm staples sharpened.

The upturn was moderate, however, because some important items declined heavily.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale spot commodity prices advanced to 66.34 from 66.29 the week before and compared with 71.28 last year.

Although business activity continued to slide, industrial raw materials were buoyant. Steel scrap moved up to the highest levels since October, 1937, as bids were advanced in the Chicago area. Tin also felt the tug of rising demand.

Raw Silk Advances.

Lumber was marked up substantially with demand from building supply concerns running heavier than production. Residential construction dipped fractionally, but remained close to the nine-year high established as 1938 ended. Linseed oil and rubber climbed a little, while turpentine slipped back.

Textiles followed diametrically opposite courses, silk soaring to a two-year peak and cotton cloth slumping to the lowest levels in several years.

A tight supply and demand situation in the raw material boosted silk. Cotton cloth, on the other hand, has met slack demand from dealers partly because of the oversupply of raw fiber evidenced by the 11,000,000 bales controlled by the Government.

Grains pointed up for the second week, led by corn, wheat and oats. Unfavorable weather reports were said to account for most of the improvement. Rye weakened somewhat, as did cotton.

Livestock was quiet. The only net change on the week was turned in by hogs, which managed a small gain. The food price index gave ground slightly as heavily-weighted eggs nose-dived. Sugar, cocoa and lard all moved ahead.

EXPORT COPPER 10.07C AT THE CLOSE OF WEEK

Domestic Price Unchanged — Cartel Cuts Quota to Aid Prices.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The foreign copper cartel answered lagging demand and a wide spread between the price of export and American copper with announcement this past week of a reduction in output of 5 per cent to 95 per cent, effective March 1. All major producers, except those in the United States, are members of the cartel.

Immediate reaction was a withdrawal of buyers abroad and a mark-down in quotations, but good inquiry developed late in the week. Saturday export copper was quoted at 10.07 cents a pound, which compared with the week's low of 9.94.

Commenting on the cartel move, a leading London analyst of red metal trends declared: "Unless production is reduced further, it would seem impossible to keep the American price at 11.25 cents."

Meantime domestic copper demand remained largely in the formative stage at unchanged prices. Concrete evidence that fabricator inventories are steadily declining was revealed in January, estimates of fabricator shipments of 59,000 tons, while deliveries by producers to all customers totaled 51,000. The balance presumably came out of inventories, the trade said.

Good demand appeared for lead for the second week although action of the London market prevented restoration of the recent 10-pint price slash. Quotations continued at 4.75 cents a pound.

Zinc was quiet at 4.50 cents, East St. Louis.

January steel consumption improved, but the ingot production rate tapered slightly. Steel scrap was steady and recent mill purchases indicated a better attitude toward spring business.

LOCAL STOCKS MAINLY DOWN AT WEEK'S CLOSE

Wagner Electric Regains Lost Ground and Closes at Advance.

Losses predominated in the St. Louis Stock Exchange at the close of a rather quiet week's trade, a holiday at midweek cut into aggregate turnover. Wagner Electric was the most active issue and closed fractionally higher at 30 following decline to 28. Griesedieck-Western was higher.

Hamilton-Brown, Dr. Pepper and St. Louis Car lost fractions. International Shoe had downward range of over 2 points, recovering in part. Some issues were unchanged.

DEMAND BY TRADE INTEREST FACTOR IN COTTON UPTURN

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—Aggressive demand by trade interests for March, May and July options lifted cotton futures to final gains of 1 to 8 points today.

Highlights of the day's dealings were Wall Street buying on the advance and covering by short interests who apparently held to the belief loan stocks of cotton may not be released before old-crop deliveries expired.

Much of ring activity was based on market speculation over what measure Washington may choose to solve cotton problems. Traders followed closely testimony before a Senate Agriculture Committee today on the Smith proposal for subsidizing farmers to sell cotton rather than turning it over to the Government for a loan.

Offerings of the July contract by Southern mill accounts—believed to represent hedges against stocks of cotton goods—were readily taken in by spot dealers and other mill interests.

The recent tendency for old crop deliveries to hold firm in relation to new crop months was maintained and May touched a new high for the present move at 8.18 cents.

Numerous switches into forward options were worked, but liquidation in March was light, as holders of long contracts appeared reluctant to sell at present levels.

Brokers found scant encouragement in news of better textile turnover in Worth street, pointing out prices had been pared as much as ½ cent a yard to bring out the buying.

Exports today, 8676 bales; season so far, 2,566,457; port receipts, 4123; port stocks, 2,607,534.

SHORT COVERING BRINGS RISE IN WHEAT AT CLOSE

Advance in Securities and Tone of Hopkin's Speech Credited With Stirring Previous Sellers to Buy at Week-end.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 25.—In the sharpest price movement since Monday, wheat values advanced as much as ⅝c during the final hour today on purchasing attributed to shorts.

The advancing stock market and the tone of the Hopkins speech in Iowa, together with a suggestion for an increase in the public debt limit, were factors in the background credited with stirring some previous sellers to cover their operations with buying orders. Inflation gossip was mentioned by trade commentators for the first time in months as a possible cause of some support evident in the wheat pit recently.

Wheat closed ¼@⅝c higher than yesterday, May 68⅞@69c, July 69@¼c. Corn, however, was unchanged to ⅛c up, May 49½@⅝c, July 50¾@⅝c; oats unchanged to ¼c up; rye ⅝c higher and lard unchanged.

Prior to the late advance wheat trade was very dull. Some selling was based on receipt of moisture in the grain belt and promise of more, together with the unchanged to ⅜ lower close at Liverpool, following reports of heavy rains in Australia and Russia.

The Government announced 86,900,000 bushels of wheat and flour were sold for export from July 1 to Feb. 20, indicating approximately 8,000,000 bushels have been disposed of during the past month. The report indicated approximately 66,000,000 bushels have been exported, leaving contracts for 20,900,000 bushels unfilled.

The trade heard fresh rumors that Germany has bartered for substantial quantities of Argentine wheat, but this could not be confirmed. Such a circumstance was regarded, however, as a possible explanation for failure of Argentina to press her new wheat aggressively on the world market.

Steady corn prices reflected offsetting developments in the trade. Argentine prices closed ⅝@1c higher and the export situation was reported improved, but no new business could be confirmed. Chicago receipts increased to 111 cars while bookings totaled 60,000 bushels. Cash prices were unchanged to ½c lower. Approximately 7,000,000 bushels were sealed under loans in the week ended Thursday, bringing the total to 157,117,073.

Country reports indicated elevators were reselling oats to farmers at prices 2 to 3 cents over terminal bids. The same situation was reported in connection with corn. Rye followed wheat.

Lard trading was quiet, with traders awaiting March delivery notices.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Feb. 25.—Narrow ranges marked wheat today.

Liverpool wheat closed unchanged to ⅜d lower after opening unchanged to ¼d lower.

Winnipeg opened unchanged and closed ⅛@¼c up.

Argentine wheat and corn began unchanged. At the close wheat was unchanged and corn ¾@1c higher.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

In the cash grain market Saturday, wheat was steady. Offerings were small and cleared quickly at no change in the basis. The supply consisted mainly of no tonnage grain. The outlet was supplied by elevator and outside order buyers. Corn was unchanged. Offerings were light and with a fair demand a fair clearance was made. Elevator and outside order buyers showed niterest. Premiums were unchanged from Friday, with No. 2 yellow selling ¼c under the May delivery and No. 4 white at the May figure. Oats were 1c higher. The only car on sale was taken by a feed buyer. Inquiry was good.

FLIGHT OF MONEY FROM AMSTERDAM CONTINUES RAPID

Fear for European Peace by Owners of the Liquid Capital That Has Been on Move Seeking Haven Suggested.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—The flow of money out of Amsterdam—one of the few surviving "free" markets for capital trading—continued with a rush last week.

The Netherlands guilder, reflecting this movement of funds, broke more than ½ cent in terms of the dollar, plunging through the low mark established during the Munich crisis last September to the lowest since Oct. 5, 1936.

Countering weakness of the Dutch money were gains in the English pound and French franc. Although the advances were small, they were sufficient to establish the currencies at the highest prices thus far in the year.

The guilder continued the six-weeks decline in terms of the dollar with another heavy loss in today's dealings, dropping .08 of a cent.

As the guilders declined, sterling and the French franc have quietly worked up to peak prices for the year thus far. The pound advanced ¼ of a cent and the franc .00 1-16 of a cent. A loss of 0.1 of a cent in the belga was balanced by a gain of as much in the Swiss franc.

The Federal Reserve Bank reported $4,646,000 in gold was engaged in England and $225,000 in Holland for shipment here.

The belga took a downward course as the foreign exchange market waited for the little country to iron out Cabinet difficulties. Formation of a new Cabinet in midweek appeared to accentuate pressure on Belgian money in relation to other currencies. Some observers regarded the new set-up as a temporary makeshift. The Swiss franc was moderately ahead on the week.

A partial explanation for the drop in the guilder was found, according to bankers, in preparation for payment for the new City of Montreal issue, which is payable in guilders and dollars. Many of the money experts, however, declared that undermining the guilder at bottom were fears for European peace by owners of the great volume of liquid capital that has been on the move seeking a haven.

Gold headed for America at a faster clip. Total engagements for the week through Friday were $22,481,000, the Federal Reserve Bank reported against $17,525,000 in the same part of last week. England again supplied the bulk of the yellow metal.

Argentine Crop Estimate.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—The Department of Agriculture received a prediction today that the Argentine wheat crop for 1939 would total approximately 320,000,000 bushels.

This estimate, made by the Argentine Government, represented an increase of about 4,000,000 bushels over a previous estimate issued last December. Such a crop would be second only to the all-time record of 349,000,000 bushels produced in 1929. Last year's crop, which was damaged by unfavorable weather, amounted to only 185,000,000 bushels.

The department estimated Argentina would have 229,000,000 bushels available for export this year.

BROAD BOND MARKET RISE AT WEEK-END

Railroad Issues Lead, Showing Gains of More Than Point.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.—A broad rise in the bond market today followed Secretary Hopkins' Iowa speech.

Rails, mentioned by the Commerce Department head as one of the chief industrial sectors needing revival stimulus, led the upturn and some finished with gains of more than a point.

The upswing carried over from the preceding session and was accompanied by the heaviest week-end dealings since Dec. 31.

Utilities and industrials fell in line with the rails. The U. S. Treasury list, however, was laggard since the administration statements turning thumbs down on tax increases apparently pointed to additional heavy Government borrowing. Some bond men expressed disappointment because the spokesmen had skipped mention of budget balancing.

Transactions totaled $4,612,000 against $3,755,500 last Saturday. The Associated Press composite price of 20 rail bonds was up .3 at 59.8 while 10 industrials gained an average of .2 at 99.8, the highest this year.

Abitibi Paper 5s jumped more than 4 points but most foreign loans held within a fractional range.

Alleghany 5s of 1949 were up 3 at 71. Closing a point or more higher were Central Pacific first 4s at 74½, New York Central 5s at 62¾, Southern Railway 4s at 56 and Nickel Plate 5½s at 63½. Fractionally up were Great Northern 4s of 1946, Bethlehem Steel 3½s, Youngstown Sheet & Tube 4s and International Hydro Electric 6s.

There were no major corporate bond offerings during the period, but it was announced Texas Corporation was planning sale of a new $40,000,000 issue of 20-year 3 per cent debentures for development of the company's business here and abroad, the first proposal for the raising of strictly new capital by a large borrower in several months. Most offerings the past year or so have been refunding operations for the replacing of high coupon bonds with new securities bearing lower interest rates.

Long-term United States Government issues, many of which already were at new highs for a year or more, added new small gains ranging to 3-32 of a point. Intermediate term Federals edged slightly upward, most such maturities adding 1-32 to 2-32. Short-term Treasury notes were slightly easier, but banking circles said the shading was a special situation growing out of proximity of new Treasury financing, to be announced during the coming week.

Free Union of Democracies Proposed by C. K. Streit

al sovereignty in the democracies. Unlike armament and alliance policies, Union leads no crusade against autocracies abroad, to no attempt to end war by war, or make the world safe for democracy by conquering foreign dictatorship. Union is no religion for tearing the mote from a brother's eye—and the eye, too—while guarding nothing so jealously, savagely, as the beam on one's own eye."

Despite Streit's explicit disclaimer of any military intent in his proposal, he includes in his book several tables showing the overwhelming material powers of the democracies over the dictatorships should each group combine its resources.

For example, he says that the democracies produce more than 95 per cent of the world's rubber and nickel, the autocracies none. The dictatorship countries, he finds, have less than 1 per cent of the world's oil and cotton; less than 2 per cent of the tin, natural phosphates and wool; less than 3 per cent of the gold reserves; less than 4 per cent of the gold production; less than 5 per cent of the world's area; less than 8 per cent of the iron ore, copper ore, lead ore and motor car production, and less than 11 per cent of the air traffic.

3 Points of Superiority.

They exceed the democracies in "30 measures of world power," he declares, only in raw silk, potash and artificial silk.

The 15 democracies, he calculates, have $98,703,000,000 in deposits in commercial and savings banks, against a total of $14,121,000,000 for Germany, Italy and Japan.

He cites official figures for the 1937 armed power of the democracies and autocracies as to national defense expenditures, navy tons built and number of airplanes and army effectives, and finds the three autocracies far inferior.

"United," he says, "these 15 democracies are (within human limits) almighty on this planet."

In his definitions Streit describes his conception of democracy as that given by Lincoln: "A government by the people, of the people, and for the people."

The state to him is a necessary instrument, but above all are the fundamental rights of man as an individual. For this reason, he rejects a league of democracies, observing that "a league is made for the state, a union is made for man."

Super-Government Aims.

As he envisages the "great republic," the "Union would be designed (a) to provide effective common government in our democratic world in those fields where such government will clearly serve man's freedom better than separate governments; (b) to maintain independent national governments in all other fields where such governments will best serve man's freedom, and (c) to create by its constitution a nucleus world government capable of growing into universal world government peacefully and as rapidly as such growth will best serve man's freedom."

Thus, in this super-government he would not disturb the present monarchies, and he holds an open mind on the Soviet system of Russia. Other nations and colonies would be admitted when they could guarantee their citizens the Union's minimum Bill of Rights. Here is his vision:

"The great republic would be organized with a view to its spreading peacefully around the earth as nations grow ripe for it. Its constitution would aim clearly at achieving eventually by this peaceful ripening, natural method the goal millions have dreamed of individually but never sought to get by deliberately planning and patiently working together to achieve. That goal would be achieved by Union when every individual of our species would be a citizen of it, a citizen of a disarmed world enjoying world free trade, a world money and a world communication system. Then man's vast future would begin."

Carefully Thought Out.

It is impossible to summarize in a brief review the compact reasoning of more than 300 pages. Let it suffice to say that Streit has thought out every possible criticism and given his answer, together with catastrophic predictions of what will happen if the democracies and the dictatorships continue in their present courses. Streit's writing is not easy read, but neither are the writings of Hobbes, Rousseau, Bentham, Locke and Mills.

A Stuart Chase or a David Cushman Coyle could perform a tremendous public service if he would condense the volume into lucid, everyday English for the mass of readers who will be frightened by the book's Socratic questions and involved sentences. Perhaps a modern Edward Bellamy could give the thesis a sugar coating of persuasive fiction.

Although the book is being published simultaneously in New York, London and Paris, the volume will be most easily understood by Americans, because of the close analogy Streit draws between present-day tension and the chaos in this country during the Articles of Confederation and the difficulties which were successfully met in the adoption of the American Constitution.

In his last chapter, the author anticipates the criticisms which his work is certain to evoke by citing what happened to Briand after he had proposed his European federation. Briand's critics, Streit reports, applauded but said "this is noble, this is what we all want," and they added, "but there is this difficulty and that difficulty, and how is he going to meet them?"

"Walters-for-Perfection."

"They acted," Streit observes, "as if the veteran French statesman, though in a much better position than they to see the difficulties his proposal faced, had not foreseen them and needed their help in seeing rather than in solving them. Even the depression that followed could not persuade these waiters-for-a-perfect-plan that this was an enterprise in which they were, willy-nilly, involved, that they, too, would be punished—swiftly, mercilessly, increasingly—for the failure to solve in time the problems on which Aristide Briand had made so brave a beginning."

For himself, Streit concludes:

"And so I ask you not merely to make known any error you have found in this book, but to try yourself to solve the problem it leaves. Since it was you who found the fault, how can you know that you are not the one who can overcome it better than I, better than anyone?"

In his lengthy and earnest exhortations, Streit has attacked one of the strongest, if not the strongest, force in the world today—nationalism. Those who remember the bitter controversy over the League of Nations, particularly Article 10, will realize what a great task he has set for the democracies, where the sentiment for isolation over-towers the sentiment for co-operation.

Perhaps Streit's hypothesis is 100 per cent impracticable, or even impossible, yet he has the distinction of placing before the world the first and most complete proposal for reversing the present trend, which seems to be leading to another great war.

Savings Bank Life Insurance System Gaining

workers predominated among these applicants, the group including painters, plumbers, skilled laborers and wives whose husbands were employed in these classifications.

As compared with Massachusetts, the New York rate schedule carries an additional charge of $1.50 on the annual premium on a $1000 policy. Sidney E. Wolff, executive vice-president of the Savings Bank Insurance League of New York, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that this charge was a "safety measure" for the opening phase of the business and that he hoped it would be returned to the policyholders with dividends at the end of their first year.

Even in Massachusetts with 30 years' experience Savings Bank insurance has not displaced industrial insurance. With a population of more than 4,000,000 the State has 5,000,000 industrial policies in force. There are, however, 170,000 savings bank policies in the hands of Massachusetts citizens, aggregating $152,000,000 of insurance. There are 24 issuing banks, with 130 agency banks. There are also 265 industrial agencies, 42 credit unions and six public agencies writing policies for the issuing banks. The industrial policies written in Massachusetts have been considerably liberalized as a result of the savings bank competition.

At the time Brandeis proposed savings bank life insurance the Armstrong Investigating Committee, of which Charles Evans Hughes, now Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, was counsel, had recommended the limitation of the size of insurance companies, having found their large aggregations of investment capital to be a matter of grave public concern.

Brandeis thought a much healthier condition would be many smaller institutions scattered about the country, operating on a mutual or co-operative basis and investing reserve funds in their local communities.

The present life insurance investigation under way at Washington already has disclosed concentrations of capital much greater than any that existed at the time of the Armstrong inquiry. The Metropolitan, for instance, its president testified, had approximately $2,000,000 a day, or $700,000,000 a year, to invest.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman recommended to the New York Legislature in January, 1938, that it enact a savings bank insurance law similar to that of Massachusetts.

"The Massachusetts system of savings bank life insurance," he said, "provides dependable life insurance and annuities at low cost. The experience in that state proves conclusively that the cost of ordinary life insurance sold by the savings banks is lower than that of ordinary life insurance sold by private companies. A comparison of the cost of savings bank insurance and of private industrial insurance is even more advantageous to the savings banks."

The experience of New York, with its large industrial population, will be watched in other states.

Shaw's Garden Orchid Show

Creating the Hybrid

ONE of the annual events to which many St. Louisans look forward eagerly is the orchid show at Shaw's Garden, world famous for its collection of these plants. This year's show, now current, was attended by 7000 persons the opening day. Of the thousands of flowers on display, a few of the most beautiful are pictured on this page, having been photographed in color for PICTURES. Many of the orchids are hybrids developed by Shaw's Garden experts. On pages 10 and 11, the complete process by which such an orchid is created at St. Louis' noted botanical garden is illustrated for the first time.

THE 62 Cardinals of the Catholic Church will meet this week in secret conclave in the Vatican at Rome to elect a new Pope, successor to the late Pius XI. The opening ceremony of the conclave will be held Wednesday, and balloting will begin the next day. The result of the election will be awaited with intense interest throughout the world, for this is regarded as probably the most important selection the College of Cardinals has had to make in a century; the next Pope will not only be the spiritual leader of more than 330,000,000 people but a man whose official actions may have a profound effect on the politics of Europe at a time when clashing ideologies and national ambitions have made the political situation extremely ominous.

The conclave will be held in the Sistine Chapel, the secrecy of its actions assured by bolted doors, guarded on the outside by Prince Don Ludovico Chigi-Albani, the marshal, member of a family which has had such a duty for 200 years. During the conclave the Cardinals and their attendants and servants will be shut off from the world in a section of the papal palace specially prepared for them, each Cardinal having a small, austerely furnished cubicle for his sleeping quarters, meals being prepared and served within the sequestered section. A two-thirds majority of the ballots cast is required for the election of a Pope. Each day until this majority is obtained two votes are taken.

THE ballots are counted at once, then wrapped in straw and burned in a fireplace; the thick dark smoke coming from its chimney apprises the crowd waiting outside the palace that no selection has yet been made. After the final vote, the ballots are burned without straw, and the light smoke they make gives notice that a new Pope has been chosen even before that fact is proclaimed from the balcony of the Vatican Basilica. Only after the Cardinals have paid a preliminary homage to their selection is the conclave ended.

Two of the three American princes of the church, Cardinals Dougherty and Mundelein, have reached Rome, and the third, Cardinal O'Connell, is expected to arrive in time to take part in the conclave. Only once has an American voted in such an election: The late Cardinal Farley of New York, happening to be in Europe at the time, participated in the conclave which elected Pope Benedict XV in 1914.

Selection of a Pope is made from the College of Cardinals. While members from other countries are eligible, none but Italians have been elected since early in the sixteenth century. In the coming election, a half-dozen or more Cardinals have been mentioned as possible choices. Outstanding among them are Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, said to have been the choice of Pius XI for his successor, and Cardinal Ascalesi, Archbishop of Naples, reported to be favored by Mussolini.

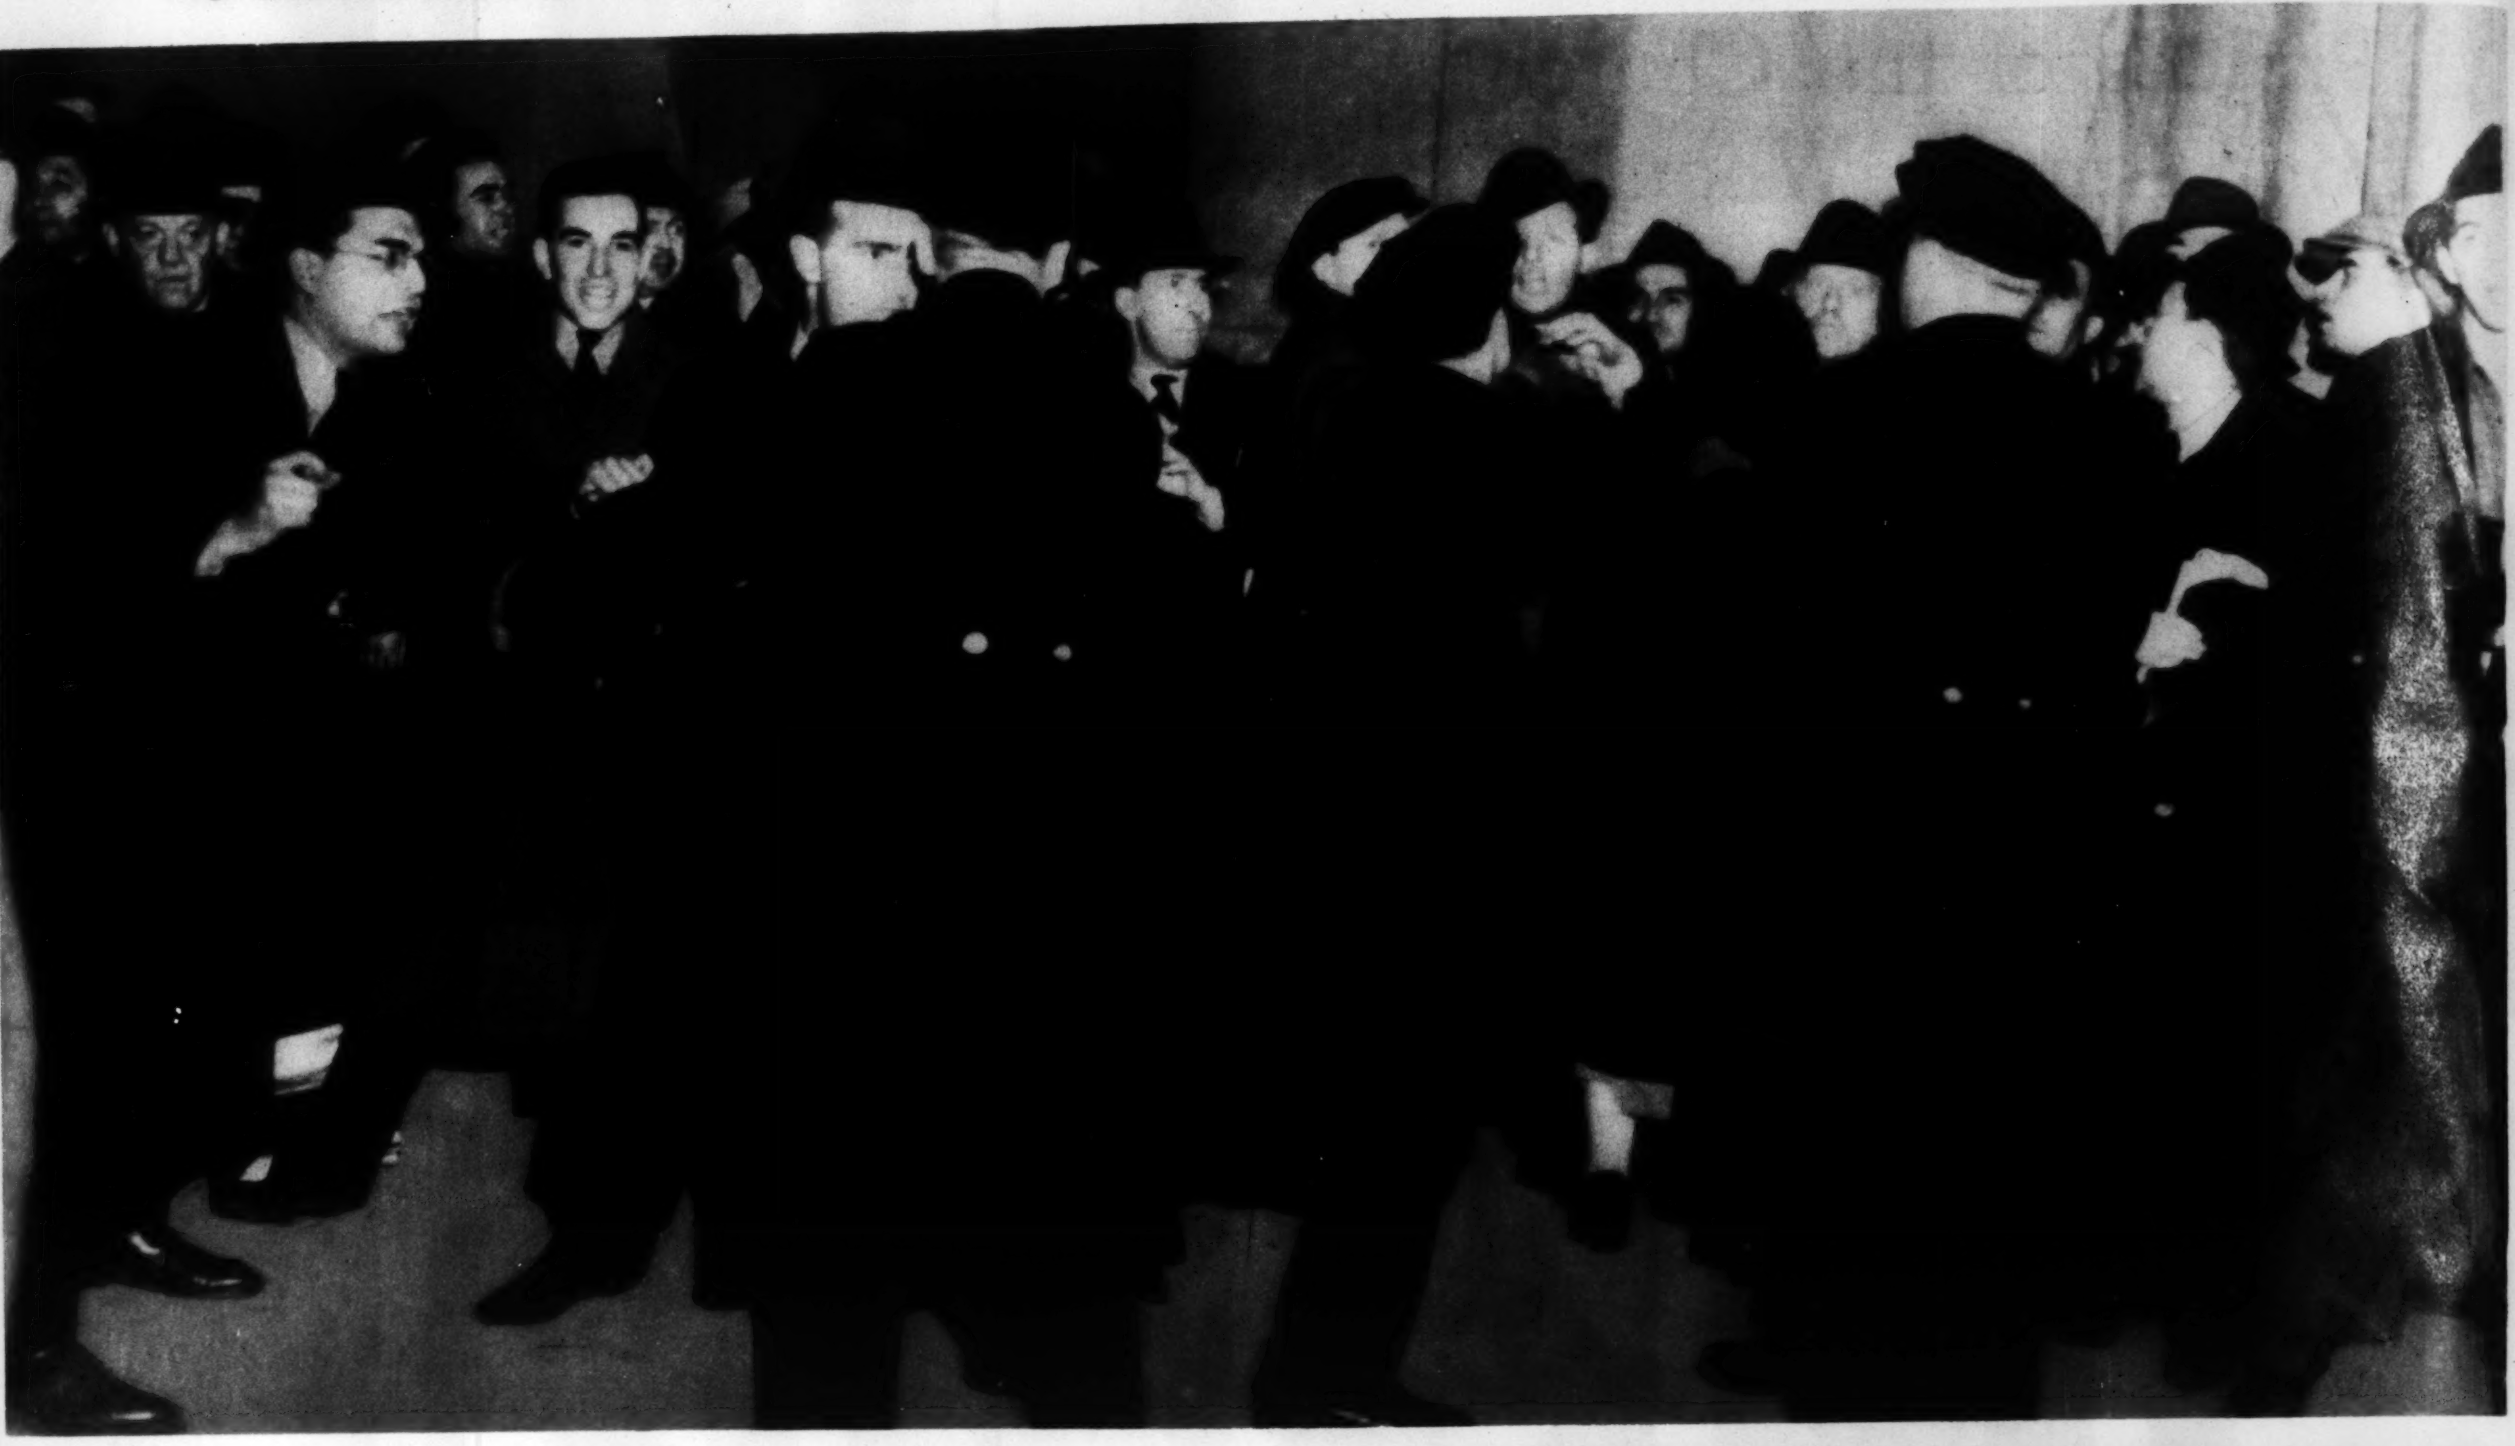
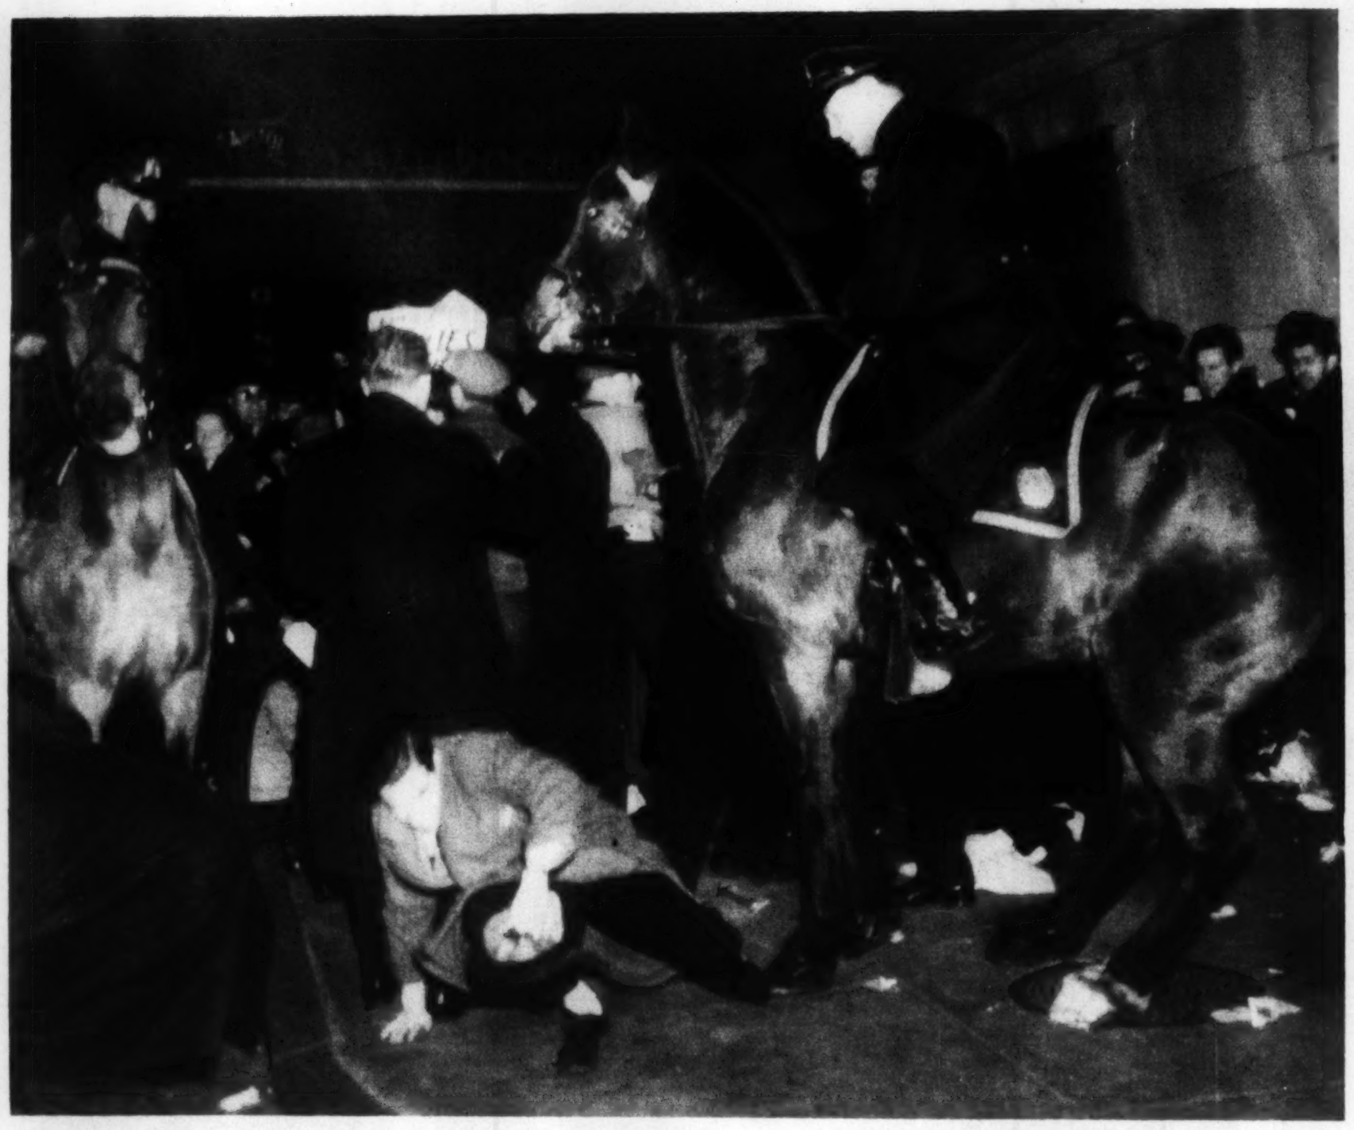
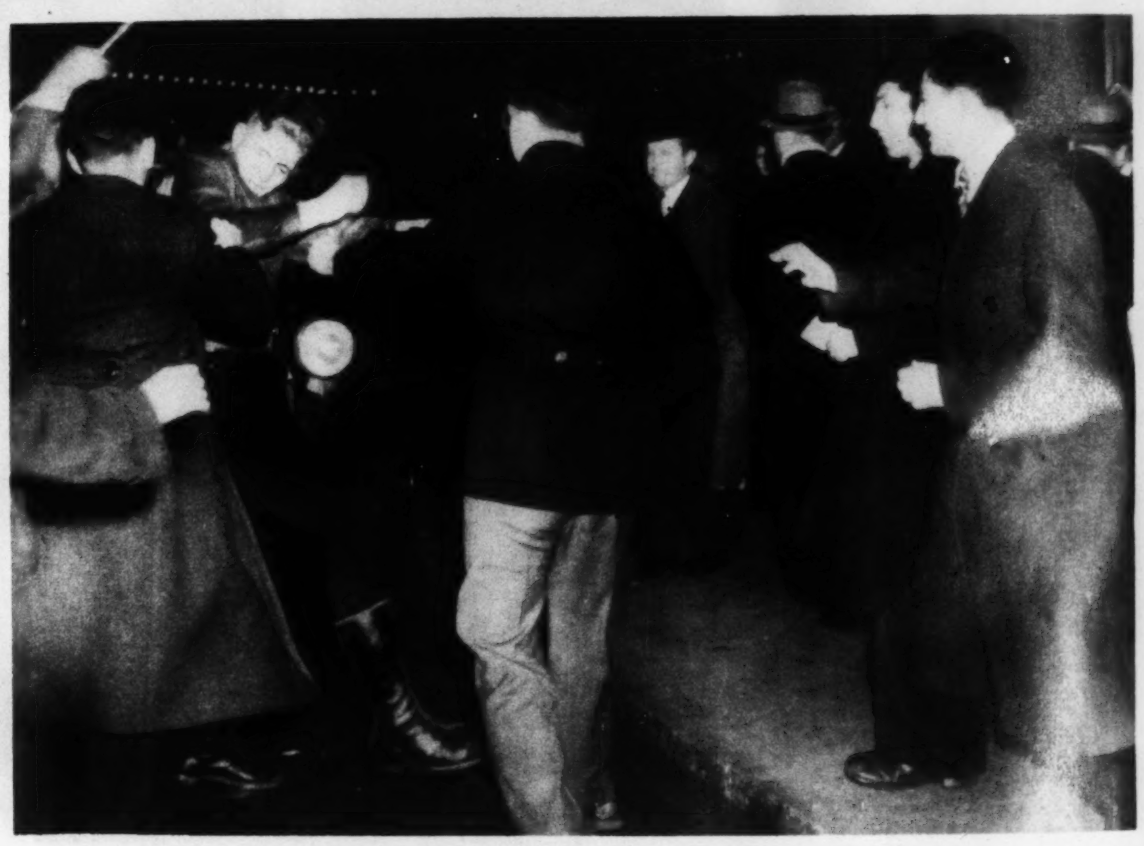
Violence at Mass Meeting When Bund Orators—Unde



Some of the guard of 1500 policemen tussling with anti-Nazis outside the German-American Bund meeting at Madison Square Garden, New York City, last Monday. Police were instructed to halt all persons entering the vicinity with "provocative" signs.



A man dodges from the hooves of a horse as mounted policemen try to clear the streets near the Garden.



A Bund "storm trooper" (wearing boots) is beaten by anti-Nazis after leaving the Bund meeting.

MAYOR LAGUARDIA and other New York City officials last Monday night demonstrated to the world that they could protect the right of free speech, even for the thought they might hate. More than 1500 police kept a crowd of 100,000 seething anti-Nazis, theater-goers and merely curious at bay for six hours while the pro-Nazi German-American Bund held a meeting in Madison Square Garden in which Jews were denounced and President Roosevelt and some members of his cabinet were derided.

Outside the hall, fists were swung frequently as the police sought to keep anti-Nazis from picketing and to force the crowd back to two blocks from the Garden. Fighting broke out again when several Nazi "storm troopers" were attacked after leaving the hall. Inside, Isadore Greenbaum, a hotel worker, was beaten by storm troopers when he jumped on the stage and rushed at Fritz Kuhn, national leader of the Bund, as Kuhn was concluding an attack on Jews (as shown in sequence below).

The meeting was held ostensibly to pay honor to George Washington. But swastikas as well as American flags flanked a huge painting of Washington on the speakers' stand, the Nazi salute was given by most of the 20,000 persons attending and "storm troopers" paraded up and down the Garden aisles.

Four more "troopers" beat Greenbaum, tear at his trousers.

A section of the crowd of 20,000 at Madison Square Garden for the Bund rally.

PRAISE of Washington and professions of patriotism were merely a background for diatribes against "Jewish Communists," and "international Jewish financiers"; banners read: "Stop Jewish Domination of Christian Americans."

Bund meetings have often ended in booing, jeering and fighting with opponents. Estimates of the size of the organization vary, but John C. Metcalfe, an investigator for the House Committee of un-American Activities, testified last August that there were 80 posts scattered over the country, with a direct membership of 25,000 and about 75,000 sympathizers who attended meetings. Congressman Samuel H. Dickstein contended the membership was 460,000. Metcalfe, who joined the Bund to get information about it for a newspaper, said its purpose was spy work and sabotage for Germany.

Kuhn, the "Fuehrer" of the Bund, has denied Metcalfe's charge that he has a secret arrangement with Hitler, but he was photographed presenting a book to Hitler on a recent visit to Germany. A German machine gunner during the World War, Kuhn came to this country in 1927, was naturalized and settled in Detroit, where he was a chemical engineer with the Ford Motor Company for eight years before resigning to become salaried head of the Bund.

She was allowed to return to the press box when she insisted on the right to disagree as a part of free speech. (International News Photo)

'IT' GIRL—1939 MODEL

LANA TURNER

A color portrait of a girl who may be the movies' next "It" personality.

ON THE theory that the movie public is ready for another "It" girl to quicken its pulse, one of the major Hollywood studios is understood to be grooming red-haired, hazel-eyed Lana Turner for the glamourous place once held by Clara Bow and the late Jean Harlow. Just 19 years old, Lana is said to have not only beauty and acting skill but that indefinable appeal which can be publicized into something that charms the film fans. She was born at Wallace, Idaho. Lately she has been attending Hollywood High School. She broke into pictures while in high school and has had parts in "The Great Garrick" and "The Adventures of Marco Polo."

Three other views of Miss Turner.

You lousy rabble of low degree."

A modern vagabond king, an iron-handed ruler of Parisian scum, holds forth in the Latin quarter cafe which is the headquarters of the "truanderie," or beggars' association. A former naval officer, he is vice-president of the club and enforces the rules with his fists.

THE "truanderie," or vagabond association, reputed to have been founded in Paris in the Middle Ages by François Villon, the great tatterdemalion poet, has been revived in the Paris Latin Quarter by a former professor who was dismissed from the University of Paris. The headquarters of the ragged band is in a cafe not far from Notre Dame Cathedral. The membership fee is 10 per cent of the proceeds of begging. In return, the club provides a lawyer for the beggars when they're arrested, takes care of the family of any member who becomes sick or is imprisoned, provides artificial limbs for mendicants who are crippled, or pretend to be, gives each member an exclusive district, and uses fists and boots on any independent beggar who infringes on that territory. Some of the members sleep in the cafe.

Some members spend all night at the cafe.

A member in good standing marks his right to the district where he has been allotted exclusive begging privileges by the association.

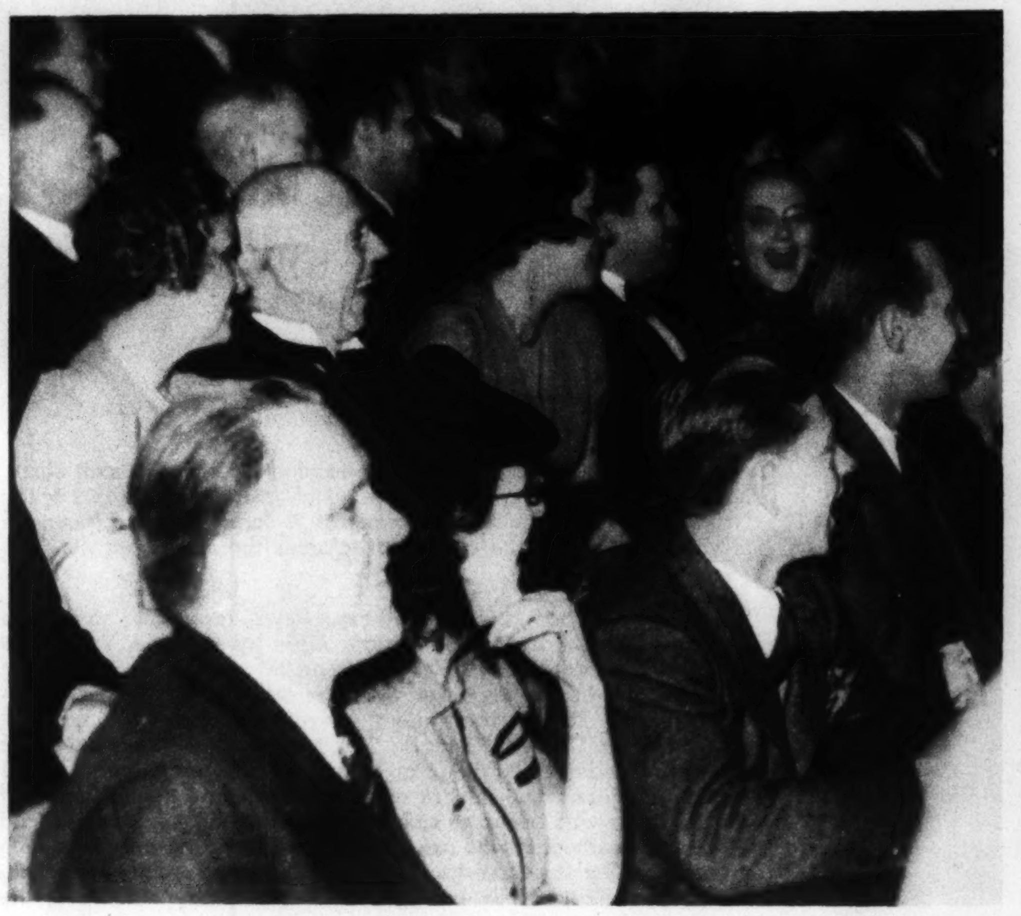
Eddie Bartell walks down the aisle while the audience is taking seats, removes hat, scarf, coat and gloves, and soberly sings "The End of a Perfect Day." After the none-too-sweet final note, he resumes his wraps and leaves the theater.

As the curtain goes up, this man rushes through the audience shouting: "It's still not too late to see 'I Married an Angel.' Four good seats left."

Shortly thereafter, Mrs. Chic Johnson intermittently parades the aisles, calling for "Oscar." At other times, "Oscar" goes about calling for "Lena." They never meet.

This man searches futilely in the audience for "Mrs. Jones." From his first appearance on, the potted plant continues to grow, until—

Olsen and Johnson Wow Broadway



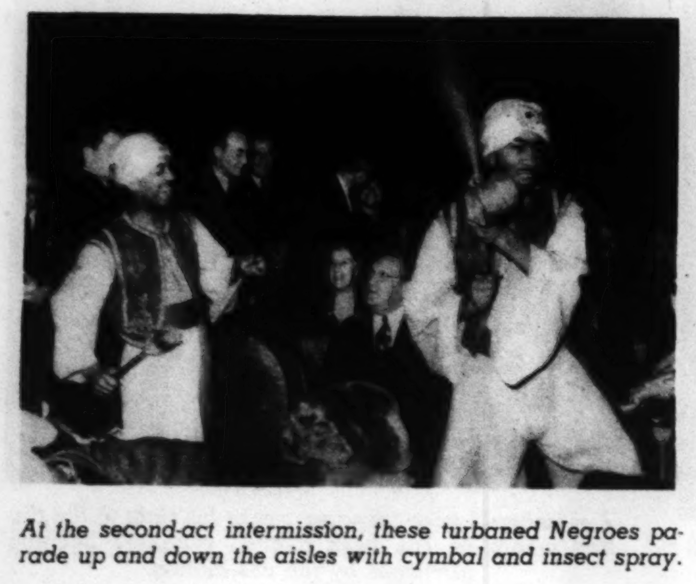
Audience reaction to "Hellz-a-Poppin." The youthful motion picture star Mickey Rooney appears in right foreground.

SOPHISTICATED New Yorkers, after years of ignoring the comedy of the old vaudevillians, Ole Olsen and Chic Johnson, have responded so enthusiastically to their first Broadway vehicle, a raucous musical comedy entitled "Hellz-a-Poppin," that it appears destined to run on through the World's Fair. Olsen and Johnson, through their years on one circuit or another, had the motto, "Anything for a gag," and that is still their motto. They make no pretense of subtlety or high comedy, and their slap-stick antics are now convulsing New York audiences. Despite the lifted eyebrows of a majority of critics who reviewed the opening months ago, the comedians, their aids and stooges, who appear not only on the stage but frequently and surprisingly in various other parts of the theater, are playing to packed houses even at special matinees. Photographs on this page, made for PICTURES, show some of the show's occurrences off stage, which first mystify, then amuse spectators.

At intermission Dippy Diers, clown of Hippodrome fame, passes faded flowers to ladies. To those who reach for one, he hands a bit of fern.

The clown then offers a banana to others, lets them break off a piece and often takes a bite, himself.

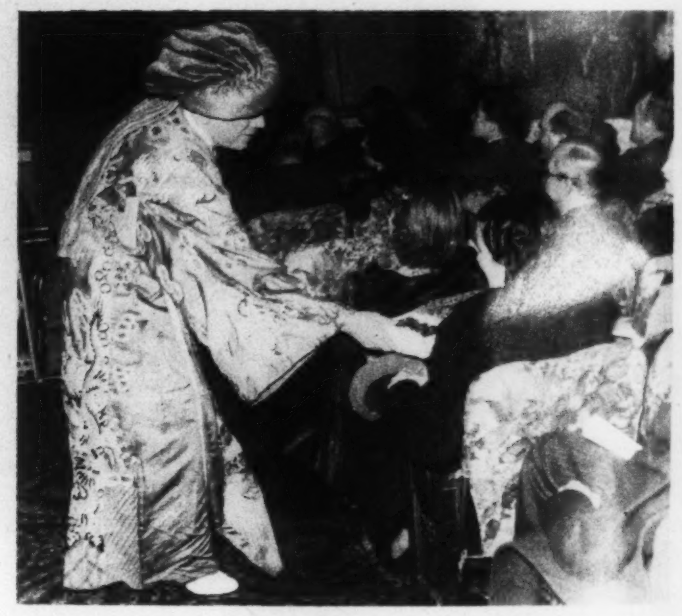
Early in the show an "escape artist" is placed in a strait jacket, from which he is to free himself in five seconds. At the final curtain he is still writhing in his bonds.



At the second-act intermission, these turbaned Negroes parade up and down the aisles with cymbal and insect spray.

For no reason at all, this monster attacks a feminine stooge in a box. Others in the box have not been advised that the girl is part of the show, and frequently join in her scream.

The audience, passing through the lobby after the show, finds him there in the branches of the plant, now a tree, still shouting for Mrs. Jones.



Olsen spots a box of candy in the audience while in the middle of a spiel for a magician on the stage. He continues the talk while passing the candy. Meanwhile the magician has made Johnson disappear—

But he suddenly lurches to the rail of a gallery box, screams "I Married an Angel," and sprinkles feathers on the audience below.

When spectators start home, they find the "escape artist" on the floor of the lobby, continuing his unsuccessful struggle.

8. Three days after pollination, the sepals and petals begin to wilt and die. The withering of the sepals and petals indicates growth of pollen for ultimate fertilization, and a seed pod begins to form in the stem.

9. Two months later the seed pod has developed to this size.

FOR more than a decade one of the most important activities of Shaw's Garden has been the creation of new varieties of orchids through hybridization. It is an activity which has brought international renown to the St. Louis institution and fresh beauty into the world. The hybrids, in which appear characteristics of two or more species of forebears, often have qualities of form and color superior to those of any one of the species from which they were developed. Many of the plants which were ancestors of the 20,000 orchids now being grown at the Garden were brought back from South and Central America by Superintendent George H. Pring.

Hybrids are grown from seed at Shaw's Garden by the symbiotic method. With this method, seeds are germinated in the laboratory—in flasks of a culture medium containing fungus from orchid roots. The seeds develop into minute plants, under carefully controlled temperature conditions, and these seedlings are then taken from the flasks and planted in tiny pots. As they get larger they are transplanted in larger pots and when the roots are sturdy enough they are moved to the Arboretum at Gray Summit to complete their growth away from St. Louis smoke. Seven years after pollination—the placing of pollen from one orchid in the stigma of another, which produces the seed to be germinated—the resulting orchid is ready for exhibition and the admiration of the beholder.

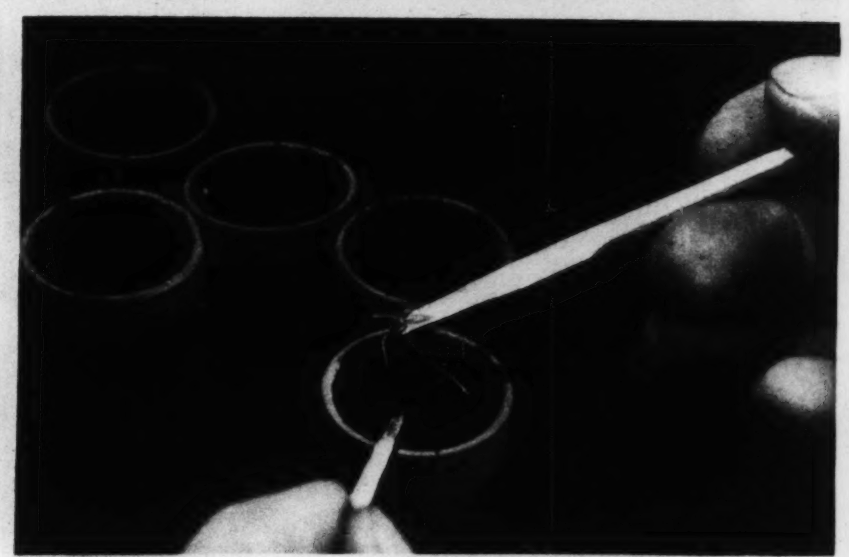
16. A week or so later the growing fungus is transferred to a flask, also containing the culture medium, where it will continue to grow.

17. A week later, an environment favorable to germination of orchid seeds having been created, the seeds are sowed in the flask, a tuft of cotton on a wire being used to carry them into the flask and scatter them evenly.

18. Sterilizing the cotton stopper of the flask. The stopper is not removed until the seeds have developed into tiny plants, ready for potting.

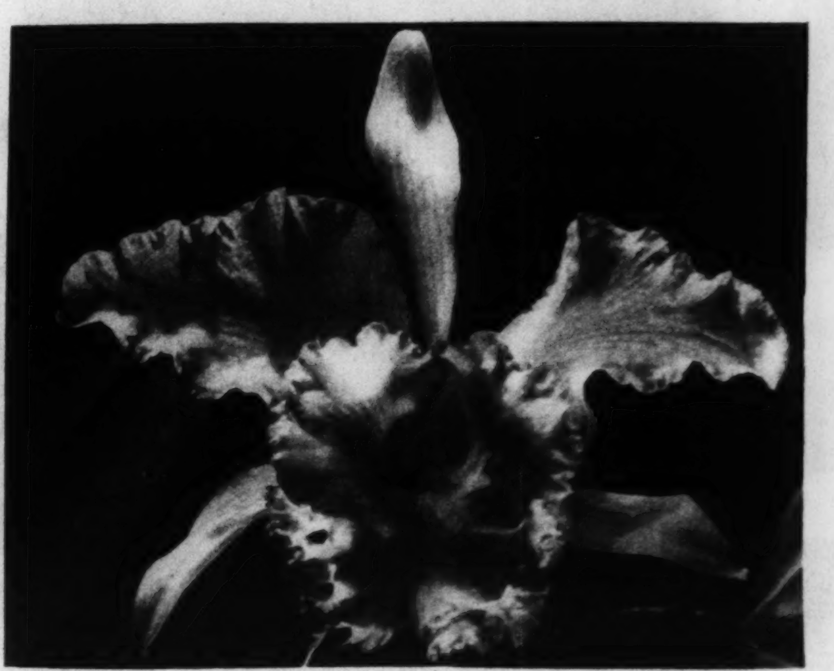
19. The flasks are kept in glass frames in a greenhouse where the temperature is not permitted to get below 70 degrees.

20. Several months after the seeds were placed in the flask—the time depends on the variety of orchid—the plants are ready for potting. Here a cluster of seedlings is being removed with a forked stick.



21. A single seedling being planted in peat moss in a pot an inch in diameter. It is repotted in larger containers as it grows.

22. The young plants are kept in a greenhouse at Shaw's Garden, watered carefully and kept warm, for two months or so—until they have become firmly rooted. Then they are taken away from St. Louis smoke to the Arboretum at Gray Summit to complete their growth.



23. Seven years after its creation was begun by pollination a new orchid is ready to be exhibited. This is a light mauve hybrid called a Brassocattleya, resulting from the crossing of a Brassovola from Honduras and a Cattleya from Colombia.

ST. LOUIS BIRD ACTOR

AN ACTOR about the size of an adult thumb frequently gives a one-bird show for guests of its owners, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Donnelly, 1 McKnight lane. When the stage—a board placed in front of its cage—is set, and the cage door opened, the feathered thespian hops out and goes through its repertoire, pausing between acts to take a little refreshment from the hands of Mr. or Mrs. Donnelly. Like most actors, the bird appears to be eager to perform. Also, in the stage tradition, it has its temperamental streak: It won't go on unless the props are set out with the left hand—because the Mexican Indian who trained it was left-handed. The bird, dark with a dull-gold breast and smaller than a canary, is an olive siskin and came from Mexico. It sings a bit, but not seriously, merely for its own entertainment.

(Photos by a PICTURES Staff Photographer)

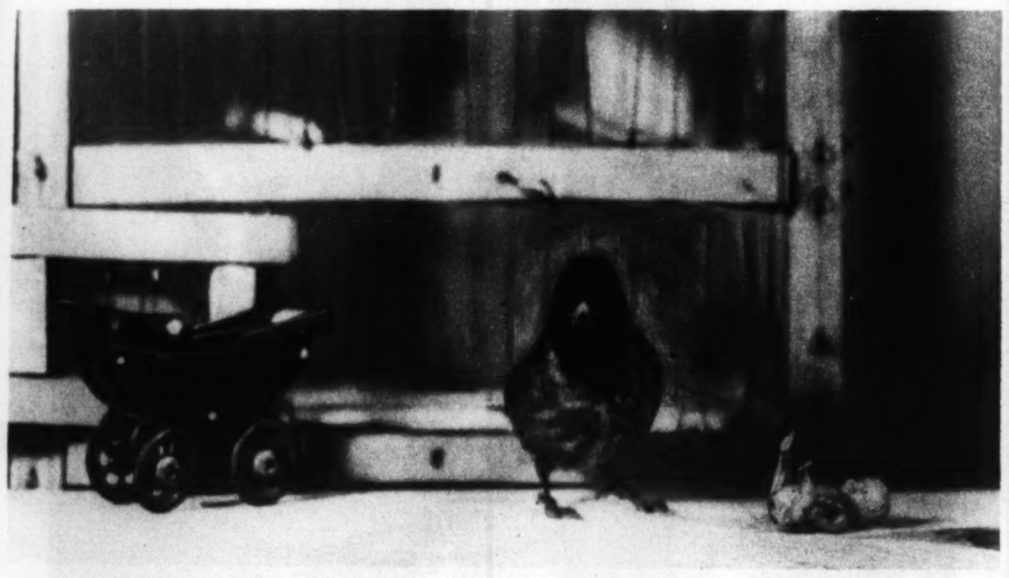
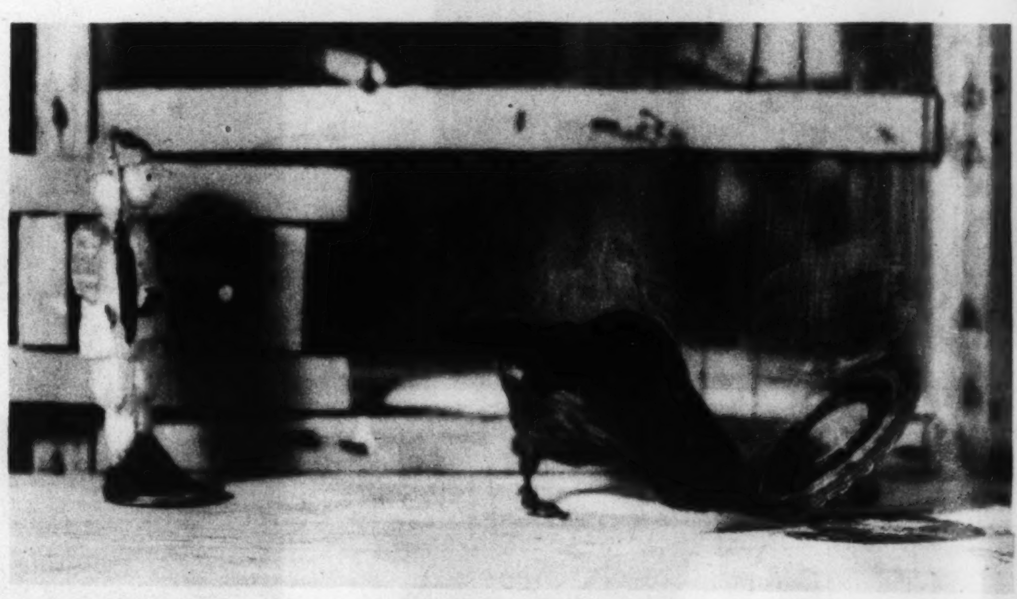
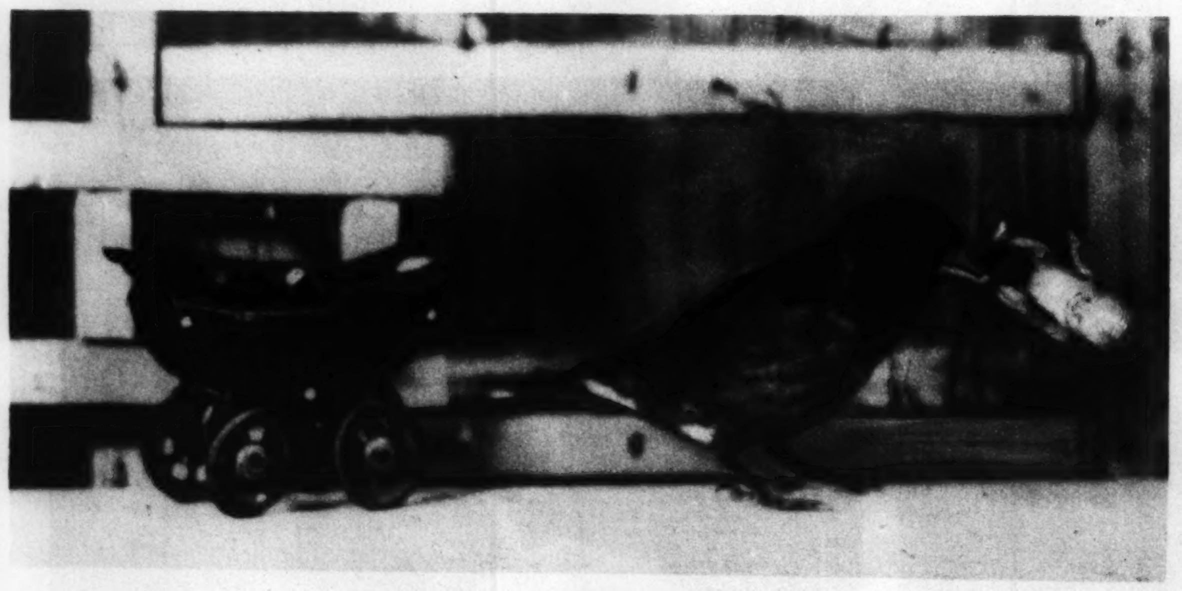
Another act, involving a hat and a toy soldier.



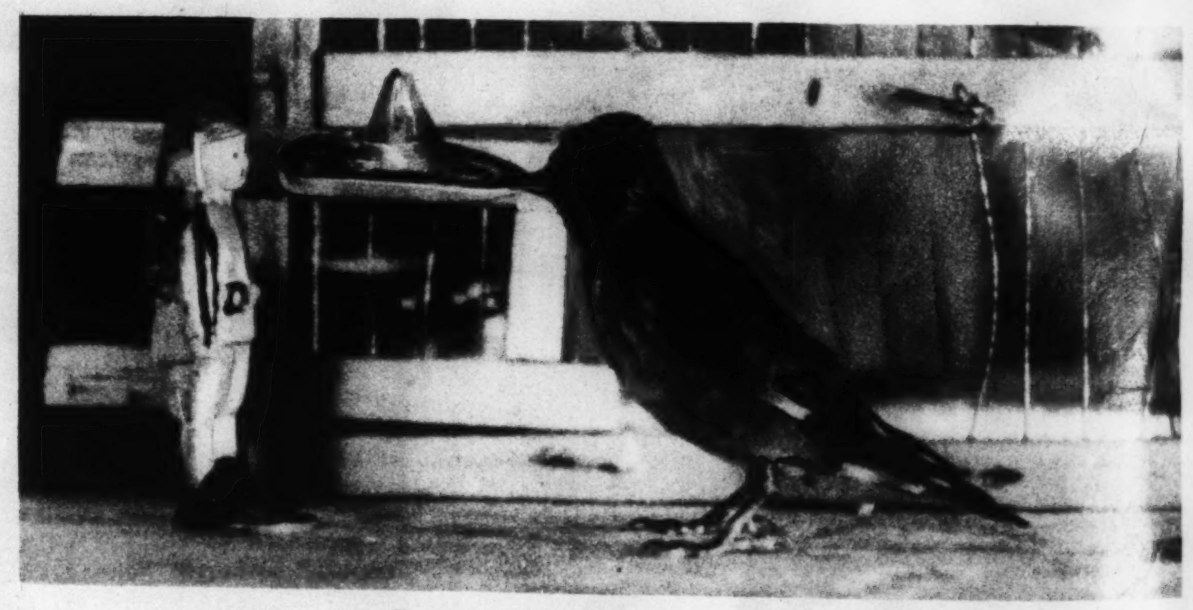
Alertly it surveys the audience before beginning one of its chief acts.



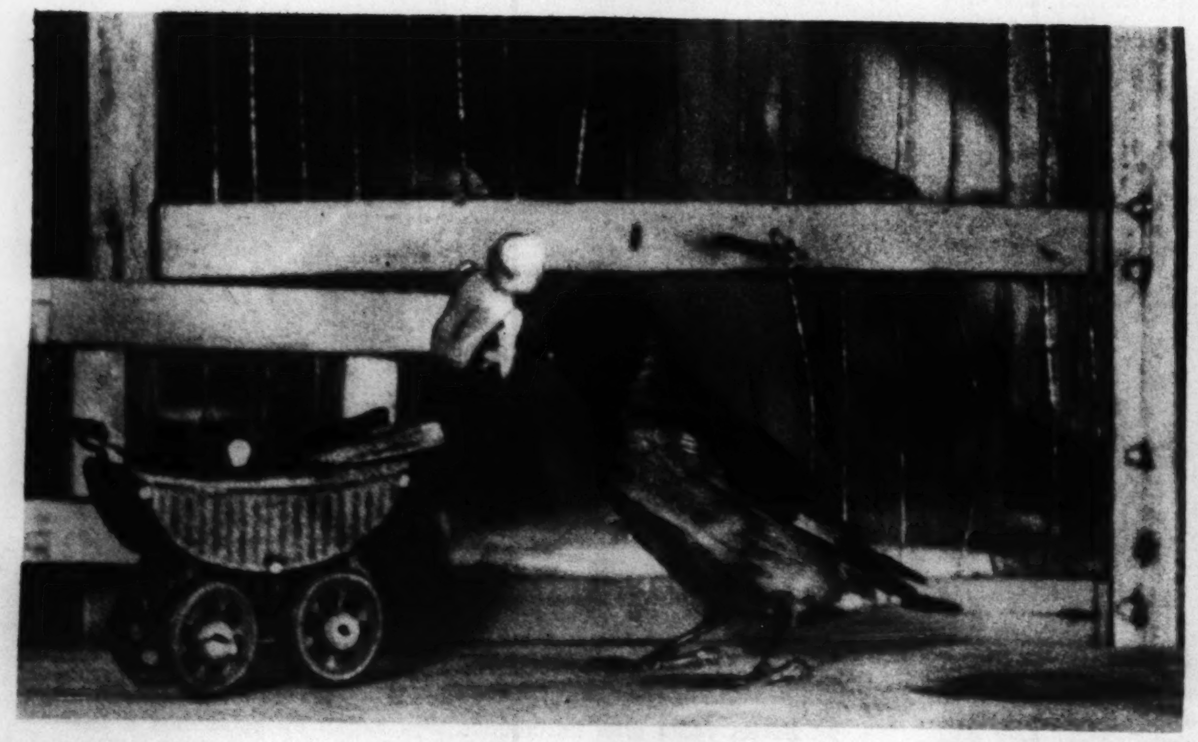
The bird picks up the hat so as to hold it in proper position—



A miniature doll is taken up briskly—



Carries it across the stage—



Carried to the perambulator—

And places it on the soldier's head at a suitably rakish angle.

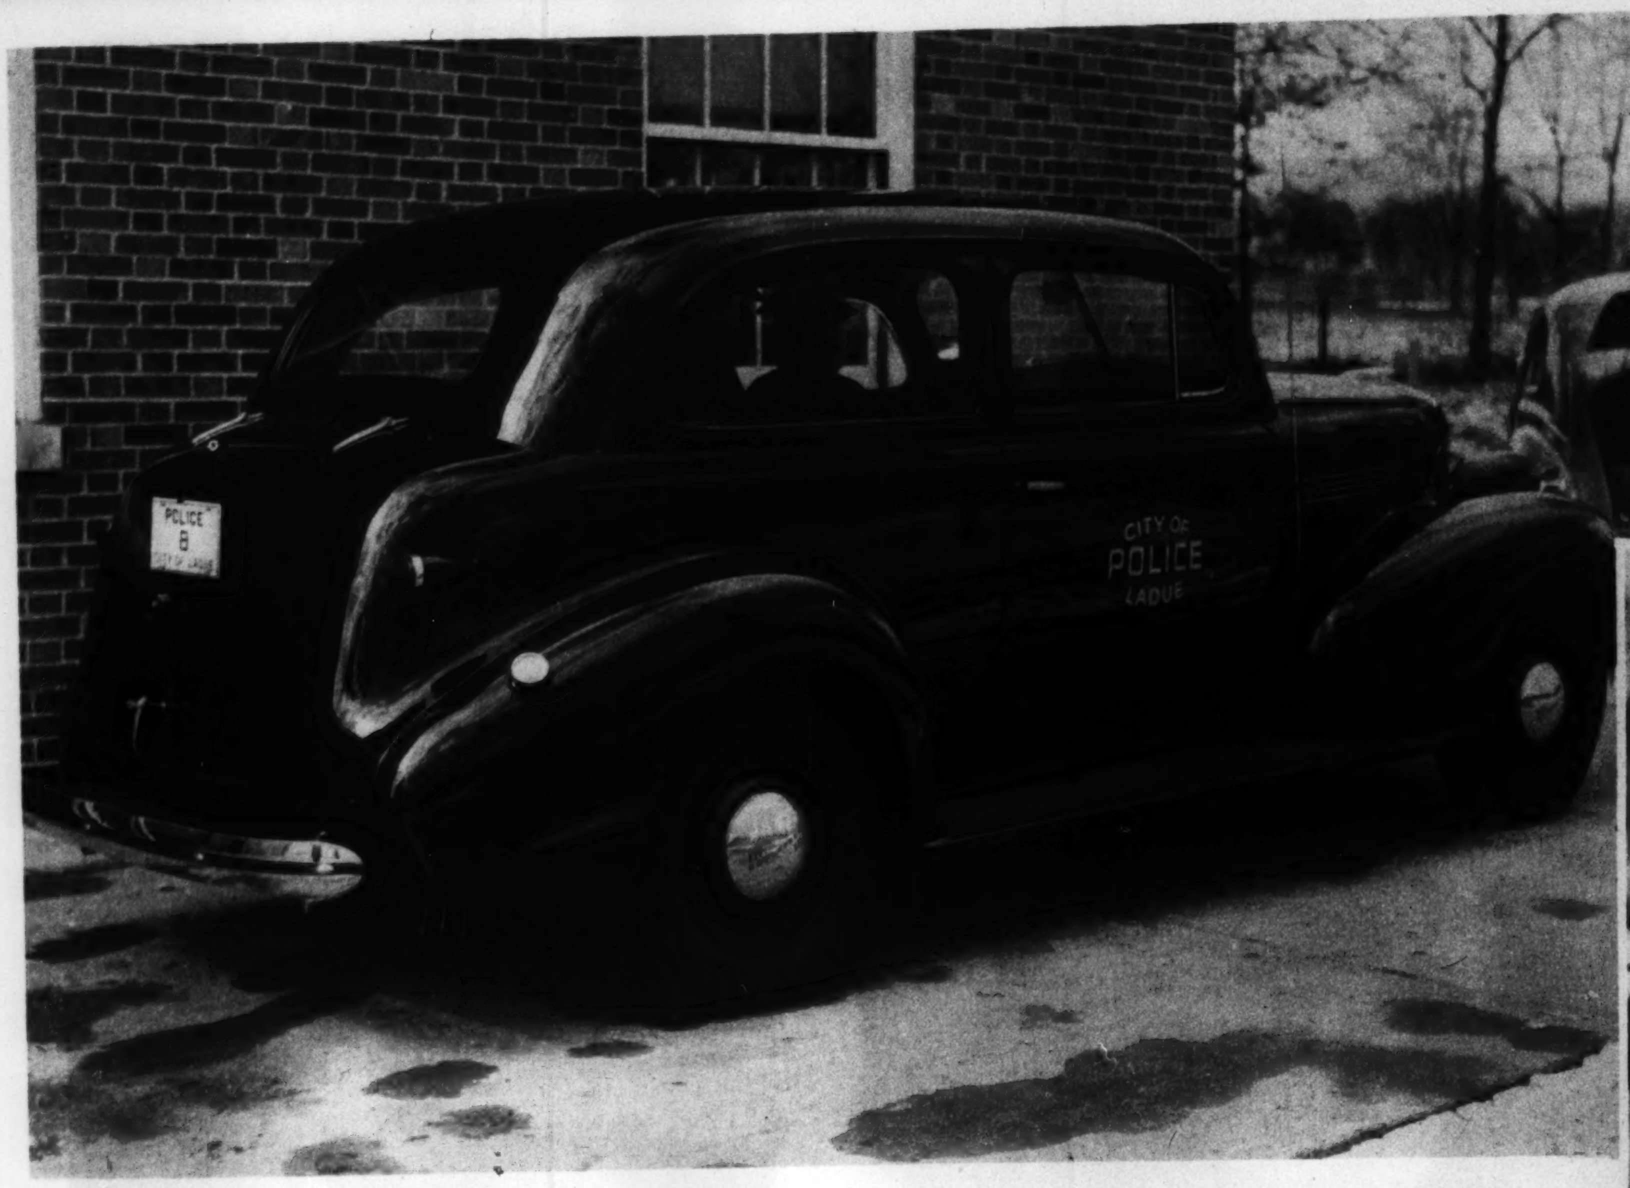
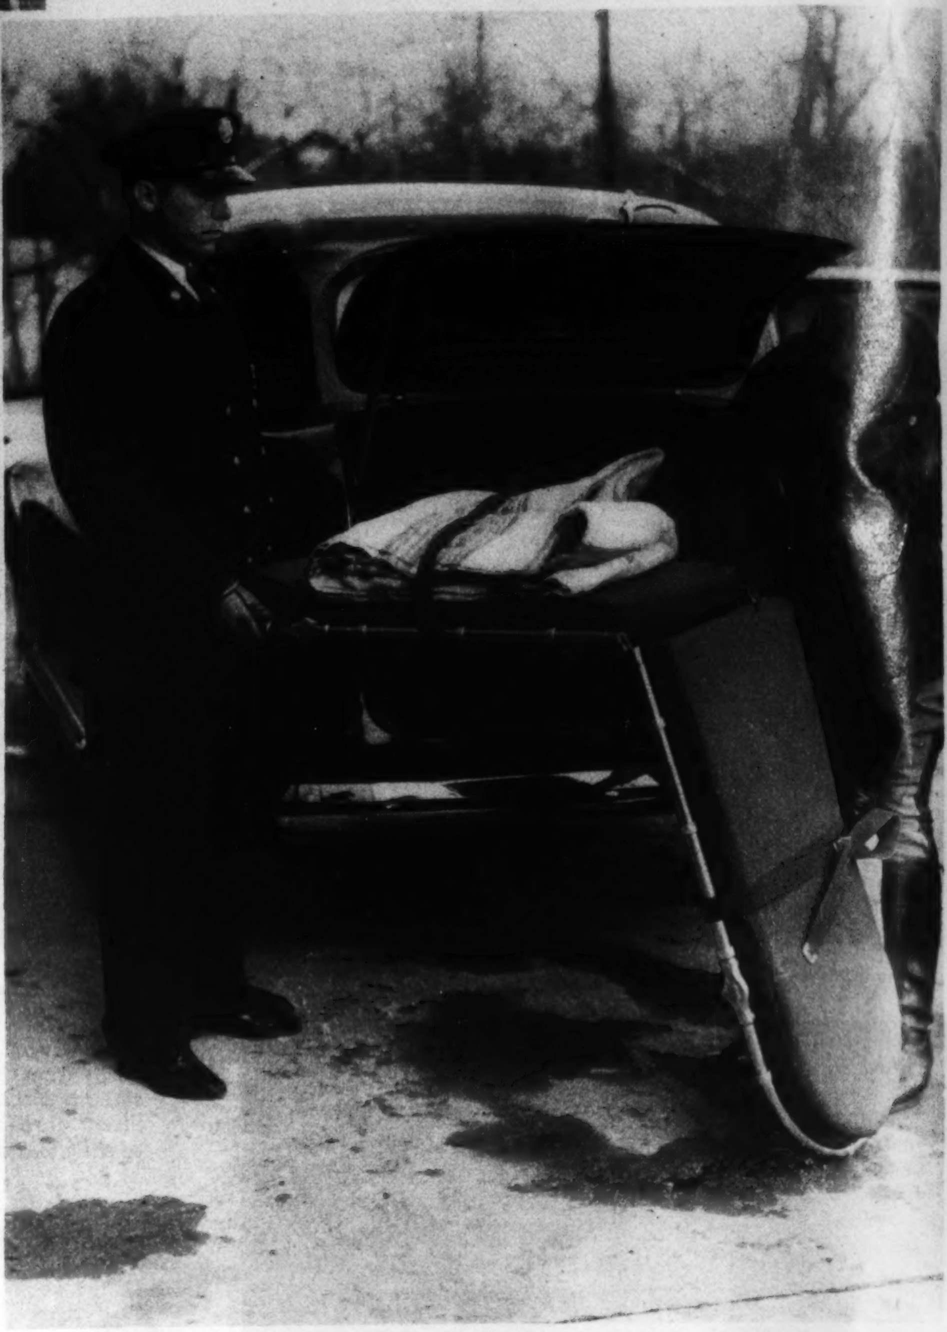
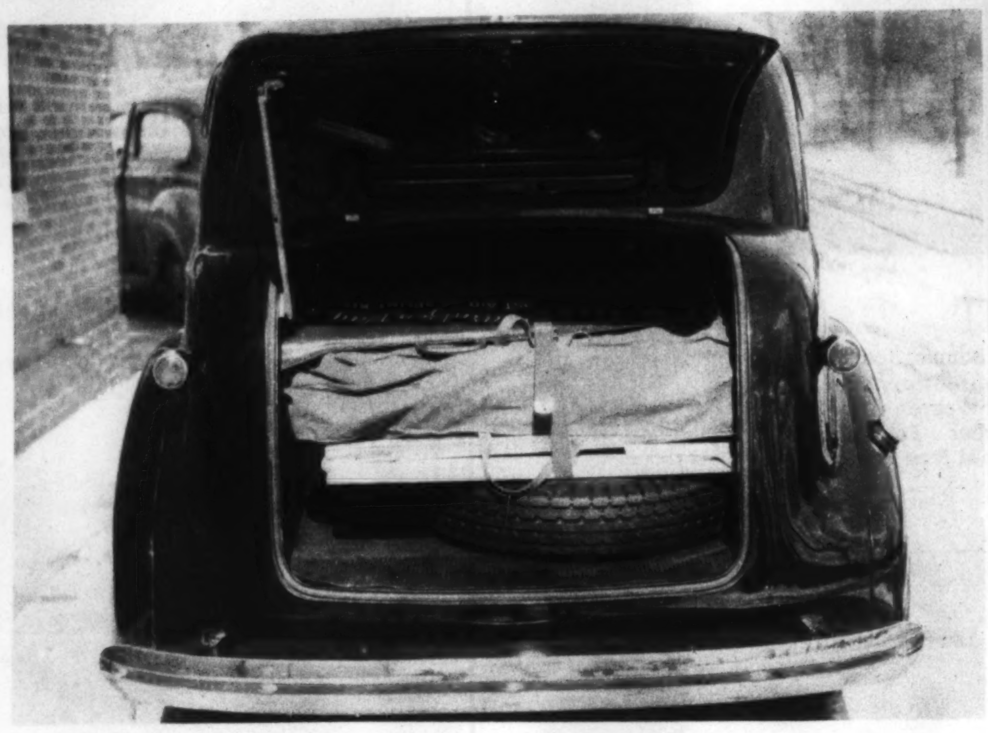
Combination Scout Car and Ambulance for Ladue



Ladue's new ambulance-scout car looks like an ordinary radio-equipped, five-passenger auto.



The stretcher can be quickly opened and prepared for use.



The luggage compartment, however, contains this folding stretcher, complete with pad and blanket.

A COMBINATION police scout car and ambulance, the first of its kind in this vicinity, was put in service the other day by the Police Department of the City of Ladue, St. Louis County. In outward appearance it is an ordinary automobile of the coach type. But the luggage compartment in the rear contains a stretcher, compactly folded, and the rear seat can be lifted out of the way to permit the stretcher, when occupied, to slide along a double track into the seat section of the car. Inspector Ralph E. Strain of the Ladue Police says cars of this type are in service in the East. Need was felt for such a conveyance in Ladue, particularly for use after highway accidents, because there is no regular ambulance in the community. The combination car is quartered at the police and fire station at 9345 Clayton road. Edward S. Funsten is Chief of Police of Ladue.

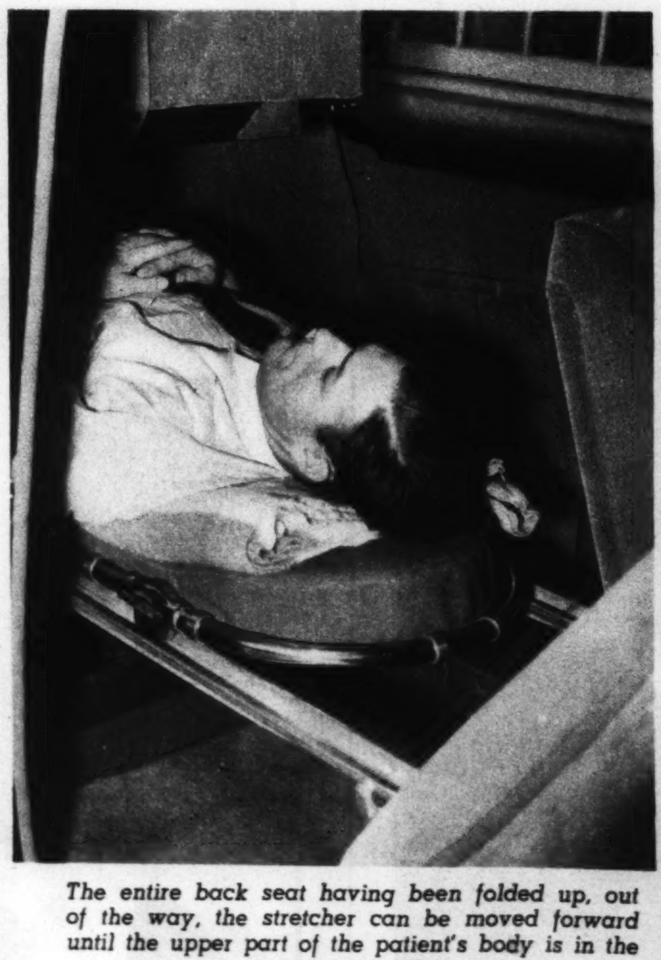
With a patient (merely demonstrating) on the stretcher, it is lifted into the rear of the car and pushed forward along a double track.



The entire back seat having been folded up, out of the way, the stretcher can be moved forward until the upper part of the patient's body is in the passenger section.

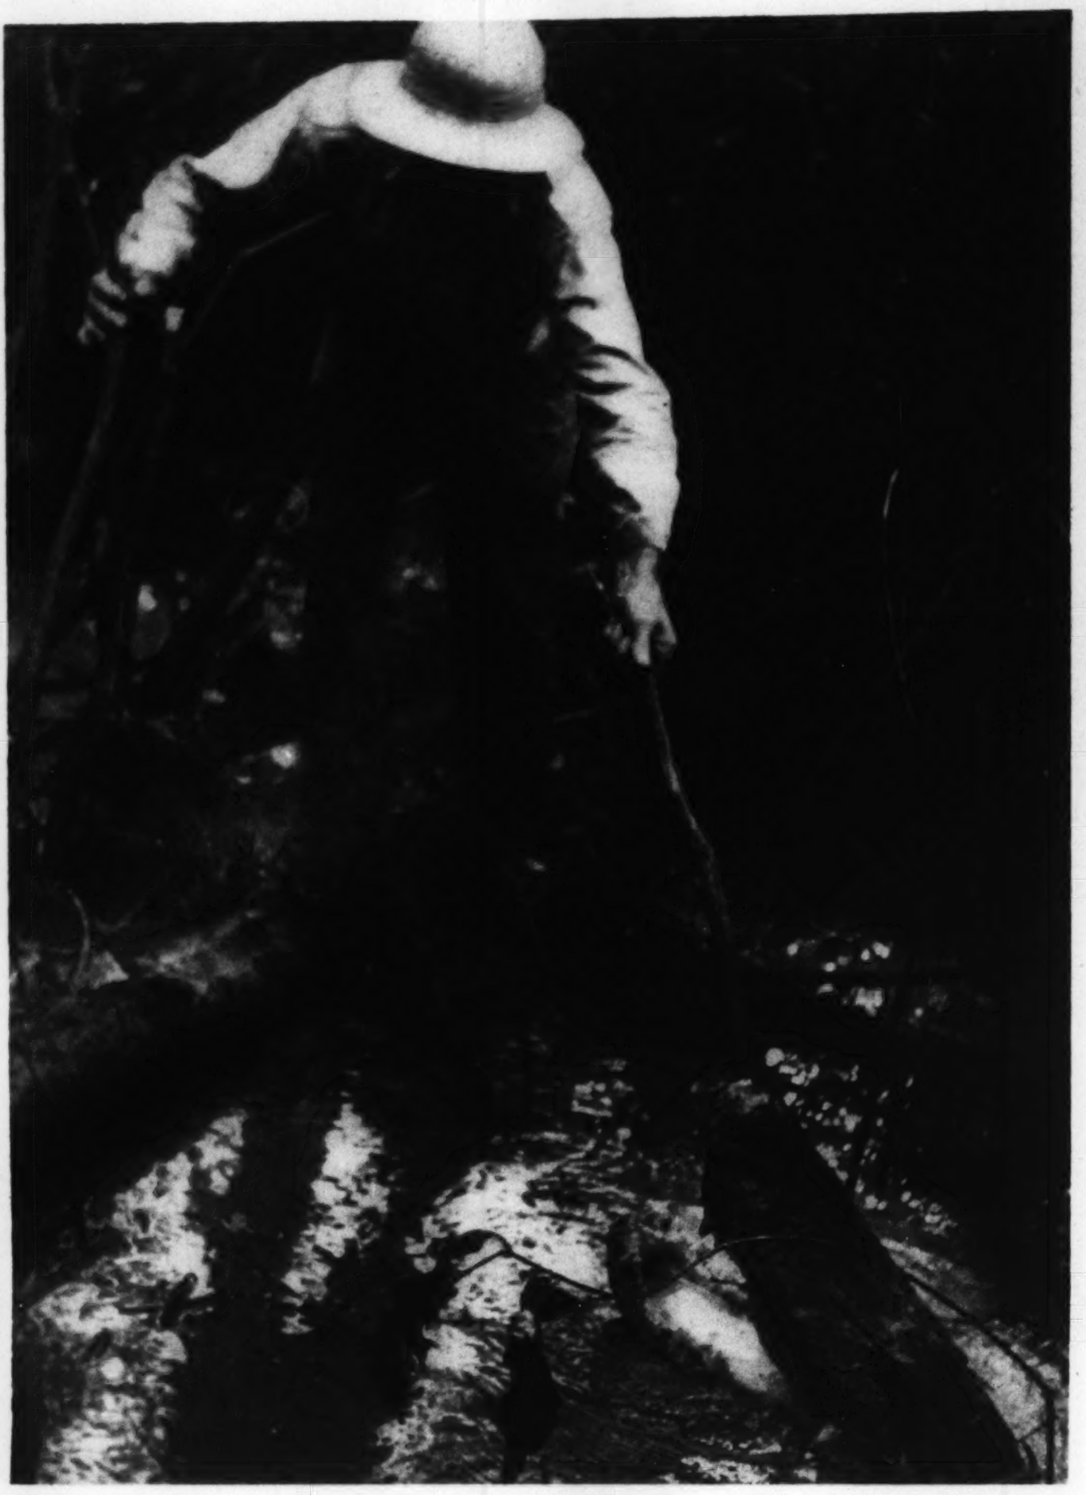
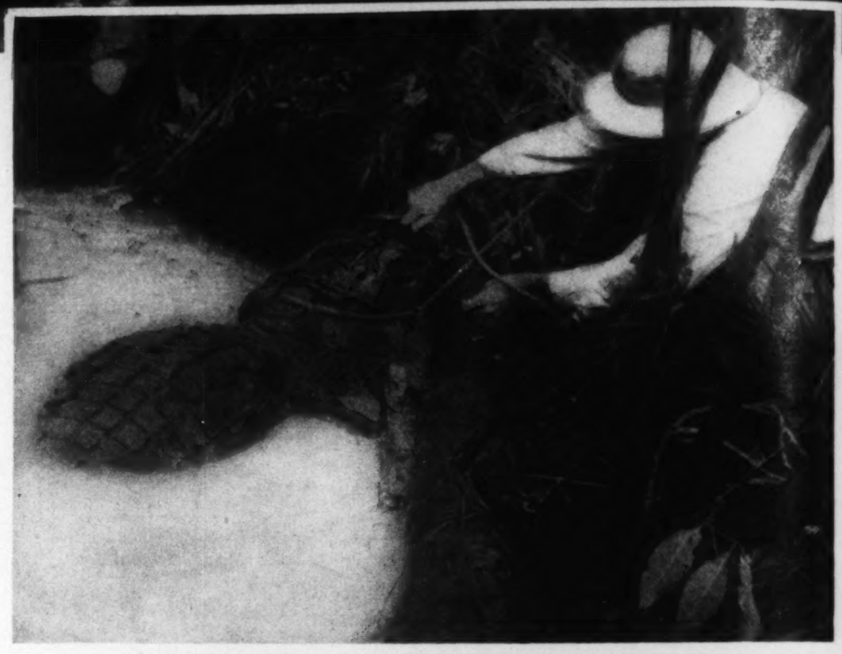
TAKING ALLIGATORS ALIVE



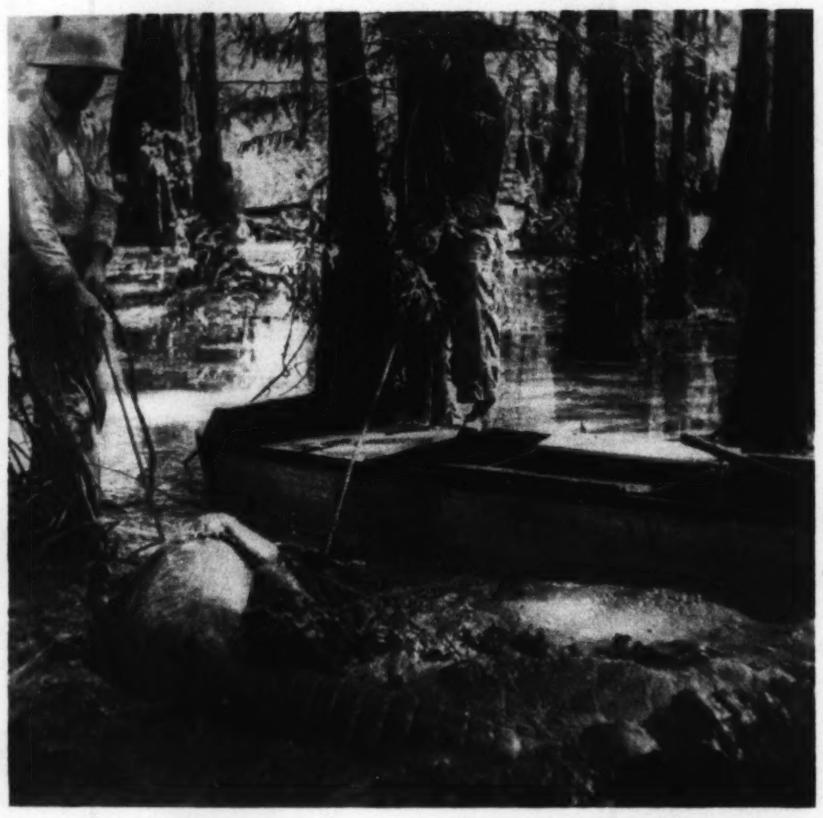
Denny Massey, who brings alligators back alive, taunts them out of their dens, which they dig about 15 feet back into the swamp banks for winter hibernation. He pokes sticks down at them and they come up snapping.

Then, patiently, he loops wire about an alligator's jaws and draws it tight. The creature could snap a rope or leather thong.



After a while, the alligator lapses back into its natural winter sluggishness, and Massey slips a lasso over its head.

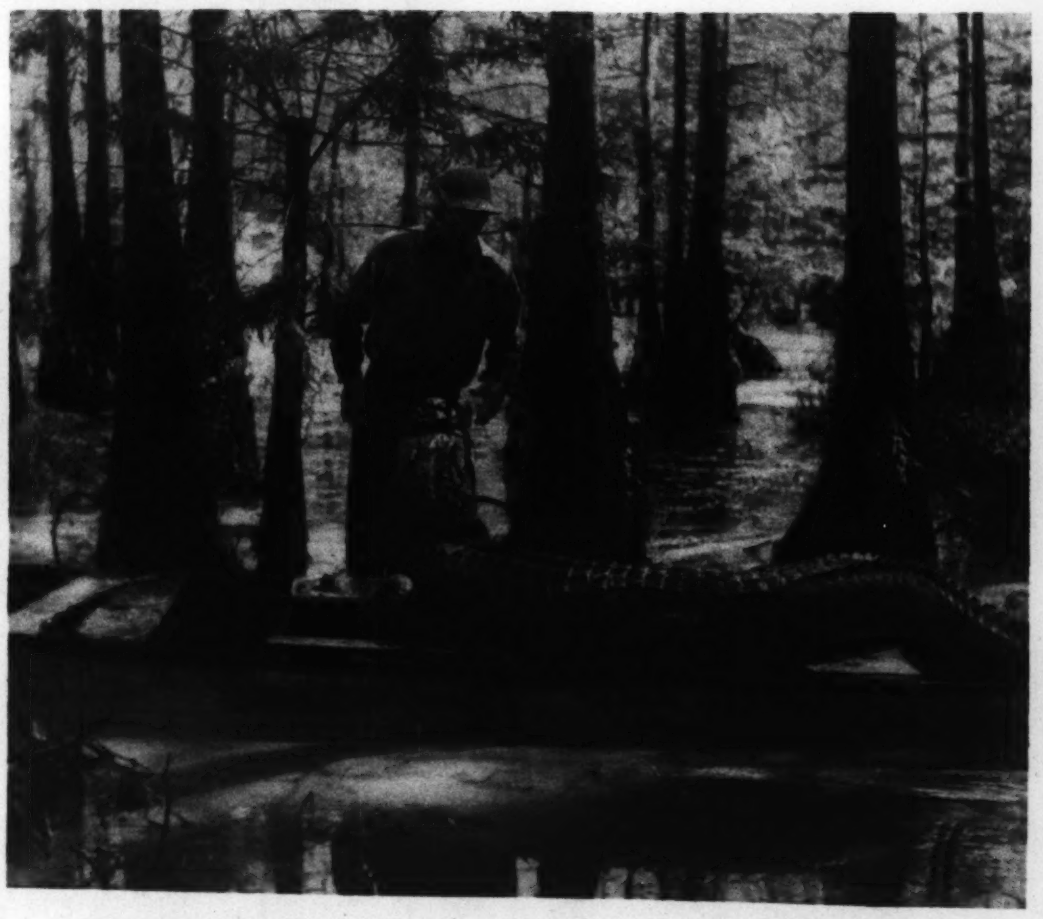
(Photos by Carolyn Ramsey)



Then the thrashing monster is dragged through the ooze into a boat. It requires strength as well as sure-footedness and courage on the hunter's part.

DENNY MASSEY, proprietor of a fishing camp at Caddo Lake in Northern Louisiana and East Texas, goes out after alligators—and brings them back alive. Shooting 'gators at night with flashlights and powerful rifles is common on the lake and along Louisiana bayous, but Massey doesn't like to kill the creatures. During the past eight years he has brought in 43 large live alligators. Usually he keeps them on exhibition at his camp for a few weeks, then turns them back into the swamps. He exhibits the largest ones in carnivals and county fairs in East Texas. A few others he sells alive to Texans who kill them for their skins, which are used for boots and belts.

In 1933, Massey was credited by The Billboard, carnival and vaudeville publication, with having captured the largest American alligator ever brought in alive. It was 12 feet, four inches long. This season Massey has captured three large 'gators, ranging from 11 feet, three inches down to eight feet, four inches, and 30 baby 'gators.



The fight isn't over, even then. The alligator must be tied to the boat. This one is 11 feet, three inches long.

THOUSANDS WILL TELL you the simple way pictured above brings amazingly fast relief from the painful discomfort and sore throat accompanying colds.

Try it. Then — because any cold can lead to serious consequences — see your doctor. In all probability he will tell you to continue with the Bayer Aspirin because it acts so fast to relieve the painful discomforts of a cold. And to reduce fever.

This simple treatment, backed by scientific authority, has largely supplanted the use of strong medicines in easing cold symptoms. Perhaps the easiest, most effective way yet discovered . . . When you buy, ask for "BAYER ASPIRIN" — not just for "aspirin" alone. Get the genuine Bayer article.

She's the "Perfect Artists' Model"

Nina MacDougald luxuriates in the sunshine at a Palm Beach club where she stopped on the trip she received as the prize in the "perfect model" contest.
(International News Photo)

MISS NINA ENAMAR MacDOUGALD is in Florida. She travels with an escort of 50 men. The reason for this cavalcade's trooping about from resort to resort is that Miss MacDougald was proclaimed the "perfect artists' model" by the Society of Illustrators at their annual party in New York City recently. She won the title in competition with 20 other beautiful models. Miss MacDougald, who was born in Canada, and became a model a year ago after winning a Long Island beauty contest, is five feet eight inches tall, weighs 135 pounds and is 20 years old. She doesn't eat candy, drinks lots of tea, and likes Scotch haggis.

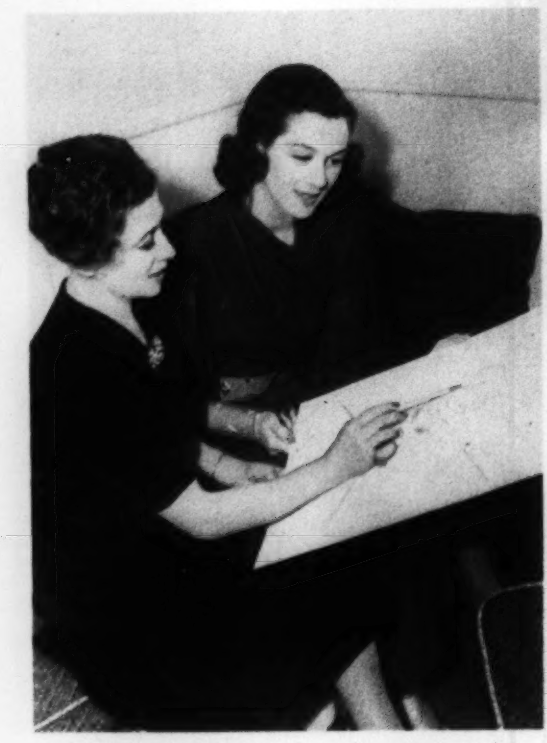
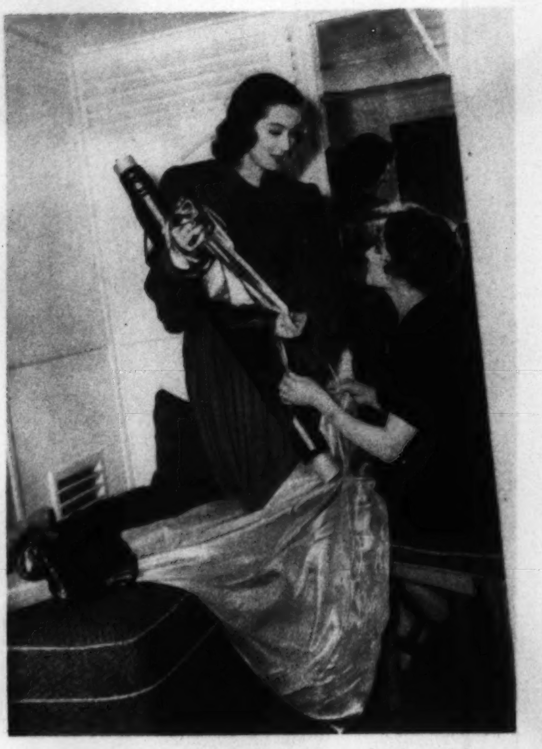
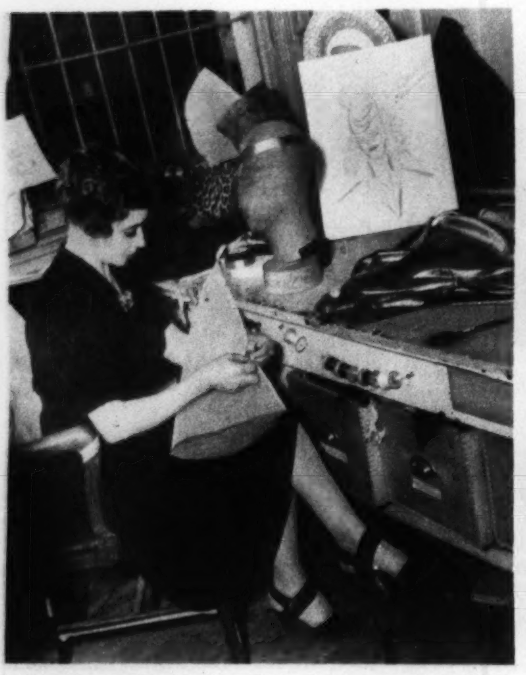
Evolution of One of Those Hats



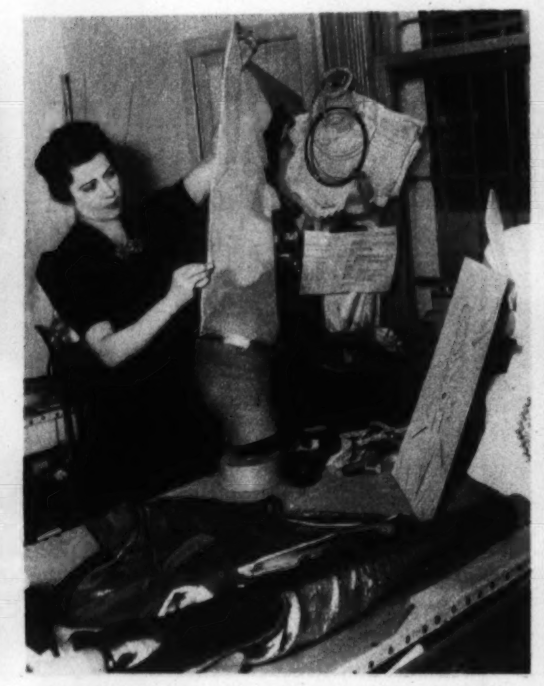
1. Madame Marthe de Beauvolers (left) designs a dinner hat for Rosalind Russell, the film actress. They go over the sketch.



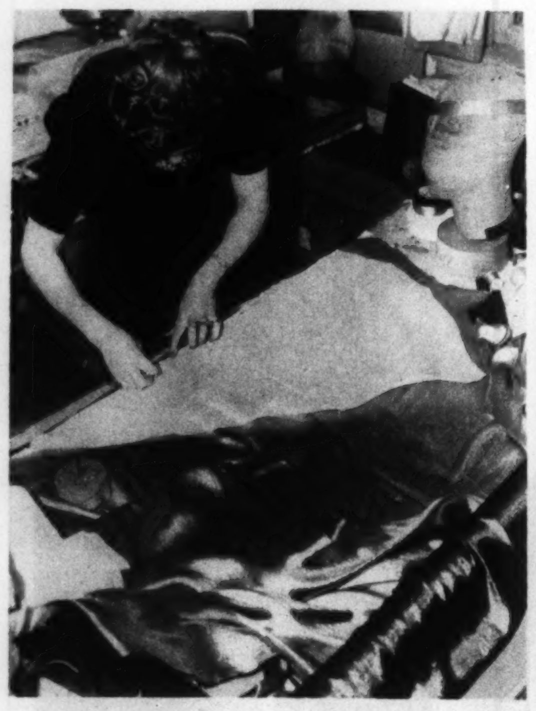
2. Miss Russell picks a rich gold lamé for the material.



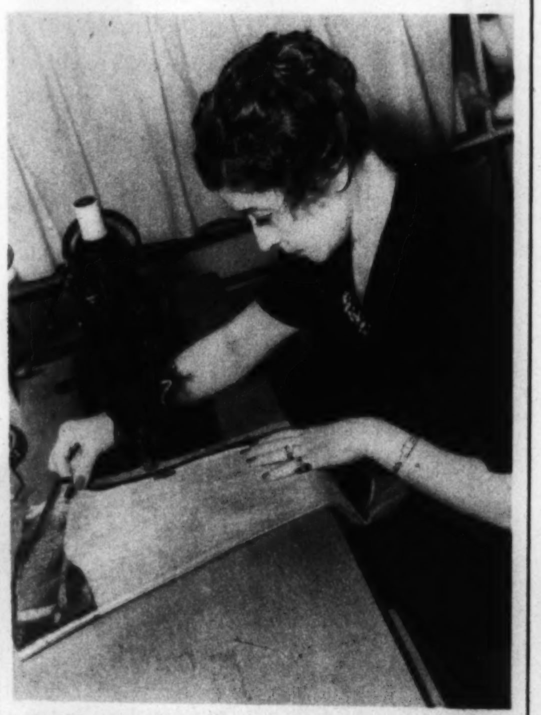
3. The tarleton foundation is sewn into a long peaked cap. . . .



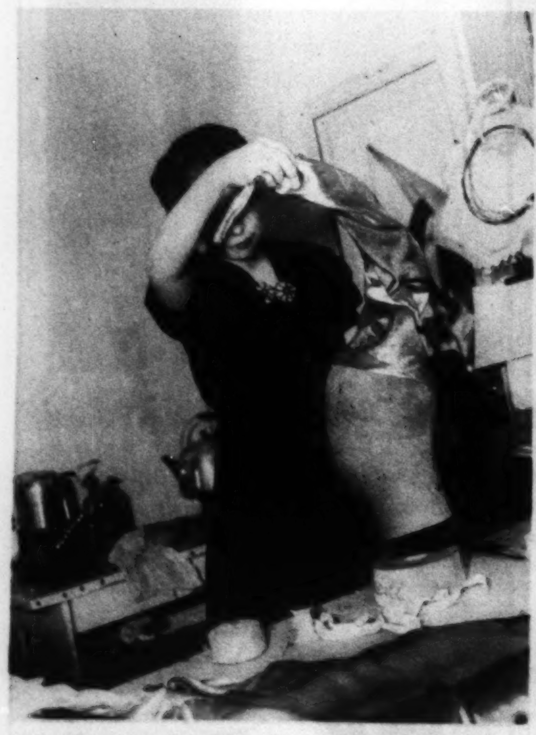
4. And pinned to a hat band the exact size of the star's head, then shaped on a model made to Miss Russell's measurements.



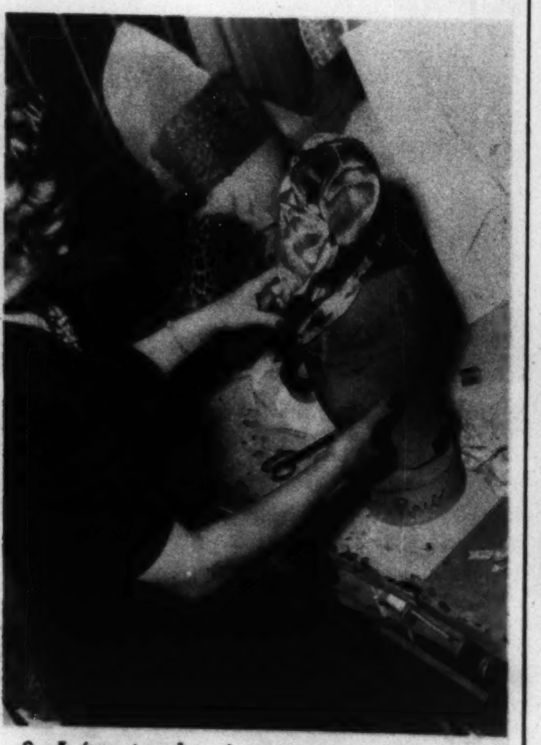
5. The material is cut from the pattern foundation.



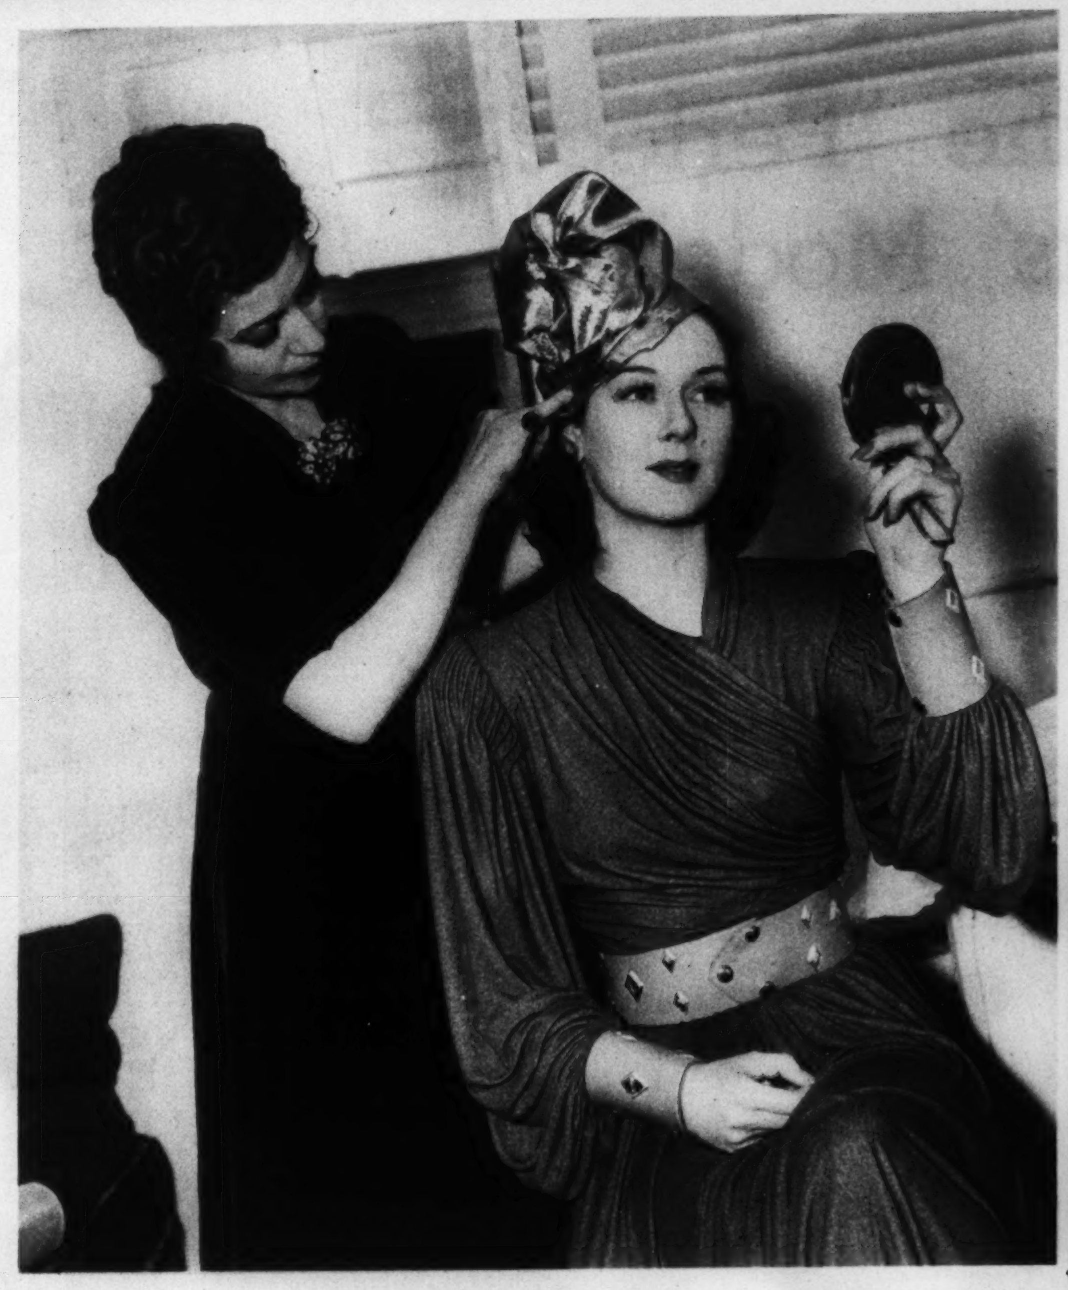
6. The machine is used only to sew up the main seam. The rest is done by hand.



7. Now the draping, directly on the model.



8. A few touches for graceful folds, then the decision as to the right place for an ornament.



9. The final result. Miss Russell will wear the evening turban in "Fast and Loose," in which she co-stars with Robert Montgomery, and it may be copied throughout the civilized world. Hollywood now rivals Paris as a birthplace of women's styles.

The Cat Catcher of Gotham

Miss Ross, at left, in 1927 as a member of the Earl Carroll's "Vanities" chorus, and above, costumed for a scene in "My Princess" in 1928.

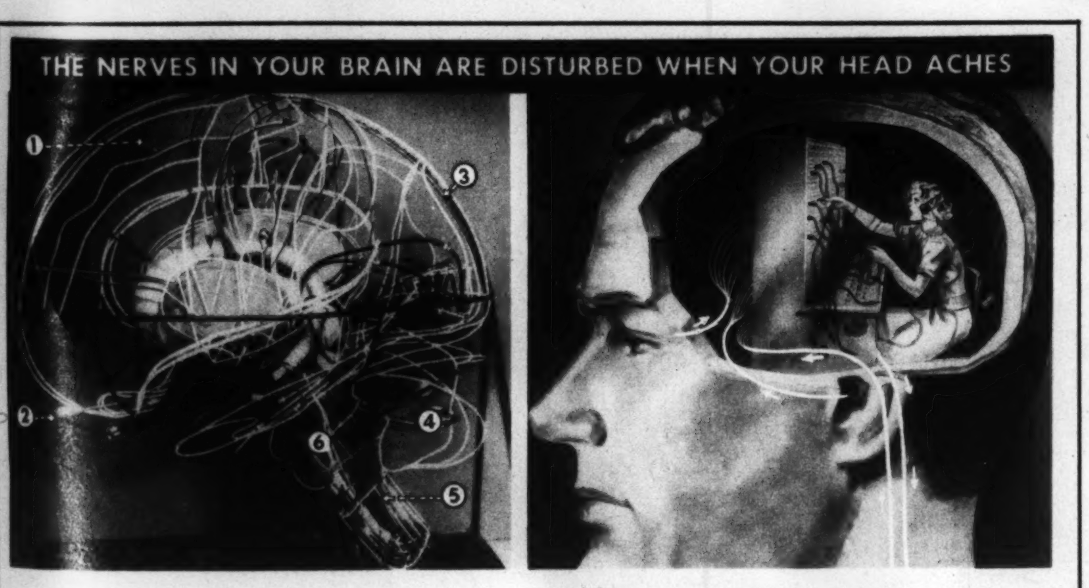
A FORMER chorus girl, Miss Rita Ross of Brooklyn, is cat catcher without portfolio to the City of New York. For nearly 20 years she has made an unpaid and unofficial occupation of catching homeless cats and turning them over to the S. P. C. A. for humane execution — because she feels sorry for them. Equipped with cages and cat trap, a flashlight, a can of salmon (for bait) and a police whistle (in case she needs help), Miss Ross searches streets, alleys, basements and back lots for feline vagrants, and will shin up a tree, climb a fence or prowl through a dark cellar after the quarry. The police tolerate her activity. Sometimes she gets bitten or scratched for her pains, but apparently she never gets discouraged at the undiminished supply of cats.

Up a tree after a fugitive. Miss Ross used to practice acrobatic dancing.

Miss Ross has captured a stray cat in a trap baited with salmon. Its next stop will be an S. P. C. A. shelter.

Ready to deliver some prisoners to the S. P. C. A., which will destroy them unless they are claimed by owners. They are not supposed to have owners.

THE NERVES IN YOUR BRAIN ARE DISTURBED WHEN YOUR HEAD ACHES



This model of the brain shows the major nerves (white lines). They control (1) speech, (2) smell, (3) vision, (4) muscular action, balance. The spinal cord (5) carries nerves to and from the lower part of the body; the Pons Varolii (6) transmits nerve impulses between spinal cord and brain.

When your head aches, your delicate nervous system is disturbed. Nerve impulses do not go out as accurately as usual. It's very much as if the "central" at a telephone switchboard became confused—failed to handle calls correctly. Business would slow down, as you do when your head aches.

HEADACHE STRAINS YOUR NERVES

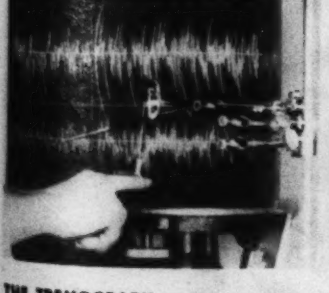
With a headache, your nervous system is disturbed. That's why headache is best treated with a special kind of remedy—made to do at least 2 important things . . . relieve pain fast—and steady your nerves. Bromo-Seltzer does both. Tests by a group of doctors have proved this fact.

HEADACHE places a great strain on your nervous system. The two pictures above show how vitally this nervestrain may affect you. Everything may slow down . . . thinking, co-ordination. You feel tense, irritable.

Take Bromo-Seltzer. It does more than relieve headache quickly—it also relieves the strain on your nerves. Leaves you steadier, calmer, more yourself.

For frequently recurring or persistent headache, see a doctor. For ordinary headaches, keep Bromo-Seltzer at home. At all drugstores — soda fountains.

How BROMO-SELTZER Calms Your NERVES



THE TREMOGRAPH measures nerve steadiness. The subject's finger is attached to a "writing arm," which he tries to guide along a straight line. The "jittery" arcs (top) were made by a headache sufferer. The arcs (bottom), made after Bromo-Seltzer, indicate steadier nerves.

SENT FOR ONLY 10¢ And Seal From Can of Ovaltine — BE ONE OF THE FIRST TO OWN ONE

Sensational! New!

A Beautiful, Simulated Gold-finish Ring with "Mystic-Eye" Concealed Inside!

HERE'S the most astonishing ring you probably ever saw—beautiful, thrilling, mysterious!

At first glance, it looks like one of those heavy gold seal rings you see in jewelry stores—with a beautiful military spread-eagle design embossed on the "face" of it like an official coat of arms.

But the surprising thing about this wonderful ring is the fact that it has a "Mystic-Eye" concealed in a little secret chamber just below the coat of arms! A "Mystic-Eye" that enables you to see what's going on behind your back without turning your head. It's like "having eyes in the back of your head"—more fun than a barrel of monkeys!

TO GET YOUR RING: — Just print your name and address plainly in the coupon at the right. Then send it in, together with ten cents and the thin foil seal you find beneath the lid of a can of Ovaltine. And then, the postman will bring your ring post-paid, for you to wear and keep for your very own!

This beautiful "Mystic-Eye" Detective Ring is made of genuine Victory metal with simulated GOLD FINISH by one of the largest manufacturing jewelers in the country. FITS ANY FINGER AUTOMATICALLY!

Comes packed with special leaflet that explains exactly how it works and tells all the interesting and exciting things you can do with this wonderful ring!

Remember, this offer is strictly limited—and probably will never be repeated. So don't delay until it's too late. Fill out the coupon now! Mail it in today! You'll be glad you did.

MOTHERS! When you start giving your child Ovaltine, you are following the new "protecting food-drink" idea that is being so widely adopted today. It is a plan that thousands of mothers are following religiously, just as they give things like orange juice—to help safeguard their children's health.

Great numbers who do this are reporting remarkable results in terms of better appetite, rapid gains in weight and increased nerve poise.

Perhaps you're asking, "What is meant by a 'protecting food-drink'? What can Ovaltine do for my child?"

The answer is simple. For example, when a child is tired, Ovaltine provides quick-acting energy in a form that gets into the blood stream very rapidly. And it aids in the digestion of starches and milk, which comprise such a large part of a child's diet. Thus lightening the digestive burden.

In addition, Ovaltine is high in nutritive value—easy to digest. And supplies the important "protective" Vitamins A, B, D and G—Calcium, Phosphorus, Iron and high-quality Proteins.

So—in the interest of your child's health—let him start drinking Ovaltine today. At all grocery and drug stores.

WHAT MAKES IT WORK?

NOT Radio . . . NOT Electricity . . . NOT Magnetism! Works on the same principle as the periscopes used on submarines during the War. All you do is hold it up to your eye, squint into the "Mystic-Eye" opening—and Presto! You can see what's going on behind your back without turning your head!
